"Hello Mr. Exhibitor"

"GOODBYE MR. CHIPS" opens at the Astor, N. Y. on May 16th launching this most talked about attraction in the same showmanship manner which gave nationwide fame to "Pygmalion" (still S.R.O. as it concludes a sensational 6-month run at the Astor.)

While the fame of "GOODBYE MR. CHIPS" (Robert Donat, Greer Garson) spreads throughout the nation, M-G-M exhibitors will say hello to hit after hit. For instance:

Hold-overs are mounting as the "HARDYS RIDE HIGH"! "LUCKY NIGHT" (Myrna Loy, Robert Taylor) starts off with happy-go-lucky crowds everywhere. "IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD" (Claudette Colbert, James Stewart) rolled preview audience in the aisles. It's socko at the b. o. "CALLING DR. KILDARE" (Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore) thrills opening engagements and establishes Dr. Kildare as another Hardy series. And that's just a few in coming weeks!

Goodbye Mr. Exhibitor, you're in the chips as usual with Mr. Leo.

Applause... as never before

EVERY INCH A GREAT MOTION PICTURE. It would be memorable for its pictorial splendor alone; for its unerring revitalizing of the past or for its eloquent relating of romance and high tragedy. Never have I seen vivid portrayals so brilliantly balanced in a film. Rarely have I seen so magical a blend of consummate direction, production and photography. To my mind it is a screen masterpiece, as challenging as it is entertaining—a compound of rare courage and artistry.

—HOWARD BARNES in the N Y Herald-Tribune

* * * *

EVERYONE SHOULD SEE 'JUAREZ'. A thrilling and exciting picture. 'Juarez' is as intelligent in attitude as it is rousing in melodrama. It brought a new viewpoint to the Broadway screen, and delivered a graceful bow in the direction of movie fans by addressing them as adults rather than nincompoops. It delivers a saucy and timely blow to European political philosophy and it rings with a resounding propaganda for solid democracy. Warner Bros. have a noble honor role of great pictures which combine drama with a social message. Among them were 'I'm a Fugitive', 'Zola,' 'The Story of Louis Pasteur.' 'Juarez' is greater than these.

—BLAND JOHANESON in the N. Y. Daily Mirror

WARNER BROS. DESERVE AN AMERICAN PUBLIC VOTE OF THANKS. The picture is probably the bravest undertaking in the history of Hollywood. For once a motion picture speaks out for the down-trodden, for the poor, and for the democracy which is their hope. 'Juarez' brought the best resources of the Warner studios to work. When Muni first turns to face the camera an audience cannot fail to applaud. In a year there will be ten or fifteen pictures produced which have perfection of detail, but only one 'Juarez'!

THE SPEED-UP

INTER-ACTION between the media of expression grows with increasing rapidity, increasing complexity. When the motion picture arrived it was upon a world where the arts had been static in their structure for centuries. Since the invention of the printing press there had been no new way of saying things. Also the arts and industry were far apart.

The motion picture exerted, and continues to exert, important influence on the stage, the printed word and even the very processes of public thought. Motion pictures achieved circulations to audiences to be counted in the millions where publications in type could number only thousands.

Now radio has risen as a conveyor of both entertainment and information simultaneously serving the millions. When the big news stirs the world radio is, today, the dominant medium of news distribution. Even the fast daily press is reduced to functions of confirmation and comment, for many readers. Makers of news tend to go on the air and direct to the people without the intervention of reporters and editors. Television is striving mightily to do as much for their living images, too.

These arts and media of arts are also industries, coalitions in which art and industry react upon each other. They get all of their authority and success by serving the majority with what it wants, or some approximation thereof.

The one over-all characteristic of the development, which has been under way ever since technology and art met on the screen, is the service of larger audiences in less time. It is the speed-up.

This speed-up is to be found variously in all consumer services, both in merchandising methods and transport.

THE once much discussed and projected processes of decentralization are not manifest. In truth we are being webbed more and more closely together. The trend is toward larger units, broader routines.

There is something more than symbolism in the fact that a single master clock, ruled by star time, controls the cycle pulse of all the dynamos in the public utility powerhouses of the East, and incidentally ruling even the synchronized motors in your projection room.

There is apparent relation to this general process in some of the aspects of today's motion picture merchandising. There's a speed-up process now calculated to sell the more important productions simultaneously to all the consumers. It finds expression in large use of national publications and as a spectacular detail what might be called the "locus preview."

THE tendency of this all-over method of advertising is to reduce the function of local theatre copy to directory purposes, a telling of where to buy rather than what to buy.

Probably the most serious weakness of the national media coverage is that its message to buy can not be accurately timed with the local availability of the product, so the buying impulse is open to invasion by other and intervening appeals.

The new school of previewing at the geographical point of story origin, as with "The Buccaneer," "Union Pacific," "Dodge City," "Young Mr. Lincoln," is a device for making the picture a national story, extending to the publicity the same scope and simultaneousness as pertains to the advertising

Just incidentally the process also tends to bring Hollywood another step nearer dominance. Showmanship comes over the mountains to perform in feats of promotion for the populace, and that is Distribution's territory.

SILVER

BECAUSE this photographic industry is entirely dependent upon the reaction of silver salts to impinging rays of light, some aspects of the state of that metal are of interest.

There is too much silver in the world for the health of its status in politics, finance and industry. It is being made the subject of vast study, expensive manipulation and a lot of argument.

As long ago as June 30 last it was calculated by the Chemical Bank and Trust Company of New York that the United States Treasury held approximately one-seventh of all the silver the world had produced since Columbus discovered the West Indies. The silver is of no use to the government and could not be sold without causing a collapse of world prices. Buying still goes on under the silver purchase act, chiefly to the benefit of the Mexico which expropriates American property.

In industry there's research to see if silver plating cannot be made available to improve cans for tomatoes.

Meanwhile, if the world should last that long, we might use it up for sensitizing film.

WE got a sudden warming flush of community spirit the other day with the reading of a piece in the local papers about how New York's police commissioner called in his men and instructed them to be friendly, cordial and indulgent toward the out-of-town visitors of the World's Fair period. In point of fact, the typical character of the New York policeman is such as to make instructions of the kind hardly necessary. But it is nice to have it official. It is an expression akin to Commercial club greetings in lesser towns where the boosters burgeon. Any day now we expect to see a sign over Grand Central saying: "Watch New York Grow."

EXPLOITATION brings some strange objects to the editor's desk, monkey wrenches and perfumes, orchids and hand-painted turtles, baby alligators and gold-plated railroad spikes. That accounts for a certain exotic touch in our niche in the Silvermine Valley up in Connecticut. There's a black oak there with two cocoanuts on it. One came to remind us of Bobby Breen in "Hawaii Calls," and the other was in behalf of the South Sea suggestions in "Waikiki Wedding." They are both bird houses now, occupied respectively by pairs of wrens and bluebirds. It's the Hollywood touch.

This Week

Going to Court

The Federal Department of Justice threat to file a minimum of ten anti-trust suits in equity in various sections of the country to break up what it claims are monopolistic practices by large independent circuits, implemented by the filing last Friday in Oklahoma of the first of the actions, was explained in detail this week by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general. It was expected that additional suits would be filed rapidly and that the next would be on the Pacific coast where Department of Justice agents have been investigating for two years. Announcement of the new policy, also, tended to eliminate speculation on the possible settlement of the present New York action by consent decree.

The new campaign is outlined on page 15.

Buying Pool

A mass meeting of Oklahoma independent exhibitors to form a buying pool for product to meet the buying power of the large circuits, will be held Tuesday in Oklahoma City at the municipal auditorium. George Sumner is "liaison man" for the group.

Despite the filing of a suit last week by the federal government against Griffith Amusement Company in Oklahoma City federal court, the independent exhibitors interested in the pool are going ahead with their plans. Organization of the pool is said to be attributed to circuit "aggressions" in the territory.

Every independent exhibitor in the state has been invited.

Foreign Increase

RKO Radio's foreign business has increased 40 per cent since January, Phil Reisman, foreign sales manager, said in New York this week after returning from a routine inspection tour of Europe. Mr. Reisman, however, was pessimistic of future conditions because of the huge expenditures for armaments in all European countries which, he said, must be paid eventually. He expects additional monetary restrictions on American companies operating in Europe.

Mr. Reisman said the company's operations in Spain were in statu quo at the moment but that a representative of the company, possibly Reginald Armour, would shortly look over the situation there. The company operated in Spain throughout the Spanish War and its immediate concern now is to determine under what conditions it can continue with General Francisco Franco's regime.

He said that RKO's business in China is experiencing considerable improvement, which he felt was due partly to the concentration of troops in the cities.

June Convention

Exhibitor opinion in bulk on the trade practice proposals put forward by distributors will be the primary object of the Allied States Association annual convention which will meet in Minneapolis on June 13. To this end leaders of the exhibitor organization have invited representatives of every exhibitor group, affiliated or unaffiliated, as well as distribution executives to attend. Lawyers for the distributors, meanwhile, are working on the trade practice program.

Nova Scotia Bill

The situation in connection with passage by the Novia Scotia Legislature of the bill providing for control of film exchanges through a license system was discussed this week by Colonel John Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada, and Federal Government authorities in Ottawa.

One provision of the act, which is to amend the Theatres, Cinematographs and Amusements Acts, is that it is not to come into force until "such day as the Governor in Council orders and proclaims by proclamation." Accordingly, the film distributors are continuing their fight against the legislative proposals.

Fair Competition

What New York exhibitors feared, has happened: a falling off of business, especially in neighborhood theatres, following the opening of the New York World's Fair, on Sunday. The lessons learned from the Chicago and San Francisco Fairs, the latter still on, cause some optimism, however. The lull is expected to last about two months, after which business in neighborhood houses should approximate normal. The center-of-town theatres in Chicago benefited all through that city's Fair.

Loew's, Cocalis and the Brandt circuits in New York reported business off following the Fair's opening. Century Circuit reported business fair, while RKO had no complaints.

Broadway legitimate business, too, have not apparently been helped by the Fair, with three shows closing this weekend.

Advertising Outlay

More than $1,500,000,000 was spent in the United States for general advertising in 1938, while from $10,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000 was spent for personal salesmanship, L. D. H. Weld, director of research for McCann-Erickson, advertising agency, told the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington Tuesday. If it had not been for advertising, Mr. Weld said, "many more billions would have had to be spent on personal salesmanship to accomplish the same results in general business distribution."

He estimated that the sum spent for advertising in 1938 was about 4.2 per cent of total retail sales and 2.4 per cent of the national income.

The total generally accepted as the annual advertising expenditure by the entire motion picture business is $100,000,000, including accessories.

British Tax Certain

Explaining the provisions in the new British budget for additional taxes on the film industry, particularly the American section, Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, on Tuesday indicated that the levies as stipulated in the draft read in the House of Commons last week stood little chance of alteration. The Chancellor, answering questions brought up in the House, said his proposal was sound in principle but that adjustments might be necessary. He pointed out that total box office receipts in Great Britain are between $225,000,000 and $250,000,000 yearly and said he did not think that the $3,000,000 to be produced by the excise duty proposed would produce a "revolution." He agreed that some modification in the proposed customs duty possibly is needed, probably on foreign films for specialized showings. The budget draft proposed increased taxes on imported blank stock and prints and on films produced in England.

Television Bows

Television in America, about three years behind television in England, in advent if not in technique, made its public bow Sunday at the opening of the New York World's Fair over the telecasting system of the National Broadcasting Company; and even as it did so, a British business man and a staff of British engineers demonstrated in a small room in the Times Square district, the reception of the Fair telecast on a British set, the Baird. The business man was Ian Cremieu-Javal, commercial director of Baird Television, of England, who had arrived in New York Friday, and had set up apparatus in the Gaumont British offices in New York. He hopes to have Baird theatre television (large screen) in several Broadway district theatres, soon.

Captain George Wald, army officer and president of the Wald Radio and Television Laboratories, on Wednesday before the television committee of the Federal Communications Commission, suggested a delay in the formation of regular television standards because, he said, of two major obstacles in present systems: the horizontal limitations, which do not permit service to all communities, and hazards, especially in the home, of high voltage use.

Total net profits of $14,200,721 were reported this week by film companies. Loew's listed $7,268,847 for 28 weeks; Paramount, $4,105,675, for 52 weeks; Twentieth Century-Fox, $1,224,250, for 13 weeks; RKO, $18,604, for 52 weeks, and General Theatres Equipment, $145,544, for 13 weeks.

The detailed statements, and other motion picture financial news of the week—including an SEC report on film stock tradings, appear on page 27.

Triple Fire

The Kinematograph Renters Society, representative of American producers in England, is opposed to higher quotas and fears that U. S. interests are being saddled with the responsibility of establishing a new British production industry under the Films Act. The Association of Cine Technicians wants a higher quota but looks approvingly or at least tolerantly on the KRS suggestion of establishment of a films bank or finance corporation. Joining the two groups in attacking the Films Act, Simon Rowson, statistician, points to a decline of 20 per cent in the value of production in the past year, though he hastens to add that there was an "unmistakable improvement in quality."

Aubrey Flanagan's article is on page 53.

Labor Impasse

The Screen Writers' Guild, after rejecting producer proposals, has directed its bargaining committee to have National Labor Relations Board hearings reconvened; the Screen Actors' Guild has served an injunction on its Class B officers preventing them from acting to rectify an alleged illegal election of new Class B members, and a mistrial has been declared in the counter suits between the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees and Studio Technicians Local 37.

Accounts of these and other labor events are on page 30.

30 from Monogram

Sixth of the eleven large distributors to hold annual sales conventions, Monogram Pictures, in Chicago, this week, announced 30 features, 16 westerns and eight western reissues for 1939-'40, four more pictures than this year.

The titles and talent assignments made to date, with details of the convention, appear on page 46.

Taxes and Legislation

Legislative moves affecting the industry were few and varied this week. Outstanding were new taxation measures in Florida, New York, Wisconsin and Missouri. The showing of Sunday films received attention in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maine and Massachusetts.

An account of the week's legislative moves is on page 50.

Mechanical Songs

The lengthy negotiations between songwriters and song publishers will be ended on June 1st when the Song Writers' Protective Association, representing more than 600 popular songwriters, will take over all mechanical rights to their tunes. This right, which has been a bone of contention between the publishers and composers, will give the songwriters complete control over all recordings, transcriptions and synchronizations of their compositions, amounting to a revenue of more than $1,000,000 annually, according to the SPA.

All contracts entered into after June 1st between songwriters and publishers will be subject to this assignment, which will be in force for two years. It is likely, as a result of this assignment, that the music publishers will endeavor to negotiate a new standard minimum contract with the songwriters, says the SPA.

The SPA likewise expects to have issued by May 15th a circular reprinting three or four representative contracts now being used by several of the large music publishing firms, which the songwriters deem unfair.

The annual meeting of the SPA is expected to take place in New York in early June.

Three Conventions

With the opening of sales conventions on Monday by Columbia in Atlantic City and United Artists in Hollywood, the total meetings for discussion of 1939-40 product and plans will be brought to eight. Monogram delegates were meeting this week in Chicago. RKO and Paramount have announced plans for sessions in June.

The meetings are programmed in advance on page 44.

Eyes South

Concentrated attention to the South American countries, their possibilities as markets for United States products and their status in the "good neighbor" axis, has resulted in emphasis on a study of methods of communication, principally motion pictures and radio. In the field of radio proposals were revived this week in Washington for the establishment of a Government operated short wave station to broadcast American news and programs to South American peoples. Private broadcasting companies, meanwhile, have been doing excellent work in broadcasting a stream of programs more than sufficient to counteract the radio efforts of Germany, Italy and Japan to spread propaganda.

The Washington proposals and a detailed study of present program extent and content are on page 17.

A BANQUET attended by 800 members and guests concluded the fifth annual convention of the Variety Clubs of America last weekend at the Book Cadillac Hotel in Detroit, a celebration which fully lived up to the carnival spirit perpetuated in the clubs' establishment. UNION PACIFIC

TIME marched backward in Omaha last week to the early days of 1869, the date of the completion of the Union Pacific transcontinental railroad. Taking its cue from that event the celebration was called "Golden Spike Days," a four-day fete culminating in the premiere in three Omaha theatres of Paramount's "Union Pacific."

According to press reports, 250,000 out-of-town visitors took part. The fronts of Main Street stores were remodeled to represent the town in its infancy, and something like 10,000 citizens garbed themselves in the costumes of those early days, with swallow tail coats, top hats, leather boots and whiskers that waved in the breezes like the wheat fields of Oklahoma. Ox teams pulling covered wagons were in evidence along the principal streets, and the Sioux and other tribes of Indians pitched their tepees on the court house lawn.

U. S. EYES 6 CENTERS FOR CIRCUIT 'MONOPOLY' SUITS

Washington Hears California, Wisconsin, Minnesota, New England, New York and Detroit Are Under Scrutiny

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

The Pacific Coast, Wisconsin and Minnesota, the Detroit territory, New York and New England are said in Washington to be now under the close scrutiny of the Department of Justice in connection with the Department's publicly announced intention of filing a long series of local anti-trust suits to break up circuits claimed to be operating monopolistically.

Enunciating a policy that disintegration of the major film companies, as sought in the pending New York trust suit, must be accompanied by dissolution of theatre circuits which control the situation in their respective areas, whether or not affiliated with producers, in order that, when exhibition is divorced from distribution, the producers may have a "competitive market of truly independent theatres," the Department of Justice last Friday brought the first of the series of suits under which all big units in the industry will be broken down.

First Suit in Oklahoma

Filing of the suit in Oklahoma district court was the first step of Thurman Arnold, U. S. assistant attorney general, to carry out his plan to widen the antitrust campaign against the picture industry, which he announced last month would involve at least ten suits.

It is anticipated in Washington that the Government will file additional cases rapidly, probably bringing its next on the Pacific Coast where for some two years agents have been investigating the Southern California situation. Within the past few weeks, that investigation has been completed and reports are now under study by Department officials, who may base a suit on allegations of violation of the old Fox-West Coast consent decree.

With Wisconsin, Minnesota, Detroit, New York and New England also said to be under scrutiny of the Justice Department, Mr. Arnold charges "there are many chains of theatres in the United States whose situation is similar." The first proceeding was brought in Oklahoma, he explained, simply because the investigation there happened to be completed first.

Ask Circuits Be Dissolved

The Oklahoma suit, involving the Griffith, Consolidated and Westex unaffiliated Circuits operating 158 theatres in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, also naming all of the major producing companies, will set the pattern for the subsequent "local" cases. Pending for a long time in Oklahoma is the independent Momand civil action for $4,500,000 damages against the same defendants.

The Department asks that the four circuits be dissolved and their properties re-arranged under separate and independent corporations in such a manner as to create competitive conditions and prevent further violations of the Sherman Act; seeks injunctive relief directing that the practices which resulted in the alleged monopoly control and its oppressive exercise be enjoined; seeks an injunction restraining the chains from jointly and collectively negotiating contracts with the major distributors for the licensing of features; seeks to enjoin the producers from seeking to license pictures except on a local, competitive basis, and asks an injunction against the acquisition of additional theatres or financial interests therein by the chains.

In a formal statement explaining the reasons which actuated the Department and the purposes of its action, Mr. Arnold declared "this suit is an essential complement to the pending equity suit in New York against the major motion picture producers and distributors.

"That proceeding seeks among other things to divest the major producing companies of ownership and control of the motion picture theatres which exhibit their products," he said.

"The principal grounds on which that action is based are the following: (1) Independently owned theatres are being driven out of business; (2) the construction and operation of new theatres is handicapped because any new enterprise is subject to the arbitrary control of a present existing monopoly; (3) new or independent enterprise in the production of pictures is handicapped in the same way because the existing combination substantially control the most important theatre outlets on a nation-wide scale; (4) independently owned theatres are so narrowly limited in the choice of films that they cannot by competition and experimentation suit the particular tastes of their communities.

"These objectives cannot be attained so long as there exist chains of theatres exercising monopoly power in various sections of the country, even if the affiliation beteen such chains and the major companies is broken," the anti-

Allied Says U. S. Will Dissolve Both Independent and Major "Monopolies"

The Government's new Oklahoma trust suit, second in importance only to the New York suit, "furnishes an effective answer to the propaganda being fed the exhibitors by the 'Big Eight' and its thinly disguised agents to the effect that theatre divorcement and enactment of the Neely bill will expose independent exhibitors to the ruthless competition of allegedly independent chains such as Griffith, Schine, Blank, Brandt, and so on," it was declared last Friday by Abram F. Myers, counsel for Allied, in reviewing the Department of Justice petition at Washington.

"That answer is: Monopolistic practices will not be tolerated by the United States Government whether practiced by the 'Big Eight,' so-called independent chains, co-operative buying combines, or other interests. There are many who should note well this attitude on the part of the Government."

It was pointed out by Mr. Myers that many of the reforms sought by the Government in its suit have long been advocated by Allied, including the right to buy and, he said, at least the full number of ten suits which the department has intimated it would bring will be necessary to "reach all local monopolies and abuses of power not included in the main proceeding now pending in New York."

"Many observers are convinced that the job will not be completed until there has been a thorough airing of the manifold activities of the Hays Association," he continued. "Chief points of interest are efforts of that association to control public and exhibitor opinion by widespread propaganda, and its lobbying activities. Astonishment has been expressed at the testimony at the Neely bill hearings concerning the elaborate plans for carrying the association's propaganda into the churches, the schools and the homes. It is possible that a movement for a thoroughgoing investigation of the MPPDA will be launched next fall."

Allied, Mr. Myers said, "has been hoping that those in ultimate authority in the 'Big Eight' would see the need of voluntarily abandoning the monopolistic practices which are the targets of so many suits by the Government and by injured exhibitors and which are under the fire of so many religious, educational and welfare organizations," but thus far no satisfactory agreement has been developed.

Mr. Myers saw as significant in the new Oklahoma suit the Government's intention of insuring that the combination, once broken, is not reestablished, citing the Government's petition for the court's retention of jurisdiction to pass on future theatre acquisitions by the Griffith circuit and the other circuit defendants.

In questioning the "exclusive privileges" accorded the circuits over independent rivals, Mr. Myers asked, "Are the independent chains able to command these special favors because of their massed buying power or have the 'Big Eight' built them up by special privileges with the idea of eventually taking them over?"

ECONOMIC COMMITTEE DELAYS PROBE

trust division head continued. "If the major producers are deprived of control over local theatres, they must have for themselves a competitive market of truly independent theatres in which to distribute their product. They must not be at the mercy of local monopolies which control the market in particular areas. To leave the chain theatres in control of the market after divestiture by the major companies would be simply to substitute a number of local monopolies for the national monopoly which is now charged to exist. Such control would be equally disastrous to independent theatre owners. Local monopoly control may be quite as effective in stifling competition as national monopoly control and at the same time be more disorderly. It would also put the producers, who had divested themselves of their theatres, at the mercy of the local monopoly."

Attention on Product

The policy of the Department of Justice, Mr. Arnold declared, is to focus its actions upon the distribution of a product rather than on particular individuals, because there are usually a number of groups restraining trade at various stages in production or distribution from the raw materials to final sale and constructive enforcement of the antitrust laws must be aimed to free those channels of trade at every stage. "Many antitrust violations are the result of defensive combinations against aggressive tactics of others," he said. "The moving picture situation contains many examples of this type of combination. All must be taken up together to the end that independent theatres, independent producers and consumers may have the benefit of real competitive conditions in the industry."

Because of the fact that restoration of competitive conditions may require a re-arrangement of corporate structures and ownership which can only be done by civil decree, Mr. Arnold explained, the department decided upon an equity proceeding rather than a criminal prosecution. A further reason for instituting equity proceedings, he said, was announced last July, when the New York case was filed. At that time, the Department explained that in the course of its study of the film industry it had attempted, through the voluntary cooperation of the major producers, to adjust the difficulties of independent exhibitors and that, as a result, it was felt it would be inequitable to institute criminal proceedings.

Further clarifying the Department's general attitude towards "big business," and the trust laws, Mr. Arnold on Monday, in Washington, told the mid year meeting of the American Trade Association Executives that "the anti-trust division has no right to direct business as to what practices it must adopt," but "there is a pressing need of precedent to informing particular industries as to what practices they may do."

"The rule of reason, however, should apply to any rigid enforcement of the trust laws," observed Mr. Arnold, but later, the Department of Justice offices, in informal discussion, said that this need not necessarily apply to the film business.

The New York Phase

With the starting of the Department's "localized" anti-trust suit campaign against the and local circuits, New York observers this week saw little chance, if any, of a consent decree settling the pending New York suit, which, basically, seeks divorcement of the majors' circuit holdings, the breaking up of the Hollywood "talent pool," and the virtual establishment of new trade practices.

One obstacle to such an agreement, it was pointed out, is the fact that a consent decree might be followed by a flood of anti-trust suits by independent exhibitors against producers and distributors. In each instance, triple damages could be sought.

BILLBOARD "TRUST" INQUIRY STARTS

Investigation by the Department of Justice into allegedly unfair and monopolistic practices of large West Coast outdoor advertisers is under way, according to Assistant Attorney General Thurman S. Arnold. Theatres, of course, are large users of billboard space.

Suits could be encouraged by the fact that defendants, in entering into a consent decree, would agree to discontinue certain practices which might then be construed as violating anti-trust laws.

Most of the discussion of a possible consent decree has originated with the Government. Industry attorneys have stated emphatically that they would not discuss a consent decree which was conditioned upon either theatre divorcement or admission of violations of the anti-trust laws through business practices which have been in vogue in the industry.

Bills of particulars in response to demands by Columbia Pictures and United Artists Corporation and pursuant to decisions by Federal Judge Bondy, will probably not be filed until Judge Bondy rules on the application of the government, which was to be argued in New York on Friday, to dispense with the naming of witnesses under Item 8 of the demand.

The government wishes to avoid making similar new applications in reference to these bills of particulars.

Bill of Particulars Filed

In its bill of particulars filed last Thursday in answer to petitions of the six other majors, the Government, in a 33-page document, failed to describe one specific act on the part of the defendants in violation of the trust laws as cited in the original complaint, the Government admitting that it did not know these details.

In connection with its attack of the Hollywood "talent pool," the Government did, however, provide a list of some stars under joint contract. This was evidence, the bill stated, of a system of edging independent producers out of the services of the best talent.

Along general lines, the bill stated that Paramount, Loew's, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners, divided the exhibition field and extended preference to each other in each other's territory. The Government also cited the "benefits" of "split weeks," beneficial contracts, and such, again, all mentioned in a general manner.

The majors, it is understood, have assigned their booking and accounting departments to making surveys in the field for evidence to be used in the trial of the new suit, to counteract Government evidence obtained in the field.

Investigation of charges of monopolistic conditions in the motion picture industry by the Temporary National Economic Committee may be held up until after a lower-court decision, at least, is reached in the Department of Justice suit in New York.

Announcement by Chairman O'Mahoney this week of the committee's plans for the remainder of the current session show that no consideration will be given motion pictures before the investigation recesses for the summer in July.

With no possibility of a film inquiry before next fall, it is seen in Washington as probable that the committee will hold up its study, which will cover, generally, the same points as are involved in the New York suit, until after the trial.

It is pointed out that if the New York court renders a decision giving the Government all it asks, there will be no need for the TNEC to go into the situation. If the Department of Justice loses its case entirely, or if it gets only part of what it seeks, the committee can go into the subject with a view to recommending legislation to bring about the reforms sought by the Government.

Hollywood Films For Latin-America

Warner Brothers feel it is not good business to distribute anything except their Hollywood product in Latin-America, and consequently will not make any Spanish language pictures, Karl MacDonald, supervisor for Latin-America, said this week in New York after a four months' trip.

"It is not profitable to handle outside Spanish language films in that market," Mr. MacDonald said. "After the percentages and expenses are deducted, there is little left. We would much rather get our Hollywood pictures shown and get some money to send to Hollywood to recoup negative costs."

Mr. MacDonald said that for seven years the company had been developing the Latin-American market and had built it up to a point where it is a good one, though some ground had been lost in Argentina because of the demand for Spanish language films.

Blocked currency is not a problem except in Chile and Brazil, and will be straightened out in Brazil through large credits recently negotiated through the United States Government, he added.

"The less said about how profitable Latin-America is for American companies the better," Mr. MacDonald said. "Talk of this kind will lead to new taxes and restrictions. The tax problem is serious. In Panama alone there are 17 different kinds of taxes."

Warners will distribute 36 films in Latin America, with plans made for early release of "Juarez," "Dodge City," "Dark Victory" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

Mr. MacDonald held sales meetings in Buenos Aires. Rio de Janeiro, Santiago, Lima and Panama. The company has 33 branches and agencies in the territory. The Warner exchange in Concepcion, Chile, was destroyed in the earthquake last winter but will be rebuilt.

Kenneth M. Young was elected president of Pathe Film Corporation; T. P. Loach reelected vice-president and treasurer, and W. M. Malone reelected secretary, at the first meeting of the new board of directors, last week.

U.S., "AXIS" IN SHORT WAVE "WAR" FOR LATIN-AMERICA

Entertainment and News Broadcasts Combat Totalitarians' Distortions and Lampooning of U. S. Government Officials

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

An economic "war" for command of Latin-American attention is being waged between the totalitarian states and the democracies, by short-wave radio.

With an aim toward weakening the prestige of the United States south of the Panama Canal, Germany and Italy have been flooding the Latin-American countries with radio propaganda, part of a tri-headed program of radio, motion picture and newspaper "news" services portraying in glowing terms the virtues of totalitarianism, distorting events in the United States and lampooning President Roosevelt and other high U. S. Government officials.

And Japan and Spain

In alliance with the two European states is Japan which, however, is working in more devious Oriental ways to regain in South America the export trade it has lost in the United States as a result of resentment to its efforts to turn China into a vassal state. And possibly in the near future, with the return of more normal conditions following several years of civil war, the Franco government in Spain, its victory due largely to the aid given by Germany and Italy, may reestablish its short-wave broadcasting system and aim, too, at Latin-America, which, with the exception of Brazil, is tied closely to it by culture and language.

At the State Department in Washington, officials long have been watching the dictatorships' efforts to win South American friendship, which carries with it concrete benefits in the way of purchases of German and Italian goods and possibly a supply of needed foodstuffs and raw material in the event of war.

Into the Picture

Until quite recently, the United States did little to offset the flood of propaganda which was poured into South America, and it was only the ineptitude of Germany and Italy that prevented them from gaining a much stronger foothold, according to Washington observers. But with the arrogance of pre-war days, Germany attempted to dictate in one or two instances to Latin-American governments which were less willing to go its way than it had expected, and news of those "incidents" spread throughout South America and was heeded.

More than a year ago, however, the United States felt it was time to get into the Latin-American picture, and President Roosevelt released to private operators (NBC and CBS) frequencies which had been set aside for short-wave broadcasting to the southern republics.

GOEBBELS ATTACKS AMERICAN CULTURE

The occasion of the awarding of "German National Day" prizes for motion picture and literary arts achievements was made the forum for an attack on American culture by German Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels, in Berlin, on Monday, German May Day. The film prize was given to Karl Froehlich, director of "Heimat," which has been shown in America. Dr. Goebbels described American (democratic) culture in part as follows:

"A mixture of stench, of poverty, and of demi-monde perfume, the effect of which is nauseating to us."

All theatres in Greater Germany were forced to close on Monday, for the national May Day celebration, and all employees were required to parade. That evening, the theatres were permitted to reopen.

Proposals for establishment of a Government station to develop more friendly relations via radio were set aside for a time to give the private operators an opportunity to demonstrate what they could do. They have done a good job, it is generally agreed, but suggestions for a Government station have been revived, largely in order that an official tone may be given the news and addresses which are depended upon to give Latin-America the U. S. side of the picture.

Committee Favors U. S. Station

An interdepartmental committee headed by Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, has prepared a report for President Roosevelt, in which such a station is said to be urged as part of a program of improving cultural relationships in the Western Hemisphere. Included on the committee were representatives of the Departments of State, Interior, State and Justice.

Their report, Washington hears, will disclose that Germany and Italy are extremely active in spreading the totalitarian philosophy in South and Central America in news broadcasts two and three times a day. The broadcasts are sent by short-wave and are picked up by many stations and broadcast throughout Latin-America.

Dennis Chavez, Senator from New Mexico, this week reintroduced in Washington his bill providing for establishment of a government broadcasting station to permit the United States to broadcast to Latin-

Both NBC and CBS Active, Each Carrying More Programs to Southern Nations Than Any Other Country

Radio, like the motion picture, now is engaged in promoting friendlier relations with Latin America. Both the National and Columbia broadcasting companies are carrying extensive short wave broadcasts to our neighbors to the south. Each of the American companies carries more programs to Latin and South America per week than any other country.

NBC's short wave stations W3XAL and W3XL average 70 hours of broadcasting a week to South America. Germany through its short wave stations DJN and DJQ, Berlin, averages 56 hours a week, while Italy (2RO, ERS and EQY, Rome), which had been averaging 10 hours a week, recently discontinued all broadcasting to Latin-America. France averages 33 hours a week, England 18 hours and Japan only seven hours a week.

The CBS weekly program figures for its short-wave stations are: Over W2XE to Europe 53 hours, to South America, 39½ hours. Over W3XAU to Europe, 30¼ hours, to South America 46½ hours, an overall total of 83 hours to Europe, 86 hours to South America. Its stations short-wave four hours of Spanish news programs weekly, Portuguese news, 1 hour 15 minutes. Programs exclusively in Spanish are aired 14 hours weekly; exclusively Portuguese, 1 hour. The network will soon add 45 minutes of French news, and like periods for news in German and Italian.

Germans Use German

A comparison of NBC programs with those emanating from Germany shows diverging trends. For instance 87 per cent of NBC programs are in either the Spanish or Portuguese language and only 13 per cent are in English, while 53 per cent of the German programs are in German, 9 per cent exclusively Spanish, 9 per cent exclusively Portuguese and the remainder a combination of the three languages.

Whereas the NBC broadcasts are aimed primarily at the wider native population (the predominant language in Brazil is Portuguese and Spanish is predominant elsewhere) the German broadcasts are directed mainly to the large German settlements, especially in Brazil and Chile. This has been the German policy in not only South America but in all countries including North American countries.

England, France and Japan also follow this policy of broadcasting almost exclusively in their native tongue over the short wave frequencies.

Since January, NBC has increased by seven its hours per week to South America. But South America is not the only field in which its International Division is interested. Regular programs are transmitted to Germany and Italy as well as other countries, and NBC says the largest mail response comes from Germany.

The letters with very few exceptions are highly complimentary and almost all comment on the clearness of reception. Listeners from all countries demand at least an hour a week devoted to the goings-on in Hollywood. NBC's short wave news service is both informative and up to the minute, as witness this letter from a listener in Zuerich-Altstetten, Switzerland:

"The news service is very practical. For example, I was very surprised that you broadcast news during the European crisis, which we heard much later through our own local stations. On the whole we hear your news much earlier; the newspapers and our radio stations bring it as a rule the following day. Last night (October 11th) you gave a talk, 'Who's getting the business in South America?' It would please me very much if you could possibly give more such talks."

And this letter from a listener in Vienna, Germany: "In contrast to other stations, your news service is objective for our needs, though too short, as we are starved for the truth. For reasons which are obvious to you I cannot express myself further."

Arranging and scheduling programs for the short wave broadcasts is a full time job. Only 25 per cent of the programs broadcast in a typical month originated from the NBC networks; the remainder were originated by the International Division.

Many Subjects

The programs directed to the South American countries touch on a variety of subjects. On a recent cross-country trip two commentators, Arthur Deter and John Barrett, recorded in Spanish and Portuguese, for re-transmission, the following subjects of American life and industry:

Steel mills at Pittsburgh, steam turbine power plant at the mouth of a Pennsylvania coal mine, a typical automobile assembly line at Detroit, three 15 minute programs at traffic, engineering and driving schools, Detroit, Chicago wheat pit, a Chicago grain elevator, the iron ore loading docks at Duluth, Abraham Lincoln's home, Springfield, Ill.; Jefferson Memorial Museum, St. Louis; a shoe factory at St. Louis; San Juan Capistrano Mission, Cal.; interviews with Brazilian Government Purchasing Mission at an aircraft plant in California; orange packing plant, California; man-made harbor at San Pedro; Los Angeles water supply; Spanish street life in Los Angeles, and three interviews with Spanish-speaking motion picture stars.

NBC's International Division is headed by Frank Mason, vice-president of the company and assistant to the president. Guy Carlton Hickok is program director and chief of the English section. Mr. Hickok is a former war correspondent and foreign editor for various American periodicals, and, as other members of the Division's personnel, is a linguist.

Americas React To Friendliness

America. Similar legislation was introduced last year, but it was defeated after hearings in which the private broadcasters testified that they were adequately servicing the Latin-Americas with programs.

The government station asked for by Senator Chavez would have the call letters "PAZ," Spanish and Portuguese for "Peace." The measure asks for an appropriation of $3,000,000 for acquisition of land, erection of buildings and installation of equipment, and seeks authorization for $100,000 a year for maintenance and operation.

Some in Washington believe that the United States has far to go to cement American relations, feeling that we have been "sold" to the South American countries as an imperialistic nation seeking to keep them in subjection and to develop their resources for our profit. It is said that a largely similar sentiment was behind the expropriation of American properties—farm, oil, publishing and others—in Mexico and the less well-known seizure of American oil properties in Bolivia.

Turning to U. S.

At the same time, there is said to be a growing belief in the Latin-Americas that the future welfare of the southern republics is better to be entrusted to the United States than to Europe.

The Washington Administration repeatedly has demonstrated its friendly interest in its fellow-Americans. The press associations now are providing real, undistorted news to South American newspapers; motion pictures are to be used by the Government to show the United States as it actually is, and the ether waves going south now are laden with entertainment, news and comment in Spanish and Portuguese.

The United States is just getting into its stride, but it is freely predicted at Washington that Latin-America a year hence will have a totally different picture of Uncle Sam than it is seeing now through German, Italian and Japanese distortionists.

Cooperation of newspapers with radio, particularly with regard to public service enterprises, was asked of newspaper publishers by the radio committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association last Saturday at the convention in New York's Hotel Waldorf Astoria.

The day before, Mrs. Ogden Reid, vice-president of the New York Herald-Tribune also had urged closer cooperation.

The radio committee, however, scored the practice of selling news as sponsored programs.

The Federal Communications Commission will hold further hearings in its monopoly investigation, beginning May 11th. David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, and George Engles, vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, will be cross-examined.

ALLIED'S TRADE PACT STAND TO BE FIXED AT NATIONAL CONVENTION

Invites "Other Side," Including Hays, Kuykendall and All Majors to Attend in Minneapolis on June 13th

Allied States Association hopes to get bulk independent exhibitor opinion on the majors' trade practice program enactment now pending, and will disclose their stand at its national convention June 13th to 15th, in Minneapolis. The independents' attitude will guide Allied in the action it will take.

This procedure was disclosed this week in general bulletins sent separately by Abram F. Myers, general counsel, in Washington, and Colonel H. A. Cole, president, in Dallas.

Lawyers Working on Revisions

Meanwhile the majors' lawyers in New York this week continued their work on the program's revisions and were also striving to arrive at some solution to exhibitors' demands for a clear and detailed system of arbitration.

Announcing that "Allied will decide at Minneapolis," Mr. Myers explained that his announcement should "be regarded as a plea for a broader vision and a more liberal policy by the 'Big Eight,'" with the hope that by Allied convention time "the exhibitors will have a more liberal, at least a complete program to consider." Allied rejected the program because, they claim, it does not go far enough in its concessions, particularly on arbitration, theatre divorcement and block booking elimination.

Planning an "all-exhibitor" vote on the program, Col. Cole declared that every exhibitor leader and theatre owner in the United States, regardless of organization affiliation, will be invited to attend and participate in the session.

Allied's negotiation committee, "in opposing the acceptance of the trade practice proposals in their present form, were only doing what they thought was for the best for their members and all independent exhibitors," Col. Cole says. "If the majority of independent theatre owners want to accept the trade practice reforms as submitted by the producers, you may rest assured that the members of the negotiations committee officers of Allied will find no fault."

Allied Invites "Everybody"

Allied's national leaders, who heretofore at their national conventions have hewn quite close to the line of a convention for independent owners, have sent invitations to every faction in the business—independent and majors producers, distributors and exhibitors, affiliated and unaffiliated circuits, even to Will H. Hays and his officials at the MPPDA, and Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, and Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator in Hollywood.

Al Steffes, Allied executive, this week appointed Dave Palfreyman, Hays organization official, to serve as sergeant-at-arms, and Mr. Palfreyman has accepted. Also, Charles C. Pettijohn, MPPDA counsel, who fought Allied at the recent Neely block booking bill Congressional hearings will attend, it is understood, likewise Mr. Kuykendall, W. F. Rodgers, of MGM, and a committee from Harry Brandt's New York ITOA.

Southeastern and Oklahoma Units Set Convention Dates; N. Y. Advances Plans

The season for organized exhibitor conventions is advancing, this week notices coming from the Southeastern Theatre Owners on a three-day meeting, May 28th–30th, at the George Washington Hotel, Jacksonville, and from the Oklahoma Motion Picture Theatre Owners, on its convention, to be held June 26th–27th, at Oklahoma City, probably at the Biltmore.

Milton C. Moore is convention chairman for the Southeastern meeting, assisted by Thomas Orr, Oscar Lam, J. H. Thompson, Riley Davis, Tom Brandon, Harlowe Merryday, Mrs. Sarah V. Moore and Paul Wilson. Business sessions will be followed by a banquet, golf tournament and deep sea fishing.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the national MPTOA, will discuss national legislation and the trade practice program at Oklahoma City's convention, which will be presided over by Morris Loewenstein, state president. Mr. Kuykendall will also speak at the Kansas-Missouri MPTO convention, now set for May 23rd–24th, at Kansas City.

South Dakota Theatre Owners, headed by Dean Nash, meets Monday at Mitchell, and will act on the trade program.

Allied in New York reported this week that 40 of the 90 exposition booths to be available for its convention, May 23rd–25th, at the Hotel Astor in New York, have been purchased to date. The committee also reports that independent owners from throughout the east will attend.

Last week 200 members attending the convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas, at Little Rock, elected the following officers: O. G. Wren, president; William Malin, vice-president, and K. K. King, secretary-treasurer.

Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied president, told the delegates that the organization of a "fighting organization is the only hope of theatre owners".

Film Library To Give Program

The Museum of Modern Art Film Library, under the direction of John Abbott, will present a cycle of 70 films in conjunction with the exhibition titled "Art in Our Time," presented by the Museum in celebration of its 10th anniversary and the inauguration of its new $2,000,000 building on May 11th.

Among others who will participate in the ceremonies celebrating the opening will be President Roosevelt, who will make an address from the White House, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, Edsel Ford, Walt Disney, Dr. Robert Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Edward Bruce, director of the section of Fine Arts of the Treasury Department, and Lowell Thomas.

The film program will be run every day in the Museum's Auditorium until October 1st, and will illustrate major steps in the history of the motion picture from 1895 through the development of talking pictures.

Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., has donated to the Film Library his entire film collection, amounting to some 13 tons, or 2,700,000 feet of film.

Paramount Dance Held

Nine hundred members of the Paramount Pep Club, New York, and guests attended the Spring Dance Friday night in the Belvedere Room of the Hotel Astor. Entertainers included Lanny Ross, Shirley Ross, Billy Gelbert and Hal LeRoy.

ARINGLY DIFFERENT...
VEIRDLY FASCINATING...

At rare intervals a picture suddenly appears...from nowhere...a sleeper... which compels the attention of even trained observers. BLIND ALLEY is such a picture. If you can visualize a picture story in which psychiatry becomes a dramatic element...a murderer's mind reconstructed piece by piece to show why he kills...gripping, grim realism on an ascending scale...

That Is BLIND ALLEY.

COLUMBIA

GB INVADES U. S. TELEVISION FIELD; HAS PLANS FOR THEATRE PROGRAMS

Embassy and Roxy Reported Objectives for Baird Installations; World's Fair Program Commended and Criticized

England, already well along in actual theatre telecasting—much to the objection of some motion picture exhibitors there—this week invaded the television field in the United States through Gaumont British Pictures with its Baird system.

As President Roosevelt and other visitors at the World's Fair on Sunday participated in the first regular television service to the public, by the National Broadcasting Company, and others listened to the three and one-half hour telecast on RCA, DuMont, Andrea and other American-made television sets, a Briton was demonstrating the NBC telecast reception to an invited audience at 1600 Broadway, on a British-made set, the Baird.

Javal Sets Up Theatre

Ian Cremieu Javal, commercial director of Baird television, partly owned by Gaumont British, film producer and circuit operator, gave the demonstration at the offices of the Gaumont British Corporation of America. Twentieth Century-Fox now handles GB distribution in the United States.

Mr. Javal had arrived in New York on Friday, bringing with him $150,000 worth of Baird apparatus, and a staff of engineers, who immediately transformed the GB projection room into a television theatre, installed receiving apparatus, and a special aerial.

The invited audience viewed the NBC telecast on a 10-inch black and white screen at the end of a 12-inch Baird type cathode ray tube. Being installed this week was a 15 by 12 foot screen on which the Baird and GB officials hope to demonstrate the practicability of theatre reception.

Embassay and Roxy

Neither Mr. Javal nor Arthur Lee, vice-president and general manager for Gaumont British here, would declare in what Broadway theatres the Baird television would be installed, but said that "talks" were going on. It was generally believed that objectives were the Embassy (newsreel) theatre and the Roxy, both a few blocks from the Baird-GB offices. Executives of the theatres admitted they were considering the proposals, but most said the installation would not be made for some time.

Mr. Javal said the Baird receivers, operating on the 405-line screen (British standard) would be adapted to the 441-line definition (American standard), but that Baird would not set up a transmitter in the United States, because of existing laws requiring that a company operating such a station must be 80 per cent American owned. Understood to be in existence is a non-active financial company, Baird Television of America, formed several years ago.

Baird sets in four GB London houses have drawn crowds for reception of the Oxford-Cambridge boat races and a championship boxing match, despite high admission prices. Seven theatres will receive the Derby telecast at the same prices.

The Baird factories, at Sydenham, England, provide their share of the estimated 10,000 receiving sets used by the English public.

RKO PATHE RELEASING SHORT ON TELEVISION

"Television" the RKO-Pathe "Reelism" short which was used by the National Broadcasting Company during the telecasting two weeks ago, of the opening of the RCA Exhibit at the World's Fair, a telecast which was hailed as the dedication ceremony of television itself, is being released to exhibitors. The short explains the making of a television program, and the techniques used to produce television.

The first studio program under NBC's new regular television schedule was started Wednesday with the televised showing of a new Walt Disney cartoon, "Donald's Cousin Gus". The subject is scheduled for theatre release May 19th. NBC was provided with a special black-and-white print.

The telecast from the New York World's Fair was received on an estimated 200 sets in the 50-mile television area. The "shooting" was by the NBC telemobile unit, relayed by ultra short wave to the NBC transmitter on the Empire State Building. Federal, state and city dignitaries were "televised" in the RCA Exhibit building.

Radio Editors' Reactions

Newspaper accounts were commendatory, in general. Orrin E. Dunlap, Jr., radio editor of the New York Times, attributed the white streaks to "switching operations" (change from one viewpoint to another, from one current to another, and so on). He also noted a lack of mobility of the televising camera, but this was laid to U. S. Secret Service rulings that no cameramen be permitted as close to the President as microphones.

The week preceding the Fair telecast had seen entrance of television as a new advertiser in New York publications. Advertising men agreed that the volume of television copy would not for many years rival that of radio set manufacturers. They noted that radio advertising in 1929 amounted to 10 per cent of all national advertising copy; but now is only about 2 per cent.

Both DuMont and RCA ran full-page advertisements in last week's New York daily papers. The DuMont copy emphasized the reception of the Fair telecast, the DuMont company's pioneering in cathode ray tube production, and claimed itself as "the first in the field."

The DuMont company, in which Paramount is financially interested, last week discontinued "for six weeks" the acceptance of new orders for television receiving sets, claiming that it was "swamped." It reported to the Securities Exchange Commission that it was concentrating on transmission equipment and cathode ray tubes.

John Hay ("Jock") Whitney, has entered the DuMont company, through Pioneer Pictures, Inc., which has acquired $50,000 of 10 year convertible notes.

Radio and department stores in the New York area, notably R. H. Macy and Bloomingdale's, reported that large crowds milled about the television display sets.

The American Institute of Public Opinion announced a survey showed that about one family in eight desired to have television.

With the assumption by the NBC of regular service, other stations in the New York area, and the East, notably Schenectady, Bridgeport, Passaic, are expected to assume such service as soon as feasible.

Bloomingdale's department store in New York City staged "the first televised fashion show in a store." A display of millinery by mannikins on the sixth floor was televised to receivers on the third floor.

The Crosley Company of Cincinnati is remodeling the 48th floor of the Carew Building, Cincinnati, for television transmission. The company is manufacturing television receiving sets.

The Columbia Broadcasting System is finishing its transmitter atop the Chrysler Building, New York City, and has announced its readiness on about June 1st.

The Philco Radio and Television Corporation, home offices of which are in Philadelphia, demonstrated for the first time, in Chicago through Station WLS, its high definition receivers.

At mid-week the Federal Communications Commission had not yet approved the set of television standards submitted to it by Radio Manufacturers Association.

The General Electric Company, at its television manufacturing center in Bridgeport, announced that Harry A. Crossland had been appointed manager of television sales.

Indiana Indorsers Pick Mrs. Roberts

Mrs. B. J. Roberts of Fort Wayne was elected president of the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays at their annual convention in Indianapolis, succeding Mrs. Ferd Lucas of Greencastle.

Other officers named are Mrs. Lucas, first vice-president; Mrs. A. J. Hueber, second vice-president; Mrs. E. L. Burnett, third vice-president, and Mrs. C. J. Finch, fourth vice-president, all of Indianapolis; Mrs. E. B. Campbell of Fort Wayne, recording secretary; Mrs. Joe McCord of Greencastle, treasurer, and Mrs. H. D. Tutewiler of Indianapolis, auditor.

The society praised producers for their "excellent historical, biographical and musical pictures and for developments in color." Condemned were film productions based on the careers of criminals. The members called on producers to provide more films "showing world events in their true light."

Progress in the industry was praised by James Thrasher, Indianapolis Times critic, and Robert G. Tucker, Indianapolis Star critic, lauded the indorsers for their work, saying they had kept Indiana from the "boob status" of states which have film censorship.

James C. McLauchlan, a Scot who is an exchange teacher at Shortridge High School, Indianapolis, this year, said that Hollywood productions have given Englishmen a good idea of American ways, "despite obvious exaggerations."

Mrs. Hueber was general chairman of the convention. Mrs. Isaac Born of Indianapolis headed the resolutions committee.

Warners Call Debentures

Other financial news of the week included Warners' calling of debentures for redemption, and the Securities and Exchange Commission's issuance of its regular monthly listing of film stock tradings by officers.

The optional six per convertible debentures, series due 1939, of Warners were called for redemption in cash on June 29, 1939.

The board of directors has granted the right to holders of such debentures to exchange their debentures on or before June 28, 1939, for an equal principal amount of six per cent debentures, series due 1948.

The company notified stockholders that any desiring to exchange their debentures, series due 1948, may forward them with September 1, 1939 coupons attached, to Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, N. Y., not later than June 28, 1939, with instructions to effect such exchange. Thereupon, Manufacturers Trust will deliver in exchange an equal principal amount of six per cent debentures, series due 1948, with September 1, 1939 and subsequently maturing coupons attached. The 1948 debentures are listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

SEC Report Lists Dealings by Fourteen

Trading activities of film company officials in the securities of their own corporations increased markedly in March, it was disclosed by the semi-monthly summary issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission Wednesday in Washington.

The largest transaction was the disposition by Sam E. Morris, of New York, Warner Brothers, vice president, of 25,000 optional debentures, reducing his holdings to 15,000. In that company, also, Jack L. Warner, vice-president, Burbank, acquired 8,500 shares of common and 210 shares of preferred stock, bringing his holdings to 98,560 shares of common and 15,094 of preferred.

The next heaviest transaction was reported by Joseph M. Schenck, Twentieth-Century-Fox board chairman, who disposed of 10,000 shares of the company's common stock and submitted a December, 1938, report showing the disposition, by gift, of 500 shares in that month; at the end of March, Mr. Schenck held 108,943 shares of the company's common stock. Also in Twentieth Century, Wilfred J. Eadie, New York, officer, reported acquisition of one share of common stock, representing his entire holdings in that class.

AMERICAN FILMS LEAD IN ROME

Fifteen of the 32 films shown in the first run theatres in Rome, Italy, in December and January were American, according to a report from the American Commercial Attache at Rome to the Department of Commerce in Washington.

Of the 16 films shown in Rome in January, five were American, six were Italian, two were English, two were French and one was Spanish-German. In December, 10 American films were shown. Only three Italian, two German and one French films were shown in December, according to the report.

Other film transactions reported by the SEC this week were as follows:

Columbia Pictures: Acquisition by Jack Cohn, New York, vice president, of 13 shares of common and 771 common voting trust certificates together with a December report showing disposition of 157 v. t. certificates, bringing his holdings to 555 shares of common and 31,631 voting trust certificates; and acquisition by Abraham Schneider, New York, officer, of two voting trust certificates, bringing his holdings to 104.

General Theatres Equipment Corporation: Disposition by Edward C. Delafield, New York, director, of 100 shares of common, his entire holdings.

Loew's Boston Theatres: Acquisition by Loew's, Inc., of 17 shares of common, bringing its holdings to 99,687 shares.

Loew's, Inc.: Acquisition by Leopold Friedman, New York, officer, of 200 shares of common, bringing his holdings to 812 shares; and disposition by J. Robert Rubin, New York, officer, of 700 shares, reducing his holdings to 33,475 shares.

Monogram Pictures: Acquisition by Edward A. Golden, New York, officer, of 550 shares of common stock by gift and sale of 50 shares, leaving him with 500 shares, his entire holdings; and disposition in February by George W. Weeks, New York, officer, of 6,194 options, for common, his entire holdings in that class.

Paramount Pictures: Acquisition by John D. Hertz, New York, director, through Lehman Brothers, of 100 shares of common, representing his entire holdings in that class.

Reports from individuals becoming officers or directors in film corporations, showed that Charles D. Prutzman, New York, held 300 common voting trust certificates of Universal Corporation when he became an officer on March 8th, but held no Universal Pictures securities when he became an officer of that company a week later.

Loew's Share Was $10,516,538

Loew's, Inc., on Tuesday, in its comparative earnings statement for the 28 weeks ended March 16, 1939, showed $10,516,538 as the company's share of operating profit of all film and theatre subsidiaries, after deducting preferred dividends of subsidiaries, as against $10,207,339 for the 28 weeks ended March 17, 1938.

After depreciation and taxes, but before reserves for contingencies, the income of Loew's amounted to $7,268,847, compared with $6,887,678 for the comparable period in 1938. The directors of the company approved the setting up of reserves for contingencies in the amount of $900,000 for the most recent 28-week period, an increase of $500,000 over the sum set aside for such reserves in the same 28-week period a year ago.

After this enlarged reserve, Loew's share in net profit of subsidiaries for the 28 weeks ended March 16, 1939, amounted to $6,368,847, equivalent to $3.68 per share on the average number of shares of common stock outstanding in the hands of the public during the period. This compares with $6,487,678 and net earnings of $3.76 per common share during the same period of 1938, when the reserve for contingenies was $400,000, or less than half the amount set aside for that purpose in the most recent period.

Balaban Defines Paramount Earnings

Paramount Pictures last Friday issued its annual report for the year ended January 1, 1939, in a letter sent by President Barney Balaban to stockholders of the company, as follows, in part.

The consolidated earnings for the year, after all charges including interest, federal taxes, depreciation and reserves were $2,533,278, and profit on purchase of the company's debentures was $332,397, a total of $2,865,675. The consolidated earnings include $292,361 of net capital and non-recurring income. In addition, Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the year of partially owned companies amounted to approximately $1,240,000. Combined consolidated results and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned companies for the year aggregate $4,105,675.

The consolidated results of $2,865,675, after deducting dividends for the year of $1,186,072 computed on the basis of the first and second preferred shares outstanding on December 31, 1938, were equal to $.68 per share on the 2,465,927 shares of common stock, outstanding on December 31, 1938. Calculated on the same basis the combined consolidated results and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned subsidiaries of $4,105,675 would be equal to $1.18 per share on said common shares.

Revenues from subsidiaries operating in foreing countries having currency restrictions are included in earnings only to the extent that dollars have been received, except for a nominal amount of uncollected revenue which has been accrued for record purposes at one tenth of one per cent per unit of foreign currency.

The consolidated balance sheet shows that cash and marketable securities on Dec. 31, 1938 amounted to $13,614,200, of which $2,435,290 represented balances in Great Britain and Dominions, and $203,424 in other foreign countries. The total inventory amounted to $19,836,912. Total current assets were $37,910,519 and current liabilities $8,898,524, leaving a net working capital of $29,011,995, an increase during the year of $2,121,481.

On Dec. 31, 1938 there were outstanding in the hands of the public $9,439,576 principal amount of 20-year six per cent sinking fund debentures. On February 20, 1939 there were redeemed $4,993,900 principal amount of these securities, and on April 17, 1939 an additional amount of $2,750,000. After giving effect to these redemptions and the acquisition in 1939 of additional debentures for the treasury, also the issuance of $250,000 principal amount of these debentures in settlement of claims filed by The Prudence Company, Inc., there are now outstanding in the hands of the public $1,938,676 principal amount of those securities. In order to provide the funds for this refinancing the company and several of the wholly owned subsidiaries borrowed from banks approximately $5,500,000, the greater portion of which is repayable on a five-year basis, with interest rates averaging about 3½ per cent per annum. Of this amount approximately $1,500,000 was borrowed in 1938 and is reflected in the accompanying balance sheet; the remaining $4,000,000 represents borrowings in 1939.

During the three-year period ended Dec. 31, 1938 the interest bearing indebtedness of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries had been reduced by approximately $6,078,568, which is summarized as follows:

Net decreases:
6% debentures, par value	$15,889,291*
Mortgages and bonds of subsidiaries	6,522,477
Total net decreases	$22,411,768
Net increases:
3¼% debentures, par value	$11,247,200
Notes payable	5,046,000
Purchase money obligations	40,000
	$16,333,200
Total net reduction	$6,078,568

Computed on basis of $25,328,867 total amount authorized for issuance to December 31, 1938 under plan of reorganization.*

Giving effect to the redemption of six per cent debenture obligations in the year 1939 and the additional borrowings in connection therewith, as previously mentioned, the net reduction of interest bearing indebtedness aggregating $6,078,568, as above, amounts to approximately $9,500,000 at the present time.

These debt reductions, together with interest savings resulting from the issuance in 1937 of $12,507,200 principal amount of three and one-quarter per cent debentures in exchange for an equivalent amount of six per cent debentures of the company, and rate reductions on bond and mortgage indebtedness of consolidated subsidiaries, have reduced the interest expense of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries from a total of $3,148,367 for 1935 to a total of $2,053,638 for 1938.

Stock Conversions

During the three-year period ended Dec. 31, 1938, 111,117 shares of first preferred stock and 89,070 shares of second preferred stock were converted into 857,982 common shares, a total reduction of $12,002,400 par value of senior shares. The annual dividend requirement on the first and second preferred stocks is $1,186,000 based on the shares outstanding at December 31, 1938, which compares with $1,886,000 based on the shares outstanding at December 28, 1935.

During the year dividends were paid aggregating $1,186,082 representing dividends at the rate of six per cent per annum on the first and second preferred stocks for the year 1938. Dividends for the first quarter 1939 on both issues were paid on April 1, 1939.

No claims involving the issuance of securities were allowed during the year in the reorganization proceedings; however, one general claim for $68,000 was settled by the payment of $15,000 in cash. Claims of $1,388,369 filed by The Prudence Company, Inc., relating to first mortgages on theatre properties in St. Petersburg and Jacksonville, Florida, were settled on March 10, 1939 by the issuance of $250,000 principal amount of six per cent debentures and $250,000 par value of first preferred stock of the company with accrued interest or dividends from and after July 1, 1938. A wholly owned subsidiary retains title to the properties and, under this settlement, assumed such mortgages in the reduced aggregate principal sum of $450,000, payable serially until maturity in 1945 and bearing interest at the reduced rate of four per cent per annum. All claims involved in the reorganization proceedings have been eliminated except anti-trust and certain other claims on which liability is denied and several minor claims and duplications not yet espunged.

EXHIBITOR 35 YEARS, MAYOR BY ONE VOTE

A single white ballot elected "Uncle Joe-k" Koehler, of Twin Falls, Idaho, to that town's mayoralty, it was revealed after a close count of the votes. "Uncle Joe-k," who operates the Roxy Theatre, in that town, won the election from J. H. Blandford, attorney, by a count of 1,778 to 1,777.

"Uncle Joe-k," now 63 years old, began his exhibition career in 1903 with, as he describes it, "a machine head, carbide lamp, auto-harp, two sets of song slides, two bed sheets faced and sewed together to make a screen, a 100 foot black round top, and two 100 foot 'spools' of film."

Despite European upheavals, with unsettled markets abroad and no apparent improvement in industry here, the company's earnings have shown an upward trend for six months, the statement said. The consolidated companies' operating earnings for the last quarter of 1938 were greatly in excess of those for the corresponding quarter of 1937. This improvement in earnings continued through the first quarter of 1939, as compared with the first quarter of 1938.

Paramount's consolidated income account for 52 weeks ended December 31, 1938, compares as follows:

	52 weeks ended Dec. 31, '38	52 weeks ended Jan. 1, '38

Paramount Pictures estimates its net profit for the quarter ended April 1, 1939, at $1,300,0000 after interest, taxes and charges. This amount includes $678,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. Balance after deducting $300,268 dividends accrued for the quarter on preferred shares, was equal to 41 cents a share on the 2,465,927 shares of common stock outstanding on April 1, 1939.

The consolidated earnings for the quarter ended April 2, 1938, including $806,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest in combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries, were $830,866, equal to 22 cents a share on 2,365,900 common shares outstanding at the close of that period.

There were outstanding on April 1, last, 144,672 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value six per cent first preferred stock, 555,071 shares of cumulative convertible $10 par value six per cent second preferred stock and 2,465,927 common shares.

Twentieth Century-Fox Net Reaches $1,224,250

Twentieth Century-Fox Thursday reported a consolidated net operating profit, after Federal income tax, of $1,224,250 for the 13 weeks ended April 1, 1939. Debenture Exchanges

Out of about $3,000,000 outstanding, holders of a total of approximately $300,000 of RKO's 10 year six per cent gold debentures have elected to receive the new preferred stock in exchange, it was disclosed Tuesday by an application of Irving Trust, RKO trustee, for authority to call in the elected debentures for stamping and listing with the New York Stock Exchange.

Under the reorganization plan, debenture holders were entitled to exchange their holdings at a rate of 1.43 shares of new preferred for each $100 of debentures, during a period ended May 1st, and thereafter would receive one share of preferred and five shares of common for each $100 principal amount of debentures.

Irving Trust is to apply shortly for an extension of the maturity date from June 1st next on the final $50,000 of RKO secured gold notes, retirement of which might complicate RKO reorganization if effected before the plan is consummated.

The company is named Continental Players. Its director is Professor Leopold Jessner, former head of the German State Theatre. The opening performance is expected to be on May 24 in Los Angeles or Hollywood. The company also will play San Francisco, Chicago, and in New York, for the duration of its World's Fair.

Hargrave, vice president, told stockholders. Although the company has not as yet computed its earnings for the period, he said, it is likely that profits recorded at least a corresponding gain.

Sales for the 1939 period amounted to $29,662,000 and this compares with $26,516,000 in like weeks of 1938 and $26,944,000 in 1937.

Sarnoff Reports RCA's Earnings

RCA controls RCA Communications, RCA Photophone, NBC and has a half interest in RKO.

Current earnings were equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to four and six-tenths cents a common share compared with four and one-half cents a share earned in the corresponding period of 1938.

Gross income of $25,004,989 for the first quarter this year compared with $22,630,568 for the first quarter of last year. Cost of goods sold, operating, development, selling and administrative expenses totaled $22,178,676 compared with $19,810,021 in the 1938 period.

"The bank loans now outstanding total $5,000,000 on which the interest rate has been reduced from two and one-half per cent to one and three-fourth per cent," Mr. Sarnoff added.

Special Master Chosen In Balaban & Katz Action

Federal Judge Charles Woodward has chosen Edgar Eldredge as special Master in Chancery in the Government suit against Balaban and Katz and the majors on charges of violating the consent decree issued against them in 1932 restraining them from violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws. May 17th has been chosen as the date for the introduction of evidence on the part of the Government.

Judge Eldredge ruled that the records of all the companies concerned might be examined, thus complying with a Government request.

STUDIOS AND WRITERS DEADLOCKED; RULE MISTRIAL IN COAST IATSE FIGHT

Guild Directors Reject Producers' Compromise Proposals on Three Provisions; Back to National Board

A deadlock apparently of a serious nature, reached Tuesday morning in Hollywood in the dispute between the studios and the Screen Writers Guild over a "closed shop," will return the months-old argument to the National Labor Relations Board for settlement.

New Impasse

Negotiations between the Writers Guild and the producers reached a new impasse as the Guild board of directors turned down completely and irrevocably producers' proposals which offered a compromise on three major points on which the Guild had previously stated it was adamant.

Guild directors at a session which broke up early Tuesday instructed its attorney, Leonard S. Janofsky, to move for a reopening of NLRB hearings in which charges of failure to bargain collectively and coercion and intimidation of Guild members had previously been made.

Proposals made by producers and approved by them at a Friday night session were a contract term of seven years, a Guild shop, with percentages to rise from 70 to 80 per cent during the life of the pact, and refusal of permission to writers to write and own material during layoff periods.

SWG previously had made a firm stand on demands for 80 per cent Guild shop at the outset of the contract, contract duration of no longer than three-and-a-half years, and the right of writers to own all material written during layoff periods.

Asks Hearings Be Reconvened

At the close of Tuesday's SWG board session, Charles Brackett, president of the Guild and chairman of its negotiating committee in charge of that side of negotiations said: "The SWG executive board is of the opinion that such producer proposals indicate no willingness on the part of producers to consider sincerely the minimum proposals of the membership of the Guild. . . . The executive board therefore has directed its bargaining committee to have NLRB hearings reconvened as soon as possible. . . ."

Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, on Friday night, following the producers' meeting, issued a statement prophesying early settlement of the negotiations through proposals they approve. However, proposals, as learned from SWG sources, were declared far below what the Guild negotiators had been led to expect in conferences with producer representatives.

Both sides, it had been previously indicated, had tentatively agreed to five-year pact tenure and at least 75 per cent Guild shop at the start of the contract.

Resumption of negotiations looking toward an SWG bargaining contract for all film writers occurred several months ago when, at the start of hearing of NLRB charges against producers, counsel for major production companies, through spokesman Homer Mitchell, agreed to recognize the Guild as the collective bargaining representative and expressed a "sincere desire and willingness to negotiate for a contract."

Special trial examiner James C. Batten, sent by the NLRB to hear the case, ordered day-to-day continuance of hearings pending completion of negotiations.

THEATRE GUILD DEFEATS UNION

The New York Theatre Guild won its dispute last week with the Theatrical Agents, Managers, Agents, and Treasurers' Union. A decision by the American Arbitration Association upheld the right of the Guild to install its own staff in the boxoffice of the Schubert Theatre, New York, where the Guild attraction, "Philadelphia Story," has been playing.

Mr. Batten pointed out at that time and subsequently that the NLRB stood ready to proceed with the case at 24 hours' notice if an impasse was reached.

Factional feeling in Screen Actors' Guild came to a head Monday night when members of the board of directors, officers and members of Class B council, governing body for extra player members, were served with a temporary restraining order preventing them from acting to rectify an alleged illegal election of new Class B members. Ed Heim, Paul Cook and Eddie Aquilania, elected to Class B Council on April 16 at balloting subsequently held illegal by Guild Attorney Lawrence Beilenson because of an asserted lack of quorum, late Monday obtained the temporary injunction from Superior Judge E. H. Wilson, returnable Friday. Election of 17 council members was illegal, according to Mr. Beilenson, because the necessary 20 per cent of membership did not participate in voting, as ordered by bylaws. The board of directors Monday night were to provide for new balloting by mail in order to have the needed quorum for a proper vote.

The entire session was taken up with the Class B council matter. A scheduled discussion of the SAG contract with Artists' Managers' Guild for franchise of talent agents was postponed and members of the negotiating committee, headed by George Murphy, will meet next Monday night for currying final details of the proposed pact, already agreed to by both parties in principle on major points. It is expected final action will be taken within three weeks.

Greater New York Fund Drive Gaining Momentum

Every sector of the New York motion picture industry is cooperating in the Greater New York Fund drive. Local circuits and most of the smaller houses are expected to contribute fully, under the chairmanship of B. S. Moss of the Exhibitors' Committee of the motion picture section of the Fund.

Expected soon is a "Get-Together" luncheon for all active exhibitors, the suggestion of Harry Brandt, of the Brandt circuit, and president of the New York Independent Theatre Owners. Among the circuits holding meetings and pressing the drive were the Rugoff and Becker, Cocalis, Consolidated, Interboro, Fabian.

The proceeds from the May 15, pre-premiere special invitation performance of MGM's "Goodbye Mr. Chips" at the Astor Theatre, Broadway, will go to the Fund.

Judge in Hollywood Orders Dispute with Technicians Placed for Hearing Before Another Judge After Tilt

The constitutionality of rules and bylaws binding local unions to their labor international organizations was left in the air Monday in Hollywood when Judge Emmett H. Wilson, in superior court declared a mistrial of counter suits between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Studio Technicians Local No. 37, thereby extending the fight between the two for control of the Local 37.

The case, which might affect relations not only between IATSE groups but other AFL units as well as CIO organizations, is predicated on whether an international can take over a local organization's premises, suspend autonomy, remove officers and control funds, as it did to Local 37.

Judge Leaves Case

Judge Wilson stepped completely out of the case, ordering the action set for hearing before another judge. He denied IATSE officers' motion for a continuance, and recommended a new election of Local 37. He declared the International presented insufficient evidence to show that the IATSE's executive board had instructed George E. Browne, IATSE president, to order suspension of the local's autonomy and its officers.

The injunction obtained by the International remains in effect.

Introduction of testimony at the weekend hearings purporting to show dissipation of funds by Local 37 officers, brought a skirmish between A. Brigham Rose, No. 37's attorney, and John Gatelee, IATSE representative, which ended in a $5 fine against Mr. Rose by Judge Wilson for contempt.

C. H. Hartke, attorney for IATSE, international, and other bystanders, restrained the pair from fisticuffs.

Mr. Gatelee took the stand to say funds of Local 37 were dissipated by elected officers later ousted.

That George E. Browne, president of IATSE, personally ordered suspension of autonomy and of ousters was the gist of testimony by Floyd M. Billingsley, of San Francisco, member of the IATSE executive board and international vice-president. Mary Blumer, office worker of Local 37, was called by Mr. Hartke in an effort to show interference of local officers with IATSE leaders.

Mr. Rose was unsuccessful in seeking appointment of a receiver of quarterly dues, but Judge Wilson issued, on petition of the deposed officers, an order to show cause why IATSE officers should not post a bond of $60,000 to protect dues being paid by members to international officers.

Jeff Kibre, minority leader of Local 37, was fined $50, jailed for failure to pay, and then released on a writ returnable Friday in a concurrent court action growing out of charges based on a series of cartoons ridiculing International officers. The action was before Judge E. H. Allen in Superior Court. J. W. Carpenter and d Heim, deposed Local 37 officers, also were fined for violation of a restraining order obtained by Mr. Gatelee and Frank Stickling, but the fines were suspended.

Trial of the counter suits was set for Friday before Judge Minor Moore.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

One of the reasons why Hollywood is so late getting done with the industry's contribution to San Francisco's and New York's World's Fairs—a picture, "Cavalcade of America," showing U. S. history—is attributable to their inability out there to decide whether they should start the history with the Battle of Bunker Hill at Concord or go back to the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock.

A new play called "Caesar" opened the other night in the Argentina Theatre, Rome, Italy. Its avowed author was Giavacchino Forzano.

"Caesar" was received by the audience with an enthusiasm such as rarely attends play openings. The frozen-faced contingent which brings untimely autumnal colors to so many Broadway openings was not present. Every important character in the play was applauded to the echo and there were several times when the unrestrained approval of the audience halted the action. Critics of the Roman and provincial press were unanimous in predicting a long run. Curtain calls after the final act were too numerous to be counted.

"A gripping historical drama, comparable with Shakespeare, Goethe and Wagner at their best, and with a touch of genius that even these great men did not attain," was the consensus of opinion as expressed by the audience and in the newspapers.

Unofficially, it is understood that a relatively new playwright named Benito Mussolini collaborated with Signor Forzano on this opus. Signor Mussolini is thought, in Rome, to have a bright future.

The late Edward LeRoy Rice was one of the first minstrel men, in the days when troupers were troupers. When motion pictures came along, he turned to the screen, working around one of the very first nickelodeons in Washington, D. Known in the show business as the historian of minstrelsy, he always dug deep. That explains why so many of his photos of film stars go back to "baby shots", to pictures in tintype and long tresses.

Captain Fury

(UA-Hal Roach)

Adventure in Australia

With the Brian Aherne of "Juarez," the Victor McLaglen of "Gunga Din," the John Carradine of "Stagecoach" and the Paul Lukas of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," playing the four top roles under personal direction of Hal Roach, "Captain Fury" stacks up as an exploitation attraction of the first magnitude. Showmen who go on from there to proclaim the film an Australian "Robin Hood" will have given the customers a well rounded idea of the kind of picture in store for them.

Aherne's performance as the dashing ex-convict who champions the settlers against their oppressor is as ruggedly assertive as his portrayal of Maximilian in "Juarez" is restrained. McLaglen's two-fisted enactment of the hero's light-fingered but faithful lieutenant is another stout link in his long chain of he-man characterizations. Carradine and Lukas make telling capital of somewhat lesser assignments, and George Zucco turns in a vital exhibition as the brutal usurper of settlers' rights. June Lang, Virginia Field and Margaret Roach adequately handle the feminine interest, which is minor.

The story and screen play, by Grover Jones, Jack Jevne and William deMille, opens with arrival of a convict ship at Melbourne and the placement of the convicts in custody of respected landowners for whom they are to work during the remainder of their penal sentences. It moves on to show that conditions of servitude are beyond human endurance and that the landowner to whom the hero and his associates are paroled is exploiting poorer settlers in the new country, driving them from their homes with fire and gun.

"Captain Fury" escapes confinement and convinces the settlers that they can defend their rights under his leadership. He thereupon liberates other convicts who promise to follow him. The band which he assembles meets the oppressor's violence with violence, guile with guile, in a series of melodramatic encounters. Captured at last, he is saved from hanging when the settlers testify in his behalf. He ultimately is pardoned and given custody of his convict associates.

The production is rich in the unfamiliarity of its locale and in its headlong approach to the subject matter in hand, all high adventure material. It is strictly Hal Roach in the comedy department.

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood theatre in Hollywood to an audience that applauded the favored players on appearance, laughed lustily at the Roachian comedy touches, stirred a little uneasily in a couple of spots where too close cutting seemed to call for minor repairs, and cheered the hero on his many dashes to the rescue, applauded his horseback descent of a waterfall as an outstanding example of melodramatic incident.—William R. Weaver.

The Four Feathers

(London Films—UA)

Military Melodrama

Alexander Korda's newest production, directed by his brother, Zoltan, should rate easily among the best of their joint repertoire, certainly among the finest efforts of British production. It is a tale of military adventure in the desert country of the Nile at the time of Kitchener's Sudan campaign, not merely a color spectacle but also a stirring story of human heroism and courage against long and terrific odds. There is poignancy and pathos in it, in Clements' battle against himself and the doubts and loyalty of June Duprez as his sweetheart, in the parched torture of Ralph Richardson stricken by the merciless desert sun, in his and Clements' Odyssey to the Nile, in the grim miseries of the prison camps where men are fed as mangy cattle, in a myriad incidents handled by players and director with consummate skill and sympathy. This moving note of heroism and courage is set against a background of military and tribal spectacle and desert splendor, of gleaming golden sand and blue Nile, parched rocks and gorgeous uniforms which combine to produce a spectacle both thrilling and magnificent. The color is superb and the camerawork flawless.

John Clements as the boy "Faversham" who goes out to Egypt to battle with his own cowardice to prove that he can find courage and to send back one by one the emblems of cowardice to the comrades who have stigmatized him, gives a performance most notable, perhaps, when he adopts native costume and penetrates the native lines, saving Richardson from death and liberating his other two comrades from a tribal prison. Clements' future is now made. Ralph Richardson it is, however, who will probably stir the women's hearts with his easy upright military personality, essentially English in every word and gesture. There are passages in which Richardson is involved, with desert vultures hovering over him and his dead company, which will stir their spines.

Aubrey Smith as a military bore with a recurrent gag, is the film's only attempt at humor, but it gets its laughs. June Duprez is both charming and lovely as the girl. The rest of the cast is perhaps not so well known but, in general, capable.

The spectacular charges of the Fuzzy Wuzzies, the battle of Omdurman and the siege of Khartoum, the hauling of the army's boats over the Nile and the pageantry of parade and battle keep eye and senses stirred. The film is long—an hour and three-quarters—but seldom palls. Osmond Borridaile's Sudan camerawork is something stronger than an asset, whilst Rene Hubert's costumes and the technical assistance of two military advisers add authenticity to the whole.

On both sides of the Atlantic showmen should find the exploitation obvious and easy, with "The Drum" as an advance argument. The title, of course, is an immediate asset, but the spectacle and color element plus the tried and trusted adventure flavor should assist the process.

Seen at a surprise preview the film went over rousingly with a normal suburban audience who reacted with spirit to the thrills and spectacle. It is running currently at a West End house where more sophisticated patrons seem regularly to vote it more than value for money.—Aubrey Flanagan.

For Love or Money

(Universal)

Comedy Melodrama

This is a story that Damon Runyon probably will regret not writing. It's about bookmakers, gangsters, odd betting room habitues and young lovers, as well as the important horse which did NOT win the all important race. The situations and the characters are thoroughly Runyonesque in development as well as in entertainment. Done in a comic melodramatic style without an apparently serious effort to impress, "For Love or Money" is 67 minutes of the type of laughs which causes the unholstery on theatre seats to become worn prematurely.

June Lang and Robert Kent are the romantic leads. The others of the cast, Cora Witherspoon, Etienne Girardot, Edward Brophy, Richard Lane, Horace MacMahon and Edward Gargan, each in the kind of role suiting his character talents best, carry the rest of the load.

Five writers contributed their efforts toward making "For Love or Money" a picture which the preview audience enjoyed unroariously. Charles Grayson and Arthur T. Horman adapted the original story by Daniel Taradash, Julian Blaustein and Bernard Feins. Albert S. Rogell was responsible for the creditable direction of the Max Golden production.

"Ted" and "Sleeper," both working for "Foster," a bookmaker, let $50,000 of the Boss' money slip through their hands. Tracing it, they find "Susan Bannister" has received it through the mails in some advertising matter and has spent all but $6,000 of it. "Foster," disbelieving their story, gives them 36 hours in which to return the money. What follows is a series of incidents provoking heavy laughter.

Blue Montana Skies

Western

Montana and the Canadian Northwest with the Mounties supplanting the customary marshal's posse in the final chase serve as the locale for this newest release in the series starring the current number one cowboy, Gene Autry. Fur smuggling is the basis on which the plot structure has been built. Between the initial introduction of the smuggling theme and the capture of the smugglers at the film's end there are to be found the customary ingredients of an Autry western, namely, singing, comedy, slight romantic interludes and action.

Autry sings three or four songs including the title song and there is an additional specialty song number by the "Hillbillies." Smiley Burnette also lends his voice to song in true "Frog" fashion and otherwise supplies most of the comedy. June Storey, who is quite personable, capably takes care of romance. Miss Storey has been signed by Republic to appear in all future Autry pictures and that is good news. Tully Marshall, who can remember Hollywood when, has a small role and others of the cast include Harry Woods, Al Bridge, Glenn Strange and Dorothy Granger.

"Gene," "Frog" and "Steve" are driving a herd of cattle to Canada when a Montana border marshal informs them that fur smugglers are operating in the neighborhood. Later that night "Steve" is killed by the smugglers, but lives long enough to carve the "HH" ranch brand on a stone. "Gene" finds him and sets out to locate the ranch. He finds it to be a dude ranch and manages through a ruse to remain there.

Attempts on "Gene's" life fail while he continues to hunt around trying to connect the death of "Steve" with the ranch.

Reform School

(Million Dollar Productions)

Melodrama

Theatres with patronages exclusively or predominantly Negro, and other houses which occasionally present unique pictures may find "Reform School" a picture to engage their attention. Starring Louise Beavers, Reginald Fenderson, Maceo Sheffield and Monte Hawley at the head of an all-Negro cast, the picture is a melodramatically treated problem play, dealing with the brutal manner in which petty offenders are disciplined in a reform school for juveniles and with the campaign waged by a woman probation officer to substitute kindness and education.

A parole violator, played by Fenderson, is re-sentenced to reform school and there becomes the special victim of the superintendent (Sheffield) and guard (Hawley) cruelties. On the road to becoming a hardened criminal, the boy's case is brought to the attention of the probation officer (Miss Beavers). Forcing the superintendent's removal, she institutes corrective discipline. When the guard, stealing school funds, plants evidence to throw suspicion on the boy, he and his pals take matters into their own hands. Breaking confinement, they round up the guard, and, in a bristling melee, force him to confess his guilt. A new order is instituted for all the state's reform schools.

Previewed at the Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, to an audience which was about 90 per cent Negro. They seemed to appreciate the efforts made by members of their own race to enact a seriously plotted photoplay which, while it is an exposure, preachment and plea for better understanding, is also melodramatically entertaining. Producer H. M. Popkin staged the vehicle intelligently.—G. M.

It's a Wonderful World

(MGM)

Romance, Comedy, Melodrama

The best or worst of worlds, depending on one's own viewpoint, truly becomes a wonderful world when films as delightfully fresh and gay as this are around for anyone to see. "It's a Wonderful World" is the sort of picture which, when good, is very, very good. It is.

The film is a cross between two rightly celebrated productions, "It Happened One Night" and "The Thin Man," having the comedy of the one and the mystery of the other. The picture does not ape them, however. It can stand on its own, on equal footing with either or both.

As characters entrenched in their own private Eden and touching only the fringe of our outer world are two of the screen's most exemplary exponents of light comedy, Claudette Colbert and James Stewart. Given a screen play by Ben Hecht stemming from an original story he wrote with Herman Mankiewicz and directed by W. S. Van Dyke, Miss Colbert and Mr. Stewart register performances that even they will find it most difficult to top.

The following in the cast spell comedy in capital letters: Guy Kibbee, Nat Pendleton, Edgar Kennedy, Ernest Truex, Richard Carle and Andy Clyde. Sidney Blackmer and Frances Drake intrude menacingly. Even in a "wonderful world" they have villains. In fact, sandwiched in the Hecht script are two murders, and the hero is a private detective. That's how the whole thing came about anyhow. Attempts to clear his client, a wealthy playboy, of a murder charge involve escape from the police, companionship with a persistent and unconventional lady poet, another murder and a suspenseful climax.

Spies of the Air

(British National-AB)

Spy Melodrama

The plethora of spy satires, both comic and serious, which seems to have descended on the British market, may be tuned to the anxious atmosphere of the day. The one excuse for yet another is something fresh in subject or treatment. Luckily freshness is an essential quality of this latest variation on a much exploited theme. David Macdonald, director of "This Man Is News," seems to have a flair for the real English flavor, so that, with easy narrative and very good casting, there is conviction and sustained interest in "Spies of the Air."

The setting is the secret aerodrome of an aircraft manufacturer, its personnel mainly the ground staff and test pilots, with a Secret Service dressing. The action concerns the plans of a new fighter plane. On the personal side the characters move within a limited circle, but they are all alive and credible. On the action side, which is very well textured, there is a modicum of flying 'neath a high ceiling, nothing sensational maybe, but not without interest. Barry K. Barnes, who is building up a name this side, and Roger Livesey, bear the brunt of the personal appeal.

The yarn has a clandestine romance neatly intertwined, mysterious strangers, and an effort at blackmail. "Thurloe," the test pilot (played by Barnes), tilting his spear at the designer's wife, is a gallant who is not discovered in his true colors, that of a man who would sell his country's secrets, till the penultimate passages of the picture. The truth, which comes as an unpalatable surprise, is surrounded by suspense and bursts of action.

Bryan Langley's forthright camerawork and Ronnie Munro's imaginative musical score help out the sum total of appeal.

Exhibitors should be able to sell this without blushing, on both sides of the Atlantic.

Fixer Dugan

(RKO Radio)

Circus Melodrama

"Fixer Dugan" is made up of those entertainment elements ordinarily interesting to plain folk. While the motivating story is rather light, it has a human interest quality. It concerns the efforts made by a circus "fixer" and a woman lion tamer to care for and eventually adopt an orphan girl. Told against backgrounds that take audiences into all phases of circus life from sensational acts under the big top to the fun and excitement of the side show midway, there is plenty of action and no little comedy.

On the accidental death of her mother, "Terry" comes under the care of the lion tamer, "Adgie," and "Fixer Dugan." "Dugan," whose time is taken up adjusting all sorts of complaints, has two problems which give him most bother. First is the job of preventing authorities from placing the child in an orphanage, and, second, preventing rival circus owners from claiming "Adgie's" animals. Both problems are solved when, after a pulse tingling sequence in which "Adgie" captures an escaped lion, "Fixer" flimflams "Darlow" out of his claim.

Previewed at the RKO Hillstreet theatre, the Hollywood downtown audience evinced a satisfactory interest.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Reporter Investigates Liberty

(Technique-British)

Topical Documentary

This, the second of an inventive independent series, the "Roving Reporter," treats of the subject of individual and civic liberty in England and the United States. The treatment resembles greatly that of "The March of Time," has much of its vividness and not a little of its force, and provokes thought and discussion without being either discursive or controversial. The freedom of the Negro, liberty of expression in public, bathing dresses and gambling, are among the subjects considered. The treatment suggests that what is liberty for England is sometimes its antithesis for America, and sometimes vice versa. The pictorial handling of the subjects is swift and pointed, and the commentary, in Canadian accents, forthright. Because the subject is topical, because it avoids the more aggravating and provocative arguments, and because it has a direct American appeal, this subject makes an immediate bid for the more intelligent section of the American market. Running time, 17 minutes.—B. A.

Mr. Freeman had been in New York for about two weeks; his departure was the first move in his return journey to Australia.

Arthur Loew, vice-president in charge of foreign sales for Loew's, who was to have been host at the luncheon, was unable to attend because of a sprained tendon.

Admission tax collections in March jumped $103,869 to $1,606,996, from $1,503,127 in February, but continued decidedly below the 1938 level, when March receipts were $1,773,075, it is shown by figures released this week by the Internal Revenue Bureau, Washington.

Admission tax revenues for the first quarter of the calendar year and the first three quarters of the fiscal year were considerably below those of the corresponding periods a year ago, it was reported.

During the first quarter, collections aggregated $4,674,257.72, a loss of approximately $112,000 from the $4,786,131.93 received in the first three months of last year, and during the fiscal-year period they were $14,988,832.06, a loss of $1,251,316.96 from the $16,240,149.02 of a year ago, the bureau said.

Asks Motion Pictures for Religious Instruction

Motion pictures to train the young in religious principles were advocated recently to the National Catholic Educational Association by Brother Angelus, C.F.X., principal of the St. Matthews School, in Brooklyn, New York City. Said Brother Angelus:

"For practical knowledge of Catholic worship, especially in its central theme, the holy sacrifice of the mass, and for correct impressions of the administration and reception of the sacraments, the film has definite values."

The association devoted itself, not only to the above theme, but also to other methods of expanding Catholic education, to meet the changing world conditions.

FRENCH PRODUCERS PROTEST PAY OF STARS BUT THE SYSTEM STAYS

Most Producers Make One or Two Films a Year and Know Rivals Will Pay If They Don't; Salaries Up to Million Francs

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

French film producers are protesting, following identical complaints in the press, that their film stars are receiving too high salaries. National newspapers are waging a campaign against the "exaggerated" pay of some French film stars. Players mentioned include Jean Gabin, Michel Simon, Raimu, Fernandel, Danielle Darrieux, Simone Simon.

Follows Simon Disagreement

This question of star salaries, dormant for months, burst forth again when Arnold Pressburger, producer, and Raymond Bernard, director, were obliged to name other players for the temperamental Simone Simon in two of her three roles in their current "Cavalcade d'Amour" ("Love Cavalcade"). The action is set in 1639, 1839, 1939 and includes three parallel stories in three different periods.

Simone Simon, who had started in the film two weeks earlier with her role in the 1839 period, arranged to go to the studio every other day instead of daily. Illness was given as the reason. The studio physician said that she was not ill. Finally she returned. Then, according to the press, she refused to say the lines because she "did not like them." Whereupon producer and directors agreed they had had enough. They picked two other players for the two other roles. Corinne Luchaire, young French star of the English and British versions of "Prison Without Bars," was chosen for the modern part and Janine Darcey, a promising French actress, for the 1639 period.

Since her return from Hollywood, last July, Simone Simon had appeared in only one French film, "La Bete Humaine," from Emile Zola's novel, and directed by Jean Renoir. She had co-starred with Jean Gabin.

Action Approved

The action of the producer and director brought general approbation, and the French Production Chamber was reported to be ready to back the producer if a suit followed..

The critics, Georges Champeaux in the weekly "Gringoire," Paul Reboux in the daily "Paris Midi," and Pierre Wolff in the evening daily, "Paris Soir," wrote vehement articles against "the bad practice that French producers have adopted by paying too high salaries to their stars."

Salaries paid to a few stars range from 700,000 to one million francs ($20,000 to $30,000) per picture, 20 to 25 per cent of the total budget.

Salaries of the following French stars for their latest films are revealed to have been:

	Francs	Dollars
Jean Gabin	1,100,000	($30,000)
Danielle Darrieux	1,000,000	($27,000)
Simone Simon	800,000	($21,000)
Fernandel	700,000	($20,000)
Raimu	550,000	($15,000)
Michèle Morgan	500,000	($14,500)

Jean Gabin is the star of "Grand Illusion," "Lower Depths," and the original French "Algiers." Fernandel's comedies are popular with the French masses. Raimu is one of the best received French actors. Michèle Morgan has been in America in "Orage" and "Heart of Paris" (Griboulle).

The main difference between the American and French systems of production is that in France there is practically no star under yearly contract with the producers. Most producers make one or two films a year. So, if a producer who wants to engage a star refuses to pay the salary asked he knows that his next competitor will grant it.

Despite all the criticisms a remedy is not easily found. Many independent producers (nearly all foreign refugees) announce a film when they have not one hundred dollars to produce it. Having options on big stars, they sell the picture in advance to the foreign buyers and the French regional distributors, so that they have the funds or at least the credits which allow them to start their film. The only cash they need is for advertising.

Some stars, unknown two years ago, have signed three or four-year contracts with agents for a flat yearly amount of, say $3,000. These agents now obtain film contracts for which they are officially paid $10,000 per film for instance, but the difference, $7,000 ($10,000—$3,000) is kept by the agent.

One proposal is that the big stars be paid a flat salary, not exceeding $1,500, plus a percentage on receipts.

Fifteen Films In Work

Since the beginning of March, 15 French features have been in production, a figure much higher than for the same period in previous years.

One of the most important is "La Loi Du Nord" ("Law of the North") directed by Jacques Feyder (of "Carnival in Flanders") co-starring Michèle Morgan and Pierre Richard Wilm.

Jean Renoir, son of the painter Renoir and director of "Lower Depths," and "Grand Illusion," has founded a producing company, Nouvelle Edition Française, a cooperative organization of film talent, and is making "La Regle du Jeu" ("Rule of the Game"). Renoir wrote the screen-play, is producer and director, and plays an important role with Nora Gregor.

Marcel L'Herbier, director, has completed an ambitious production on the Franco-British friendship, "Entente Cordiale."

"Le Jour Se Leve" ("The Day Is Rising"), a melodrama, is being directed by the young Marcel Carné. Jean Gabin and Jacqueline Laurent are co-starred.

Pierre Chenal is working on "Le Dernier Tournant" ("The Last Corner"), starring Fernand Gravet, with Corinne Luchaire.

There are also in production "Cavalcade D'Amour," as mentioned; "La Tradition de Minuit," starring Viviane Romance; "The Sacred Law," with Marcelle Chantal; "Le Feu de Paille" ("Short-Lived Blaze"), with Lucien Baroux, Orane Damazis, and Florence Luchaire; and "Cinq Jours D'Angoisse" ("Five Days of Anxiety").

Finns' Censors See More U. S. Films

The Finnish Government Film Censorship Bureau reviewed 378 features, of which 201 were American, in 1938, according to a report to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce from the American Consulate at Helsinki. This compares with 330 films reviewed by the bureau in 1937, of which 186 were American.

Films from other countries reviewed by the bureau in 1938 were listed as follows: German, 56; French, 55; Swedish, 24; Finnish, 19; British, 10; Italian, 3; Czechoslovakia, 2; Norwegian, 2, and the following one each: Danish, Polish, Swiss, Hungarian, Russian and Palestinian.

The bureau banned 10 films in 1938, eight of which were American and two French. In 1937, 21 films were banned, as follows: American, 13; French, 2; British, 4, and German, 2.

There were 983 short subjects, of which 538 were American, reviewed in 1938. In 1937, the bureau reviewed 815 short subjects; 462 were American. No short subjects were banned in 1938 and only one, American, was banned in 1937. Finland followed America in the number of short subjects reviewed, having a total of 199, while Germany had 139.

In addition to the prohibited films, the censors required in 1938 cuts totaling 1,223 meters from 48 films. In the previous year 19 films were cut for a total of 769 meters. The reduction in the number of banned films and the increase in the number of films cut is attributed to a new policy of the board.

They are David O. Selznick, Alexander Korda, Walter Wanger, Samuel Goldwyn, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Ernst Lubitsch, Edward Small, Sol Lesser, David Loew.

Tuesday afternoon, Harry Gold and Jack Schlaifer will commence their sales conferences with United Artists representatives. The dinner will be at Earl Carroll's Tuesday evening.

Sales conferences will be continued throughout Wednesday. In the evening, the Convention Special train will take the entire group to San Francisco.

Republic's New Plans

Supplementing the company's regional sales conventions of last month, Herbert J. Yates, in Hollywood last Friday, announced that Republic will build up its contract roster of name players and directors, and that next year's product will be featured by six "Anniversary Specials" having budgets comparable to "Man of Conquest," four even greater. Cost of "Conquest" has been variously estimated as between $750,000 and $1,000,000.

Mr. Yates said that M. J. Siegel, president of the production company, would each year spend a month in New York looking over material and players.

Gene Autry westerns, according to Mr. Yates, now are commanding 50 per cent more rental prices this year than last year. Their budgets are being tilted by one-third. Mr. Yates will complete arrangements with Autry for the cowboy star to tour England with his horse "Champ."

Mr. Yates said his company expects its foreign grosses to increase 100 per cent.

Summoned to the studio last Friday by E. H. Goldstein, general manager, and Walter Compton, studio publicity director, Hollywood reporters heard Mr. Yates deny that there will be any shakeup in production personnel.

Republic will look more to the stage for talent, he added. Explaining the company's trade-practice relations with exhibitors, Mr. Yates said his company is "willing to make adjustments." He will remain in Hollywood for several weeks taking time out to attend the regional sales convention in San Francisco. On his way back to New York, he may stop at Portland, Seattle and Salt Lake City.

Mr. Gates is continuing negotiations to purchase outright the studio property which it is now occupying.

Metro Increases Product to Minimum of 44 Features, Maximum 52; Eddie Cantor and Fred Astaire Are Signed

With the acquisition of new stars, with numerous cast assignments, and the purchase of several play and story properties, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Thursday issued in New York a supplementary product announcement for 1939-40. This amplifies the plans made known at the convention in March. The product total is raised from a minimum of 40 to 44 and a maximum of 52, plus 79 shorts.

Cantor and Astaire Sign

Eddie Cantor is a new star addition, and will make his MGM debut in "Banjo Eyes," a comedy-drama with music. Fred Astaire, also newly signed, will co-star with Eleanor Powell in "Broadway Melody of 1940." Edward G. Robinson will have the lead role in "Blackmail." James Stewart has been elevated to stardom.

Norma Shearer will be starred in "Pride and Prejudice," the play by Helen Jerome from the novel by Jane Austen. Miss Shearer's first production of the new season will be "The Women," in which she is starred with Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell.

Jeanette MacDonald will star in a musical version of "Smilin' Thru," the romance by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin, which Robert Z. Leonard will direct. Miss MacDonald also will co-star with Nelson Eddy in "Silent Knight," from the play by Eugene Heltai. These stars in addition will appear together in "Lover Come Back to Me." Nelson Eddy will also be seen in "Balalaika" with Ilona Massey.

"Park Avenue Model," to be produced from an original by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin, has been added to Joan Crawford's starring schedule, which already includes "House of Glass," "A Lady Comes to Town" and in addition "The Women."

"American Newlyweds" will introduce a new family series, dealing with a young married American couple.

Robert Montgomery will go to England to star in two: "Earl of Chicago," an original by Brock Williams, and "Busman's Holiday," from a novel by Dorothy Sayres. These will be produced at the Denham Studios.

Busby Berkeley and Norman McLeod have been signed to direct.

Greer Garson will be starred in "Susan and God," the play by Rachel Crothers. Donat will have the lead in "Ruined City," based on the novel "Kindling," by Nevil Shute. Spencer Tracy will be starred in "Witch in the Wilderness," to be directed by King Vidor from the novel by Desmond Holdridge.

Other new season productions already under way are the Selznick-International "Gone With the Wind," "On Borrowed Time," and "The Wizard of Oz."

"Northwest Passage," starring Spencer Tracy and Robert Taylor, will resume production on location shortly, with King Vidor the director.

Other new season productions from which MGM's 1939-40 releases will be drawn are: "It Can't Happen Here," "Ziegfeld Follies," "Madame Curie," "Ninotschka," "Thunder Afloat," "Guns and Fiddles," "A Day at the

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Exports and Imports

Despite jittery Europe's war talk, Hollywood nonetheless is continuing about the business of exporting and importing picture making talent.

Paramount's Ray Milland and Ellen Drew are already en route to England to make "French Without Tears." Over here, British artists William Fyffe and Margaret Lockwood are working in Frank Lloyd's "Ruler of the Seas." Mr. Lloyd, Scotch himself, had endeavored to impress upon Mr. Fyffe that he would have to talk with less "brr" in his accent, is now rolling his "R's" worse than Mr. Fyffe. Paramount may also have Elizabeth Bergner over here for a picture in the summer months.

Robert Montgomery wasn't back from Washington long before he got orders from MGM to proceed to England to make two pictures, "Busman's Holiday" and "The Earl of Chicago." In return for Mr. Montgomery, there is a distinct possibility that Robert Donat will come to Hollywood, and Miss Greer Garson, who appears with Donat in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," is a candidate for a trip to Hollywood.

Annabella will be sent overseas by Twentieth Century-Fox, whereas RKO Radio is preparing to welcome Anna Neagle, star, and Herbert Wilcox, producer, who will combine their talents in "The Life of Edith Cavell."

David O. Selznick, who imported Vivien Leigh for "Gone with the Wind," also has imported Alfred Hitchcock to direct "Rebecca."

Ring in the New

As April passes from the calendar, one-fourth of the twelve newly started productions are pictures announced for 1939-40 schedules. The remainder of the new work as well as all that has been completed are for making good 1938-39 announcements, particularly so far as total number of deliveries is concerned.

One of the three productions started by MGM is decidedly unusual. Based on a successful New York stage play, "The Women" will present an all-woman cast. Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell are the headliners who will have as support Joan Fontaine, Phyllis Povar, Muriel Hutchinson, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey, Ann Morris, Virginia Weidler and Mary Nash. The second picture, "Lady of the Tropics," will star Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr, with newcomer Gloria Franklin, a recruit from metropolitan stages, and Ernest Cossart heading the support cast which is yet to be completed. The stars of the third picture, "Stronger Than Desire," are Walter Pidgeon and Virginia Bruce.

Twentieth Century-Fox started only one picture but that, too, is unusual. With Elsa Maxwell, noted eastern social arbiter, featured, "Hotel for Women" also will present Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Lynn Bari, Alan Dinehart, Chic Chandler, Joyce Compton, Gregory Gaye, Ann Sothern and many of the studio's stock company of youthful feminine players.

Two pictures were started at Universal. "In Old California," first of a series in which Richard Arlen will be featured, will be seen Andy Devine, Constance Moore, Noah Beery, Thurston Hall and Paul Fix. June Lang, Dick Foran and Harry Carey are the principals in "Inside Information."

RESCUING THE SETS AFTER SNOWSTORM

MGM's "Northwest Passage", production of which was called off last fall when everything up in the McCall, Idaho, location became buried under too many feet of snow, will reenter production about June 1st.

King Vidor, director, and Jay Marchant, production manager, are leaving for the location site within the next few days to find out just what is left of the exterior sets that were constructed last Indian summer. Immediately upon their return and report a construction crew will be sent north to put the sets together again. Meanwhile, King Vidor and Laurence Stallings are polishing the final script.

Paramount Starts Two

Paramount put two productions into work. "Our Leading Citizen" will present Bob Burns and Susan Hayward, with Joseph Allen, Elizabeth Patterson and Gene and Kathleen Lockhart. Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland will be teamed again for "Homework," the cast of which also will include Donald O'Connor, Billy Lee and Joyce Matthews.

Samuel Goldwyn started active production work on "The Real Glory," starring Gary Cooper and featuring Andrea Leads, David Niven, Reginald Owen and Broderick Crawford. Other players are Maurice Moscovitch, Thurston Hall, Walter Brennan and Henry Kolker.

"The Girl from Nowhere" was started at Monogram. It will present Warren Hull and Anne Nagel, with Mayo Methot, Lester Matthews and Aileen Pringle.

For RKO-Radio distribution, Sol Lesser started "Way Down South." Bobby Breen is the star. Charles Middleton, Lillian Yarbo, Robert Greig and Allan Mowbray are members of the support. Many more names are to be added.

Although no feminine lead has as yet been selected, Columbia started "Coast Guard." Randolph Scott, Ralph Bellamy and Walter Connolly will be featured.

New Version of Classic

Outstanding in the list of seven completed pictures is "The Man in the Iron Mask," Edward Small production for United Artists. It will feature Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale and Miles Mander, with Bert Roach, Marian Martin, William Royle, Doris Kenyon, Albert Decker, Montagu Love, scores of character players and hundred of extras.

Two pictures were finished at Universal. "Old Grad" will present Charles Grapewin, Anita Louise, Dick Foran, Frances Robinson, Richard Lane, Berton Churchill, Samuel S. Hinds, David Holt, Jerry Marlowe, Eddie Acuff and Cully Richards. The second film to be finished, "Tidal Wave," will present Fred Stone, Ralph Byrd, Marc Lawrence, Frank Jenks and Dorothy Lee.

RKO Radio also moved two pictures from the active shooting list. In "The Dove" will be seen Leo Carrillo, Steffi Duna, Tim Holt, Donald McBride, Chris Pin-Martin, Edward Raquello, Paul Fix, Julian Rivero, Frank Puglia, Esther Muir, Paul Sutton and Charles Stevens. Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, Lucille Ball, Kent Taylor and Elisabeth Risdon are the principals in "Five Came Back." C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Calleia, Patric Knowles, Allen Jenkins, Casey Johnson, and Dick Hogan represent added name values.

At 20th Century-Fox "East Side, West Side" was finished. The cast lists Kane Richmond, Amanda Duff, Henry Armetta, June Gale, Leona Roberts, Frank Reicher, Edward Norris and Scotty Beckett.

Monogram finished "Across the Plains," in which Jack Randall, Joyce Bryant, Frank Yaconelli and Glenn Strange will be seen.

"Million Dollar Legs," second collegiate production which William C. Thomas has made recently for Paramount, was completed on schedule. For names it will offer Betty Grable, John Hartley, Donald O'Connor, Jackie Coogan, Larry Crabbe, Peter Hayes, Dorothea Kent, Richard Denning, Matty Kemp, Thurston Hall, Edward Arnold, Jr., Philip Warren and Roy Gordon.

New Young Faces

In Walter Wanger's "Winter Carnival," a story of Darmouth College Days and nights during the annual snowbound period, with Ann Sheridan and Richard Carlson starred, will have only one player more than 28 years old and only three over 25 years of age.

Consequently several young players who seem to have more than usual screen talent and personality will be given real opportunities to achieve screen greatness. From Stanford's campus has come athletic young James Corner for the role of the college ski champion. The lad had film experience in "What a Life."

Alan Baldwin, a Samuel Goldwyn discovery, has been borrowed for the role of the young editor of the campus daily who wants to revolutionize collegiate journalism. Among others who will support the stars are 15-year-old Joan Brodel and Virginia Gilmore, who plays a chaperon although she is only 18. Helen Parrish, 17, most recently in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," will be seen as Miss Sheridan's younger sister. Jimmy Butler, only 19, has an important part.

Herbert Rawlinson and Jack Mulhall, actors, have been signed as scouts for the second Jesse L. Lasky "Gateway to Hollywood" talent search. Mr. Rawlinson will cover the east and Mr. Mulhall the midwest.

Charles Richards, for three years casting director for Selznick International, has resigned. Fred Schuessler, formerly with Paramount, succeeds him.

The National Conference on Visual Education will be held June 19-23 at the Francis Parker school in Chicago, according to Berman A. DeVry, sponsor

The 1940 program represents an increase of four features over this year, and maintains the same number of westerns. The company handles no shorts or serials.

$8,850,000 Sales Quota

The 1939-40 sales quota has been set at $8,850,000, an increase of $2,505,000 over 1938-39, Mr. Johnston told the 150 home office, studio and field and franchise delegates to the company's seventh annual convention, in session at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, from Thursday through the weekend.

There will be a 50 per cent increase in budgets for 18 features in the top brackets and a 25 per cent rise in budgets for the remaining 12 of the 30, this in line with the general trend of virtually all of the 11 large companies to raise filming investments for the new season.

Monogram will join Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Republic and other distributors in directing stronger efforts at the Latin-American markets, the convention heard.

Three Groups of Features

The 30 features are divided into three groups. The first of six has been named "W. Ray Johnston Anniversary Specials," commemorating the company executive's 25th year in the industry. Two remaining groups of 12 each are listed as "Box-Office Attractions" and "Showman's Success Series."

Among the more important productions listed, all in top brackets, are: "Rip Van Winkle," based on the Washington Irving story; "Queen of the Yukon," by Jack London; "Son of the Navy," by Grover Jones and True Boardman; "His Father's Son," by Matt Taylor; "Oliver Twist," a screen version of the Charles Dickens book; and "Under Northern Lights," from the music and lyrics of Charles Wakefield Cadman.

"Freckles Comes Home" will continue the adventures of Freckles in a story by Jeannette Stratton-Porter, to be made on a large budget.

Boris Karloff is to be seen in four features on the doings of Mr. Wong, detective character created by Hugh Wiley in Collier's. The titles are: "Mr. Wong Vanishes," "Mr. Wong in Havana," "Mr. Wong's Chinatown Squad" and "Mr. Wong in New York."

Four John Trent Features

John Trent, who created the role of Tailspin Tommy, continues in that part in four features based on the syndicated cartoon strip by Hal Forrest. The four are: "Aces of the Air," "Transcontinental Plane," "Danger Flight," and "Sky Patrol."

Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran, Frankie Darro and others are on the program. Marcia Mae Jones and Jackie Moran are to appear in four films entitled: "Tomboy," "Hoosier Schooldays," "Haunted House," and "Kid Reporters." Frankie Darro is to be seen in four features. They are "Arm of the Law," "East Side Kid," "That Gang of Mine" and "Boys of the City."

JOHNSTON VIEWS TELEVISION

Ten years hence motion pictures may flicker across television screens in the living rooms of American homes with "fans" selecting the quality of their film programs by the number of coins they drop into a meter, according to W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram.

"Television," he declared, "offers no threat to the motion picture industry in its present stage of development, and it can't become a threat for five, 10, maybe 15 years." Hollywood, however, is seriously thinking about television, he said. "We will probably work out some arrangement with the telephone companies whereby people will be able to drop 25 cents in a meter and see a 'B' picture or 40 cents and see an 'A.' But before television reaches the home, we will have it in the theatres.

"Television will not displace the movies. It will be just another step in the advancement of the film industry.

Tex Ritter will play in eight westerns, as will Jack Randall. Two of the action dramas in which Randall will appear are based on the tales of James Fenimore Cooper, "The Prairie" and "The Pioneers."

The complete player roster includes:

John Carroll
Martin Spellman
Frankie Darro
Jackie Moran
Milburn Stone
Jack Randall
Marjorie Reynolds
Movita
Marcia Mae Jones
Boris Karloff
Jean Parker
Grant Withers
Tex Ritter
John Trent

The list of producers and production supervisors numbers eight:

William T. Lackey
Edward F. Finney
Paul Malvern
E. B. Derr
Robert Tansey
Lindsley Parsons

Directors for the new season are as follows:

William Nigh
Howard Bretherton
Al Herman
George Waggner
Lambert Hillyer
Allen James

Major Edward J. Kelly was invited to make the opening address, as well as Jack Hirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, and Morris Leonard, head of the Illinois Exhibitors Association.

After the reading of the roll call by John S. Harrington, of the home office, the convention host, Henri Elman, Monogram Chicago franchise holder, made an address of welcome.

George W. Weeks, vice-president for distribution, reveiwed the sales record for 1938-39.

Production plans for the new year were discussed by Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president for production, after which Mr. Weeks again took the floor to point out the highlights of the new pictures program.

Louis S. Lifton, director of advertising and publicity, discussed methods planned for advertising and publicizing the new product; Lloyd Lind pointed out the benefits of cooperation with the contract department.

Edward Silverman and Sidney Spiegel, of dresses of welcome. Edward Kuykendall, MPTOA president, also was present.

William Jaffee, of Rosenblatt and Jaffee, legal counsel for the company, spoke on business-building achievements.

Martin Spellman, juvenile star, of "Boys Town" and "Streets of New York," was presented.

Eye on Latin-America

That Monogram is planning a series of productions with a definite appeal to the Latin-American market, was pointed out by Norton V. Ritchey, manager of Monogram's export department.

"We found that 'Rose of the Rio Grande' was a success below the Rio Grande and yet it lost none of its appeal for the Northern American market merely because a little Spanish dialogue and two Mexican songs were injected into it," said Mr. Ritchey. "Movita, the Mexican star, who was seen with John Carroll in the production, enjoys popularity in all of South and Central America and is equally well-known in the United States.

"Movita will be starred in a similar type of offering to be known as the 'Girl from Rio,' which should have appeal in the southern republics. Likewise one of the Boris Karloff pictures for the coming season, based on the Hugh Wiley stories in Colliers' Magazine, will be called 'Mr. Wong in Havana' and every effort is being made to give this story the correct Cuban background. 'Wings Over the Andes' will be the title of one of the 'Tailspin Tommy' productions based on the syndicated comic strip, popular in Latin America.

"As central European countries are being closed to American product," continued Mr. Ritchey, "we realize that the Latin-American market is assuming greater importance than ever before. We are concentrating on securing better story material and players with the idea of making a large portion of our productions particularly suitable to the Latin-American market. One Spanish production, 'Castillos En El Aire' was released last year and other Spanish pictures are being contemplated for the new program."

John W. Mangham, John Franconi and William Hurlbut are to be heard before Edward A. Golden, vice-president for distribution, closes Friday's session.

John Balaban a Speaker

The agenda for Saturday lists John Balaban, president of Balaban and Katz, as the opening speaker, presenting the "exhibitor's reaction."

Norman Bede Rydge, chairman of the board of directors of British Empire Films, Ltd., distributor of Monogram films in Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania, will discuss the "'Down-under' Angle." The balance of Saturday morning's session will be devoted to talks by Charles W. Trampe, Sam Rosen, Reginald Wilson, eastern division manager; Mel Hulling, western division manager; Joe Felder, Steve Broidy and John Trent, Monogram star.

In the afternoon. Leon Fromkess, treasurer, will be the first speaker. Howard Stubbins follows with a report on west coast activities. Manny Reiner, pressbook editor, will discuss exploitation in the field, after which Joseph A. Kehoe, manager of the non-theatrical depart-

Hearing June 5 on RKO Plan Appeal

Argument of the three appeals from the decision of William Bondy, federal judge, confirming the plan of reorganization of RKO, has been set for June 5th by the United States circuit court of appeals.

The court fixed that date while denying an application of Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, to dismiss the appeals of Copeia Realty Corporation, and Ernest W. Stirn, because of failure to file records on appeal. The court ordered Copeia and Mr. Stirn to file their records no later than May 22d.

Atlas Corporation lost an application for an order directing the three appealing parties to file a consolidated record. The circuit court ruled that each record be filed separately. H. Cassel and Company won permission to file a 70 page brief, the rules ordinarily limiting briefs to 50 pages.

Says Quality Clause Hits Small Producer

The quality clause of the British Quota Act has operated to force the small producer out of business with the result that 65 per cent of England's studios are empty, E. T. Carr, United Artists' joint managing director for Great Britain, said this week on his arrival in New York from England.

Despite this result, Mr. Carr said, there is little likelihood of any change in the quota provisions in the immediate future. He said its disadvantages will be greatly outweighed eventually, in that the quality producer in England will be placed in a better position in the world markets in relation to the Hollywood producer.

On Tuesday Mr. Carr, Murray Silverstone and Mr. Farnol left New York for the company's coast convention.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

They Asked for It

(Universal)

Comedy-Melodrama

While this will be a newspaper story of melodrama, romance and comedy, the subject matter will be approached from a fresh viewpoint.

The monotony of a small town is not productive of sensational stories, and so the young editor-publisher cooks one up. He makes extravagant capital of a seemingly ordinary death case by indicating it is a mysterious murder. The case eventually turns out to be a real murder.

For names the picture will provide William Lundigan, who was in "Dodge City," Joy Hodges, currently in "The Family Next Door," Michael Whalen, who was long with 20th Century-Fox; Lyle Talbot, Thomas Beck, Spencer Charters and Edward McWade.

John B. Lowell wrote the original story which Arthur T. Horman adapted. Direction is in the hands of Frank McDonald, who did several numbers in the Warner "Torchy Blane" series.

Release date: May 19, 1939.

Million Dollar Legs

(Paramount)

Collegiate Comedy

Annually for the last several years Paramount has delivered a college life picture. Such titles as "Collegiate," "College Humor," "College Holiday" and "College Rythm" are readily recalled. All have had to do with college antics and coed romances, with some spectacular athletic event providing the thrill action that supplements the love interest, comedy and music.

In the case of "Million Dollar Legs," which, despite its alien title, is nonetheless the studio's yearly college picture, the elements that have been used before will be employed again.

William C. Thomas and Nicke Grinde, the producer-director team that turned out the basketball film, "Campus Confessions," are in charge.

Personal name value will be represented by Betty Grable, John Hartley, Donald O'Connor, Jackie Coogan, Larry Crabbe, Peter Hayes, Dorothea Kent, Richard Denning, Matty Kemp, Thurston Hall, Eddie Arnold, Jr., Phillip Warren and Roy Gordon, a cast of youths sprinkled with a few more mature performers.

Release date: Aug. 18, 1939 (tentative).

Give Me a Child

(Warner Bros.)

Melodrama

About seven years ago Warner Brothers made a melodrama of life beginning and life ending, "Life Begins," which in many phases was similar to the theme of "Give Me a Child." The major locale is the maternity ward of a county hospital. There come many women ready to give birth to babies. Some want them, find great happiness; some don't want children, would give them away. The real story, however, concerns one woman, a convicted murderess. Throughout the many anti-climaxes and the tragic finale there is serious entertainment which provokes thought.

An unusual production but one which, "Life Begins" proved, has deep significance to women, this picture will feature Geraldine Fitzgerald, presently appearing in "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights"; Jeffrey Lynn and Gale Page, who were seen in "Four Daughters"; Gladys George, Spring Byington, Johnnie Davis, Gloria Holden, Henry O'Neill, Eve Arden, Nanette Farabes.

Lloyd Bacon is directing from a screen play by Robert Rossen.

Release date: Not to be determined.

Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever

(MGM)

Domestic Comedy

For "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," the most notable additions to the regular "Hardy Family" cast will be Terry Kilburn, earlier in "Lord Jeff" and "A Christmas Carol"; Helen Gilbert, who will make her screen debut, and Sidney Miller. Instead of George Seitz, who has directed all previous pictures in the series, W. S. Van Dyke will be at the helm.

All the action takes place in the "Hardy" home town, Carvel, and the theme has to do with the crumbling of two air castles. With the coming of spring, the Judge visions legitimate wealth as high pressure promoters convince him some land he owns contains a valuable mineral deposit. Meanwhile, "Andy," jilted by his regular girl friend, has fallen in love with a new school teacher.

Release date: To be determined.

The Old Maid

(Warner Bros.)

A Woman's Picture

In her last several pictures, "Dark Victory" and "Juarez" notably, the roles assigned Betty Davis (winner of the last Best Actress Award of the Academy for her characterization in "Jezebel") has been called upon to interpret emotional roles. Always she has been the one who suffers greatly, provokes the tears. In "The Old Maid" she will play the part of a mother denied the love of her own child. Not even when the mother kisses her child goodby on her own wedding day does her offspring realize she is kissing her own mother.

The time is 1861-81 and the locale is Philadelphia. While all writing credits have not as yet been fully decided, "The Old Maid" is being directed by Edmund Goulding, who directed Miss Davis in "Dark Victory." As the man she loves, although he will not appear in the picture for very long, is George Brent, who played opposite her in "Dark Victory." Jane Bryan will be seen as her daughter (matured). The principal supporting characters are Miriam Hopkins, James Stephenson, Donald Crisp, Jerome Cowan, Louise Fazenda, William Lundigan and Cecilia Loftus.

Release date: To be determined.

Career

(RKO Radio)

Human Interest

It is hardly likely that many exhibitors will overlook the publicity value of two newcomers who will be featured in "Career." They are John Archer and Alice Eden, the winners of Jesse Lasky's first "Gateway to Hollywood" radio talent search. The story has nothing to do with the personal careers of either. It is a cross section of life in a midwestern town early in the depression and it is fiction.

The principal character is a tolerant but resolute country store keeper whose problems are to try to keep hidden the memory of his first love who married his rival, to endeavor to smooth out the romantic troubles in his own family and those of his acquaintances, and to be a real friend to his fellow townsmen. Prevention of a local financial panic is one of his accomplishments.

Edward Ellis, who scored impressively in "A Man to Remember," will be in the leading role. For straight screen name values the picture will make available those of Anne Shirley, now in "Sorority House"; Samuel S. Hinds, whose current film is "Calling Dr. Kildare"; Leon Errol, Raymond Hatton, Maurice Murphy, Janet Beecher and John Qualen.

The basis of the Robert Fisk production is a play by Phil Stong (author of "State Fair") and Chester Erskine. The screen play is credited to Dalton Trumbo and Bert Granet. Leigh Jason is directing.

Release date: To be determined.

The Battle of the City Hall

(Warner Bros.)

Melodrama

From the time of their screen debut in the Samuel Goldwyn picture, "The Dead End Kids" usually have been cast in roles wherein they have been quite a problem for the agencies of law and order. In "The Battle of City Hall," however, the situation will be reversed, and the youngsters, on their own, will demonstrate how they rid the community of criminal elements.

One of their allies, a boy who has a reform school record, has been framed into a criminal charge which menaces him with a penitentiary sentence. The youngsters set about to save their pal and discomfort their enemies. Their opportunity comes in a Boys' Week celebration when one of their number, named mayor for a week, appoints his fellows to other executive offices. Though they find it impossible legally to do the things they plan, they do, with the help of a friendly policeman, capture the two top adult criminals and by taunting, heckling and other juvenile means of torture force the liberation of their cohort and break up the gangster ring.

David Gorcey heads the "Dead End Kids" and Frankie Thomas is the friend they save. Other youngsters are Bernard Nedell and Bonita Granville. The grownup players will be Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Henry O'Neill, Eduardo Ciannelli and Marc Lawrence.

NEW TAXATION MOVES FACED IN FOUR STATES

Florida Chain Bill Would Harass Theatres; Other Bills in Wisconsin, New York and Missouri

New taxation confronts exhibitors in Florida, Wisconsin, New York and Missouri, as the result of actions this week in the state legislatures of each. Otherwise legislative moves affecting the industry were scarce this week, involving a few local "Blue Law" measures and two state bills in Illinois to ban double bills and to bar pictures in which appear players married more than twice.

Florida Chain Bill

Circuit theatres would be included in Florida's present chain store tax if a bill introduced in the Florida legislature becomes law. The bill places a tax on all theatres operated by chains in the state, the tax being based upon the number of theatres operated by a circuit throughout the country. The tax would be paid only for the theatres located in Florida, and the money used for the public school fund.

On each theatre in chains of not more than five, the tax would be $75; on each theatre in chains of five to 15, it would be $750, and then gradually increased until chains of 80 or more theatres would pay $3,500 on each theatre. The latter figure would affect the Sparks circuit, operating nearly 100 theatres in the state, and the Paramount circuit, which has a number of houses in the Miami district. Hernando County, the home of Representative Johnson, who sponsored the bill, has only one theatre in operation.

Double Tax in Wisconsin

A substitute measure which would double the original tax schedule on theatres is being planned in Wisconsin, despite exhibitor protests against the original measure, the Alfonsi-Grobschmidt circuit theatre tax bill, which provides for an occupational tax ranging from five to 100 dollars per theatre and a seat tax of from one to 15 cents per seat.

Appearing against the original bill, before the Assembly judiciary committee, were C. W. Trampe, exhibitor; E. J. Brown, representing the State Conference of Electrical Workers; Gilbert Vandercook, Fox Wisconsin; Charles F. Puls, Jr., Standard Theatres; Stephen Thomas, Association of Stage Employees and Projectionists, and Mark Morgan, Eskin Theatres. They warned that excessive taxes would put the theatres out of business.

Pending before the Wisconsin Assembly is the Rubin bill, designed to give equal rights regardless of race, creed, color or nationality, in public places including theatres. The Gawronski bill, relating to a board of examiners of persons engaged in the installation and maintenance of air-conditioning systems, has been introduced in the Senate.

New York Action

In New York, passage by the Republican majority in the Senate and Assembly of a budget which cut more than $30,000,000 from Governor Herbert Lehman's proposed budget of $415,000,000, eliminated the real estate tax of one dollar per $1,000, and the two-tenths of one per cent business turnover levy, both of which would affect the industry. Passage of the budget will be questioned in the courts, it has been announced by the Civil Service Association.

Appropriation bills calling for a cigaret tax, income and stock transfer taxes in addition to a motion picture film inspection levy, were to be approved during the week. The fight waged by the League of New York Theatres for enforcement of a code puttting a ceiling of 75 cents above the boxoffice price on brokers' prices has been reported to have a good chance of success, with possible passage of the bill limiting mark ups, which was proposed by Assemblyman MacNeil Mitchell and Senator Frederic Coudert.

Now awaiting Governor Lehman's signature for enaction are the Owens bill, which permits 20 per cent of the voters in certain villages to petition for a referendum on the subject of Sunday showings, and the Moffat-Coudert bill allowing radio stations to give a "fair and true report" on proceedings without being subject to libel judgments.

Extending Missouri Tax

The Missouri House has passed a second bill extending the two per cent sales tax for two years from December 31st, 1939, its expiration date. The Senate Ways and Means Committee already has approved the first sales tax extension bill passed by the House, but the new one makes some changes in collection. Both will now be considered by the Senate.

Sunday showings were also a subject of attention in four other localities. The East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Church, in conference this week at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, endorsed measures identical to those now pending before both Houses of the Pennsylvania legislature, calling for repeal of the Act of 1935 which permits Sunday films under the local option plan.

In Buena Vista, Va., the legality of Sunday showings will be determined some time in July; and until then there can be none, according to a recent ruling by Judge Joseph Glascow. Jurists in Richmond and other Virginia cities have ruled Sunday shows legal.

Still a Crime

Despite the recent legalization of Sunday exhibition in Maine, it is still a crime to attend Sunday films there. The Legislature overlooked an old blue law providing that "any person present at any dance, show or public diversion or entertainment on the Sabbath shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10."

In Fall River, Mass., the City Council killed by a five to four vote a proposed ordinance which would have denied Sunday amusement licenses to any theatres located within 200 feet of a church.

A bill to prohibit double features in Illinois has been advanced by the House to its third reading; while a bill prohibiting actors or actresses who have been divorced more than twice from appearing on Illinois screens is scheduled for consideration this week.

The Ontario legislature has rejected the Toronto bylaw providing that theatre owners must have private automobile parking areas for patrons so that cars would not be left on the streets during performances. The city had asked for legislation to compel the provision of parking lots in proportion to the number of seats in a theatre.

Giegerich Handling "Ma-maroh"

Charles J. Giegerich, former representative of Walt Disney and sales manager of Celebrity Productions, has taken over the exploitation and sales of "Ma-maroh" (Devil Feasts), a four-reel subject filmed in the island of Celebes, in the Netherlands East Indies, by Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Bekker of Batavia, Java.

OBITUARIES

Frank Woods Dies; Griffith Associate

Frank E. Woods, 79, producer, director and one of the founders of the film industry, died May 1st at his home in Hollywood after an illness of two months.

In 1911 Mr. Woods became associated with David Wark Griffith in the Biograph company as a scenario writer. He was born in Linesville, Pa., and worked in Erie, Pa., and New York as a newspaper writer. He helped organize many of the early-day film companies, being associated with Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett and the Famous Players-Lasky Company, later Paramount.

Mr. Woods entered the motion picture field more by chance than design. In 1907 he was an advertising solicitor for the old New York Dramatic Mirror. At that time a feud between Minnie Maddern Fiske, who owned an interest in the publication, and the producing firm of Klaw & Erlanger had resulted in the latter organization withdrawing all of its advertising from the Mirror, and Mr. Woods was ordered, in desperation, to seek advertising from the new and theatrically despised motion picture companies, which up till then had not been regarded as worthy of a solicitor's consideration.

To encourage these prospective advertisers, Mr. Woods was allotted a certain amount of space in the publication in which to write about motion pictures, and thus was instituted what was probably the first film column in this country.

Through this contact with the industry, however, Mr. Woods met Lee Dougherty of the old Biograph studios, and to him he began to sell "suggestions" for film stories. Shortly he was devoting his entire time to this work, which was the earliest form of scenario writing.

Mr. Woods is also credited with having written the first film continuity—an adaptation of "Enoch Arden," which was filmed by Mr. Griffith as "After Many Years." He likewise brought to Mr. Griffith's attention a stage play taken from Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," and it was on the basis of this play that Mr. Griffith made "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Woods served several of the old studios as scenario editor and later became production manager for Famous Players-Lasky in Hollywood.

Discontinue Song Suit

The suit for $1,000,000 damages, injunction and accounting against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Movietone News Corporation, Sam Fox Publishing Company, Sam and Harry Fox, Con Conrad, Herb Magidson and Nino Martini, brought by the Foreign and Domestic Music Corporation, Societe Anonyme Musicale Bixio and Cesare Andrea Bixio, has been discontinued, according to stipulations filed in the United States district court in New York. The plaintiffs had charged plagiarism of their song, "Passa L'Amore" by "Midnight in Paris," sung in the film "Here's to Romance."

Disney Wins Ruling

An injunction permanently restraining L. F. Collin Pty., Ltd., from selling a songbook with a "Snow White" cover has been issued to Walt Disney by the Sydney, Australia, supreme court. The music was originated by the music publishers but is not connected with the Walt Disney film of the same name.

IN COURTS

Goldwyn Files New Complaint

Samuel Goldwyn on Tuesday filed a new complaint, third in the series to date, in federal court in Wilmington, Del., in his action to establish whether his contract with United Artists has been breached. The complaint supersedes the earlier ones and asks for absolute cancellation of his contract with United Artists.

United Artists last Friday filed a motion to dismiss the action on the grounds that it did not set forth a valid grievance and did not ask for any relief which it was proper for a court to grant. Earlier Goldwyn actions asked the court merely to give an opinion as to whether or not his contract had been broken by the company.

This point, apparently, is remedied in the new complaint. Mr. Goldwyn asserts that he asked the company to cancel his contract and that this was refused. He asks the court to declare the contract breached and to terminate it.

United Artists has 20 days in which to answer the new complaint.

Condor Reorganization Is Approved by Court

George Cosgrave, federal judge in Los Angeles, has approved the reorganization plan for Condor Pictures, under which a new company, Condor Corporation, would liquidate the assets of the former company, consisting mainly of 30 pictures in the process of distribution by Grand National and RKO and eventually engage in production.

The plan calls for issuance of $100,000 in Class "A" shares of new company stock to creditors with unsecured claims, $40,000 in Class "B" stock to stockholders having damage claims by reason of the Securities and Exchange Commission stopping old Condor stock sales, and new common stock share-for-share to all other stockholders. The first move of the new company will be to attempt to repay $140,000 indebtedness and then enter production.

File Motion

Application was filed last Friday in federal court in New York by American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., for an order striking out paragraphs of the complaint in the suit of Frank Jablow and Sam Acker, stockholders against Paramount, AT&T, Western Electric and ERPI. The motion will be heard this Friday.

Managers Fined

Of four theatre operators haled into Montreal court on charges of admitting children under 16 years of age, two pleaded guilty and were fined $50 and costs, while the other two pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial May 3rd. The two fined were Robert Olsen, manager of the Perron, and Lawrence Ward, manager of the Verdun Palace; those to be tried are A. Capandistis of the Cameo and Morley Anderson of the Fifth Avenue.

Claims Ruling

William Bondy, federal judge in New York, has fixed claims against French Motion Picture Corporation at $14,500. The company filed a petition for a reorganization last year.

ROWSON, TECHNICIANS AND KRS JOIN IN QUOTA ATTACK FROM TWO SIDES

Differ on Higher Quotas but Agree on Proposal to Establish Films Bank or Finance Corporation

In immediate postscript to Oliver Stanley's warning that any increase in British quota schedules would not be forthcoming for some time at least, forceful criticism of the Act's first year has come from three divergent quarters.

Triple Criticism

Technicians, currently suffering more than acutely from the slump, have, through their association and its president, Anthony Asquith, joint director of "Pygmalion," attacked the Act, demanded abolition of the triple quota principle, and called for an increase in the quota schedules.

The Kinematograph Renters Society, representative of American producers here, opposing higher quotas, foresees American interests being saddled under the Act with responsibility for establishing a British production industry.

An affinity between the two schools of thought lies in the criticism from both camps that the Act does nothing to stimulate voluntary production, and in the technicians' tolerant view of an idea known to be favored by the KRS, the setting up of a films bank or finance corporation.

Ammunition

A third contributor to the current controversy is Simon Rowson, film trade statistician, who has offered through the Economist a statistical analysis of the first year's working of the Act which, though neither discursive nor controversial, has been accepted as a magazine of ammunition for critics of Mr. Stanley's measure. Mr. Rowson's analysis reveals the significant fact that the value of production during the last year shows a decline of more than 20 per cent. Mr. Rowson, however, takes the view that despite the decline in quantity and total cost, the year has brought forth "an unmistakable improvement in quality." The average cost of film production has risen from £25,000 ($125,000) to more than £50,000 ($250,000), although the number of films registered in the last year is less than half that of any one of the three previous years under the earlier Act.

"Little Originality"

Said the KRS report:

"Except for stopping the loopholes of the former Act of 1927, which made cheap quota films possible and now causing renters representing American interests to spend more money per film produced in England, not much else was achieved. Certainly little originality or daring was displayed by those in charge of the measure for dealing with the main problem of how to encourage and establish a film producing industry in Great Britain."

The view is taken "that the course seems set for a film production industry being established here by and through American interests unless British producers and financiers are prepared to and can produce films so characteristically British and at such a cost as will insure, so far as it can be insured, a profitable return from this country without reckoning any possible return from the U. S. A."

This view is not fundamentally different from that of the president of the Association of Cine Technicians, whose terse comment is "Merely to force foreign companies to make or acquire films in this country is no way to build up a true British industry. The only man who has any right to protection is the British producer." In more acid vein Mr. Asquith went on: "By all means let us tax the importer in terms of production . . ., but do not give him the opportunity of using this pseudo-British production, this 'Cuckoo' film, to oust the British film from its rightful nest."

RECORD INCREASE IN BRITISH RECEIVERS

There were, up to the end of March of this year, 379,825 more owners of radio receiving sets in Great Britain than at the same date a year ago, an official report said this week.

Total registration is 8,869,600 radio licenses.

High or Low

Whereas, however, the KRS see no solution in agitation for higher quotas and insist that finance will only again be attracted to the task of building a native film industry when it sees a sound prospect of a reasonable return on the amount of money advanced, technicians' spokesman believes that quota rates are too low, a belief supported at this year's technical conference in the form of a resolution demanding an increase of exhibitors and renters quota all around.

The suggestion that American producer-renters here, who have, of course, fulfilled their quota commitments to the letter, contend that the need of Britain's production industry is a stimulus to voluntary production and the mobilization of film finance, find complete accord within the labor ranks.

Said Mr. Asquith: "Quota rates are too low and the whole function of the Act is merely to insure that foreign renting interests make or acquire a certain number of films in this country. It does nothing whatsoever to stimulate voluntary production.

Demands Safeguards

"So, too, does studio labor look tolerantly upon the film bank or finance corporation idea, although it insists upon full safeguards not only as to the control of the money spent but to the personnel to whom it is entrusted.

"We know," Mr. Asquith said, "the melancholy effects on the film industry when finance was last easily available. We do not want those who wasted money on that occasion to return to the industry and waste still more."

According to Mr. Stanley, approximately £4,500,000 was spent on British films the last year, an average cost of £3. 5. 0 a foot. It is patent, of course, that the vast part of this was sponsored by American interests. Comparison, then, with the previous year's £5,700,000 is suggestive.

Only 103 British films were registered in 1938-39, as compared with 228 in the previous year. It is not surprising that among technicians an average of eight and a half weeks' employment per member existed in the 39 weeks of the year, or 11 weeks for the whole period. From the association's point of view of employment, the year has been the worst on record.

"More than half the studio space in the country has been idle during the last 12 months," said Mr. Rowson—a generous estimate, since, as the association records, currently only 11 of the country's 74 stages are in use.

The increase in quality production for which the American renters have been mainly responsible—vide "A Yank at Oxford," "Sixty Glorious Years," "The Lady Vanishes"—is, however, no solace to British labor, which refuses to see in the big expensive film productions an adequate basis for a British film industry. "Furthermore, the prediction that the making of these films with the exclusion of the films designed merely for the home market might mean that technicians would be engaged on a picture to picture basis with long periods of unemployment, has been amply justified." Hence, their demand for the abolition of the treble quota.

From all these camps there is no criticism, oblique or otherwise, of the way the American companies have met their responsibility. There would seem to be agreement that the essential need is for a stimulus to voluntary production, but there is little agreement on how to achieve it.

Film Loan Action Starts

Trial of the suit brought by Westminster Bank against 15 insurance companies involving losses on more than $5,000,000 of insured film loans started Monday. Stafford Cripps, counsel for the plaintiffs, charged that the $5,000,000 loss was sustained in transactions involving $7,500,000 in loans.

Total of 28 separate loans were made on 22 films, it was alleged, but only 14 were completed and some never started.

Mason Says New South Wales Cancellation Is 27 Per Cent

Cecil Mason, Columbia manager in Australia, pointed out this week in New York that the top cancellation right for New South Wales theatres is 27 per cent, and not 42½ per cent, of American product, as previously reported.

The percentage is figured on the basis of the 25 per cent cancellation, plus two and a half per cent to allow for the playing of Australian films.

New Recording System Shown by Bell at Fair

by AARON NADELL

American Telephone sound recording and sound reproducing developments, which have played a large part in sound motion pictures, are highlighted, along with telephone developments, by the Bell System in its large exhibit at New York World's Fair, which was dedicated on the eve of the Fair's opening in the presence of some 300 representatives of the motion picture, scientific, magazine and news press, after a luncheon at the Hotel New Yorker.

Gifford Is Host

With Walter S. Gifford, president of A. T. and T. as host, the press members toured the Bell building, along with virtually every important executive of the various Telephone affiliates: T. K. Stevenson, president of Electrical Research Products; J. C. Kilpatrick, president of New York Telephone; P. L. Thompson, director of public relations for Western Electric, and others.

A new and reputedly different method of recording sound, using neither film nor disc, was disclosed to be used for the "amateur show" in which visitors to the Fair act first as performers and then as their own audience. This is made possible by the fact that the new record needs no processing, as in the case of film, but leaves the recorder ready for instant playback. It is not subject to mechanical wear, as are discs, and has neither needle scratch nor film grain noise.

In the amateur show a group of visitors is seated on a stage fitted up as a garden terrace, while an M.C. keeps the conversation going and tries to keep it funny. After a few minutes the guests are led to other seats from which they can watch the stage, while quick scene-shifting substitutes male and female dummies on the terrace benches. Looking up at those dummies, which represent themselves, the guests hear their own remarks and wise-cracks.

Sectionally Magnetized

The record material is a steel tape. It is run through a highly concentrated magnetic field produced by voice currents, and thus sectionally magnetized. The length of the several sections of magnetization depends upon the frequencies recorded, and the intensity of magnetization upon the current strength. In playback the moving tape generates, in a coil of wire, currents that fluctuate according to the successive sections of magnetization which the tape carries. By passing the tape through a much stronger magnetic field the record can be "washed out" and the metal again is ready.

In the "voice mirror," another exhibit at the Bell System's show, a visitor picks up an ordinary telephone, dials one number and speaks until a flashing lamp tells him to stop. After a moment, he hears his own voice.

Theatre men who judge sound quality by ear can have their ears tested at the Fair. Receivers in lines of telephone booths emit musical tones or short combinations of figures. The sounds grow fainter and fainter. The visitor writes down the figures he hears as long as he can hear them. In the case of musical tones (representing the frequencies 440, 880, 1760, 3520 and 7040) he writes down how often he hears each tone repeated. By inspecting their score sheets, visitors can tell whether their hearing is better at low, medium or high frequency. More prominently placed than any of these features of the Telephone show is the voder. Unlike all other mechanical sources of sound the voder does not recreate sounds that were originally produced by a human voice and picked up by a microphone. It manufactures intelligible speech synthetically, using electrical frequencies created by oscillators as the raw material, and combining them into recognizable words. The combinations are set up at will by operation of a keyboard.

Bell Telephone Laboratories developed the exhibits according to plans of John Mills, the Laboratories' director of publications. Their dramatization was elaborated by Henry Dreyfuss. Voorhees, Walker, Foley and Smith were the architects of the functionally designed building for which Erpi provided acoustic treatment.

Hoyts and Greater Union Now Control 13 Per Cent of All Australian Houses

Most of the first-run theatres in Australasia—Australia, New South Wales, Victoria, New Zealand and Queensland—and 13 per cent of all of the country's 1,371 theatres, now are controlled by Hoyts Associated Theatres and Greater Union, the two largest circuits, with Hoyts running 144 theatres and Greater Union, 29, in the nine large cities and environs.

Information reaching New York this week shows that Hoyts operates the greatest number of first runs, 25 of them; Greater Union has 18. Hoyts added seven theatres in the past year, Greater Union, three. Details follow:

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

"BLONDIE": Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Before showing this picture we sponsored an art contest offering prizes for the best drawing of "Blondie." The kids went for it and the box office paid nice dividends. Anyone who would like samples of our stunt, drop us a line. Pearce Parkhurst, you forgot to enclose your stunt to us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

"BLONDIE": Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton, Larry Simms—About 85 per cent enjoyed this. The others thought it silly. It may improve, however. Played March 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—It's good from every angle. The antics of the pup alone are worth the price of admission. Think I have never heard more laughter than when he dives into the cupboard and closes the door. Played April 7.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

FLIGHT TO FAME: Charles Farrell, Jacqueline Wells—Okay. Farrell good. Played February 21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

I AM THE LAW: Edward G. Robinson, Wendy Barrie, Barbara O'Neil, John Beal—Our first with Columbia in years and it is a swell picture but business was away below normal. Can't understand it. Of course it was old but the reviews were so good that we went back and picked it up. Robinson does not seem to have much draw. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS: Jean Parker, Charles Bickford—A fair action picture. The only criticism is that the forest fire shots were too long. Plenty of action for the fans and not bad but still somewhat disappointing. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS: Charles Bickford, Jean Parker—When I run a show without at least a few starting out before the end, I mark it A-1. Even the smokers couldn't take the time off for their usual drag. The Hollywood sawmill brought a few comments from our sawmill boys. Played April 21-22.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGER FROM ARIZONA: Buck Jones—There are still a lot of socalled top rating stars, as Garbo. Boyer, Dietrich, Crawford, who can't compare with Buck Jones as a money maker in our town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WEST OF SANTA FE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A very satisfactory Western which with an hour of shorts sent them home satisfied. Running time, 60 minutes.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—If it's a Warner Bros. picture, it is almost sure to be a good show.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins, Ronald Reagan, Walter Catlett—A clever little comedy that had the crowds in stitches. Plenty of laughs. This picture is good in a top spot for a short run. Anita Louise had no place in the show as she was terribly miscast. Balance of the cast is excellent. A good light comedy. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins—Quite good program fare. Small draw. Played February 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—This handed me a surprise. Did 50 per cent more than average. It's a good little picture well done. Nothing risque as many expected. Some women did not like it but they expected too much after N. Y. banned it.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—This is okay fun. Pleased generally. Sorry to see them split up. Played February 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Ian Hunter, Frank Morgan—About 40 per cent the draw of "Sweethearts." A big production in every way but of the cut and dried formula that the people know about what to expect. They want a change in their entertainment. Perhaps, with Nelson Eddy, this would have been a better draw but all who saw it pronounced it a wonderful picture.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner—Why all the panning of this picture? Our audiences went for it in a big way. Something different and pleasing. It will not do for extended runs but it will please. Miss Gaal has made a bigger hit than any foreign star we have had in years, and without fuss or fanfare. She has a future. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner—Good program picture that drew an average house. Played March 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

HARDYS RIDE HIGH, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—These series get better and better. The crowds get bigger and wiser. Here is the entertainment they want. Doesn't cost a million to produce and worth all it costs. Down to earth and how they do enjoy it.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Charles Coburn—Well, I'm glad it was somebody's delight for it did not delight any of my patrons. The first reel is very good but after that it drags along to the dreary end with very little real entertainment. As anti-war propaganda it is great, but as entertainment it is a zero, and as I have said frequently, entertainment is what they pay their money for. Clark Gable is very good; Norma Shearer does some superb acting, but it is so different from the usual role she plays so charmingly that people were disappointed. This is no doubt all right for cities but not for the wide open spaces. Running time, 109 minutes. Played April 14-16.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LISTEN DARLING: Judy Garland, Freddie Bartholomew, Mary Astor, Walter Pidgeon—A very fine program picture that was double billed with a Buck Jones western. Business satisfactory. Judy should get bigger billings.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Very good on all points. Played February 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—This is really a big picture at the box office but it is not as good as the other pictures that Eddy and MacDonald have made. The color in this is beautiful, the best I have ever seen. Running time, 114 minutes. Played April 13-14.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—Very beautiful production and how Jeanette does photograph in color! Also, Florence Rice (it seemed a shame to see her in such a minor role) is beautiful in color. The music was grand too. But we hit a blizzard with 10 inches of snow in 24 hours and the roads were blocked so business was terrible. Running time, 114 minutes. Played April 16-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Leo Carrillo, Walter Pidgeon, Walter Connolly—Leo the Lion roars again and "Too Hot to Handle" is something to roar about. Plenty of thrills, clever dialogue, good situations and excellent treatment. Pleased our patrons more than any picture in last two months. Business up over average during run. Played April 12-14.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WITHIN THE LAW: Ruth Hussey, Paul Kelly, John King, Lynne Carver, Rita Johnson—Thoroughly enjoyable and absorbing. Fine plot and well cast with some of MGM's most promising "comers." Excellent portrayals in this picture should lead to better roles for Ruth Hussey and Rita Johnson. Business up over average during run. Played April 12-14.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Monogram

MYSTERY OF MR. WONG, THE: Boris Karloff, Dorothy Tree—Just an average picture. Business up due to double-bill with "St. Louis Blues." Played April 1-4.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Paramount

CAFE SOCIETY: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Shirley Ross—Another Paramount which they are selling for extended runs but the extended run should be in the ash can. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CAFE SOCIETY: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Shirley Ross—Like most Paramounts this year, this is a weak sister. Just a lot of rag chewing, no action and no business. MacMurray not suited to this type picture. He didn't seem to be interested in his part.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Akim Tamiroff, Anna May Wong—Played with "Inside Story." Just a double bill. Nothing else. No class in either one.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Ann Gillis, Robert Kent, June Travis—An outstanding low bracket picture. Well liked by the customers. Fair business. Running time, 60 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche,

Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—Very amusing farce comedy which pleased average business. Played April 23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—This was the weakest Hopalong Cassidy we have played so far. It seems as if Paramount made this in a hurry. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SAY IT IN FRENCH: Ray Milland, Olympe Bradna—A good farce. Poor draw, however. Played March 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—A swell picture that has been doing a great business throughout this entire territory. Perfectly suited to title. Musical score excellent. Deserves a top flight rating for entertainment. Business exceptionally good for Holy Week. Played April 1-4. —W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

COME ON RANGERS, THE: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Very good western with nice singing and music which pleased average business. Played April 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GANGS OF NEW YORK: Charles Bickford, Ann Dvorak, Alan Baxter—A good action drama and I mean it sure has plenty of action with a capital A. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 19.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Better than average Western and Burnette is at least half the show. Played April 15-16.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTSIDE OF PARADISE: Phil Regan, Penny Singleton—This class of feature of no value to a small town exhibitor as same are too short for a program, if you do not run double bill. Too short also for good story. Running time, six reels. Played April 14.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

STORM OVER BENGAL: Richard Cromwell, Rochelle Hudson, Patrick Knowles—A good action show that held them to the end. This and a western gave me my second best business since last October. Played April 15-16.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

ARIZONA LEGION: George O'Brien, Laraine Johnson—A good western with lots of action. Was well received. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 15. —J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo, Henry Armetta—Just a passable programmer. Nothing much. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

KING KONG (reissue): Fay Wray, Bruce Cabot, Robert Armstrong—Very good. If you haven't played this, be sure and book it as it will make you some money. Running time, 100 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MR. DOODLE KICKS OFF: Joe Penner, June Travis, Richard Lane—Our Saturday crowd enjoyed this very much. About the best Penner has made. Running time, 78 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY AT THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, Spanky MacFarland, Edgar Kennedy—Just fair. No draw. Played February 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—My favorite, Jane, is growing up but she gives her usual excellent and hilarious performance, plus a very good dance number in grownup costume. Good story and good cast pleased the midweek patrons. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 12-13.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—Worst Friday-Saturday business since 1933 and the weather was excellent, too. But they'll have to build Toler, who is very good in the part, and in the meantime we exhibitors continue to pay old Chas. Chan rentals. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—This picture pleased average business. It is a Sherlock Holmes detective story with an English background and most of the actors talk with an English whang. It is slow in getting started but the action in the latter part is good. Played April 16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Green, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—Not in the least disappointing. Absorbing plot along the "chiller-diller" lines. Rathbone excellent. Audience reaction great. Business good. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 15-18.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

INSIDE STORY: Michael Whalen, Jean Rogers—Played with "King of Chinatown." Just a double bill. Nothing else. No class in either one.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—Swell picture that pleased all and did extra business, in fact, almost exceptional business. Nancy Kelly is a coming gal. And both Power and Fonda were excellent. Running time, 105 minutes. Played April 9-10.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—Broke all house records for 15 years. Did week's business in two days. I made a mistake in not booking it four days. Then couldn't hold it over. Am going to bring it back later. Pulled business for 20 miles and it's extra good. The only real money-maker from Fox this year and, of course, we paid real money for it. However, it was worth the price. Wish we could get more like it.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Amanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson, Claude Gillingwater, Sr.—I consider this much the best of Shirley's recent pictures. Good story and excellent cast, including Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Bill Robinson and Claude Gillingwater, Sr. The final sequence is a benefit performance that is a wow. did not break any house records with this one but it pleased. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—We had a tieup with our local Ford dealer on this one and never did we enjoy such good business for many a day. Did nearly as good as Will Rogers' picture "In Old Kentucky." Perfect for everyone. Thank you, Fox.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Beautiful color picture. Well done. Business not up to expectations. Running time, 96 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Very good. Color tops. Everyone enjoyed it. Wholesome. Played March 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Adolphe Menjou, Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin. Pretty good. Fair draw. Played February 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—Very good. Producer has combined the adventure of a century ago with the horse-play of today. Ritz Bros. up to par and Ameche looks a little forlorn without strong support. Comment lacking but no kicks. Business disappointing over Easter. Played April 8-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—Pretty good farce comedy which pleased average business. Played April 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Brennan—A good show. Well done. Fair business. Running time, 90 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE:. Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly; David Niven, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Brennan—Very good picture that did quite well at the box office. Running time, 92 minutes. —P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—The usual West Point picture that did just an average midweek business. Played April 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—The picture is OK but didn't do any business. Played April 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Universal

FRESHMAN YEAR: Dixie Dunbar, Ernest Truex, William Lundigan, Constance Moore—Quite good program fare. Small draw. Played February 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUYS IN SOCIETY: "Little Tough Guys," Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton, Mischa Auer, Helen Parrish—Pretty good program picture that only drew fair at the box office. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RISKY BUSINESS: George Murphy, Dorothea Kent —Pretty weak. Absolutely no comment from audience on this film. Business weak over Easter in spite of double bill with "The Three Musketeers." Played April 8-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

ROAD TO RENO: Hope Hampton, Randolph Scott, Helen Broderick, Glenda Farrell, Alan Marshal—Only a fair program picture. The title hurt the drawing power. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Josephine Hutchinson—This picture is not worth running. I did not hear one good word for it. Many walked out. People don't want such pictures and I for one don't blame them. No excuse whatever for such stuff. Why can't the producers learn that the common people want real entertainment. Didn't even gross film rental and I was glad as I hated to take their money.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STORM, THE: Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane, Preston Foster, Tom Brown, Nan Grey—A good action. Swell cast. Played March 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Wonderful, and that's a very poor description for this. Play this on your best date and then some, but play it. Also try to act modest when your regular patrons and strangers stop to heap a few praises on you for showing such a grand feature. We get the best feature it's possible to get for Easter and this couldn't be surpassed. Miss Durbin shows 100 per cent improvement over her last picture and that's something. Miss Grey and Miss Parrish are very good. Mr. Cummings is great and Charles Winninger couldn't be beat. The cold weather may have made me a trifle bit crazy but I sincerely believe this will more than please everyone who sees it. It has good music, fine humor, clever directing and swell acting. Last but not least, Universal has a novel way of bringing in story and screen credit that would be well for a few of your majors to copy. This report can be read by you exhibitors without that proverbial grain of salt, as business was good but not good enough for this. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—This is a good picture of its kind, but we have had too many of these. In fact, about the same as first "Dawn Patrol." People just don't like to pay good money to see remakes. Business fair.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

DEVIL'S ISLAND: Boris Karloff, Nedda Harrigan—Good action picture suitable for week-end or family nites. Did more than average business.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

DEVIL'S ISLAND: Boris Karloff, Nedda Harrigan—Good picture. A little gruesome in spots. A picture for men. The ladies did not care for same. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—I saw this picture screened and it is certainly one swell show in color. I think it is as good as "Jesse James" and should do equally as well at the box office. Has an abundance of action, which is what Warner Bros. promised us this year.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, REPORTER: Bonita Granville, John Litel—Played with "Silver on the Sage." Passable double bill. Neither picture was very hot.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another dandy colored travel. Every theatre should play these.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TINY TROUBLES: Our Gang—A fair Gang comedy but not so good as some we have run. Alfalfa did not sing and that is too bad. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WRONG WAY OUT, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARNYARD EGG-CITEMENT: Terry-Toons—Very good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 59—Just two subjects, the Indians at Tonawanda, N. Y., and the rebuilding of a mosque in Egypt, made this an outstanding short. Very good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM CAFE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Very satisfactory. L. A. Irwin, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CO-OPS MUST "CO-OP"

The communication is from the pen of a new member in a small down-east town. Limited by his advertising budget, the Round Tabler must depend a lot upon promotions shared by others. What he has to say about it would be considered high treason in the not too dim past. It can be accepted as a commentary on the sounder relations between theatre and merchant today. He writes:

"We have built up the goodwill of the community to the point where we find nearly everyone ready to cooperate in anything we attempt. However, we do not take advantage of this by overdoing stunts that cost someone else money while we make the profit. We believe that such a policy would be very detrimental to our boxoffice as well as to our goodwill reputation. In a small community such as this, I believe goodwill to be the best form of advertising available. Everybody knows everybody else and all their faults are big or little. Therefore, the business house with the fewest faults is the house that the public respects and wants to do business with."

Those who were near enough to watch it work will tell you that the so-called costless promotion encouraged in certain quarters a decade ago proved to be the clincher that almost ruined for keeps the tiein between theatre and merchant. In those same certain quarters, managers were rated by their skill in the gentle art of "chisel-ry". It was open season the year 'round on credulous merchants, and the theatreman who kicked in with as much as a thin dime from the petty cash did so at the immediate risk of his job.

Happily, this "free lunch" exploitation has largely disappeared. The smart lad today realizes that cooperative campaigns must "co-op" for the other fellow as well as the theatre, that anything less endangers the permanent well-being of the boxoffice.

BODIFORD HAS THE IDEA

The subsequent-run manager who hones to show his stuff has as much opportunity to do so as his first-run downtown brother. Of course, we've said that before and will again just as long as campaigns filled with boxoffice meat continue to arrive from the third and fourth-run boys who exploit their dates in the manner of world premieres.

For instance, Lowell T. Bodiford, manager of the suburban Parkway in Fort Worth, Texas, on behalf of the fourth-run of "Jesse James". On another page are listed in detail the twenty-three different exploitations executed by Bodiford to tell the town about it. He reports "tremendous business".

Out in Kansas City Lon Cox, district manager for Fox Midwest, is holding a series of personnel meetings to acquaint the circuit's managers of the future with the fundamentals of management, operation and exploitation. As has to do with suburban houses, the subsequent-runs, Mr. Cox emphasizes these situations as individual operations in sizeable communities and not as mere units of a circuit.

Mr. Cox has the permission of this department to use the Bodiford campaign as a concrete illustration of what he has in mind.

IMPORTANT TO THEATREMEN

The happiest news your Chairman can continue to relay has to do with promotions of Round Tablers to bigger jobs. Thus, we are pleased to note the announcement from Charles Einfeld that Lee Blumberg goes from Warners' pressbook staff to head the company's field exploitation men, under Mort Blumenstock's supervision. The promotion climaxes 15 years of work largely spent in the field as theatre publicity director and manager.

Obviously, the advancement is in keeping with the Warner policy of seeking out executive calibre on the home grounds. But more important to theatremen playing Warner product is that this vital post is occupied by one who knows the boxoffice answers and speaks the manager's tongue.

The international job of showmanship done by the Grover Whalen forces in advance of the New York World's Fair is to be presented as the strongest object lesson in favor of more exploitation at the boxoffice for bigger grosses.

Cleveland Independent Theatres Plug Judy Garland "Personal" at Loew's State

Among the various items reported by Milt Harris in the last Fortnight at the different theatres in the Cleveland Loew sector, he favors the outstanding promotion tied to a recent personal appearance of Judy Garland at the State. Selling some 29 independents in the local area on the value of plugging the engagement as a buildup for their dates on the star's coming pictures, Harris made available colored marquee banners with copy welcoming Judy to town and listing the date at the theatre. Tiein line was: "This theatre shows Judy Garland Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures."

Purves' "Pygmalion" Puzzle Idea Sells Third-Run Date for Picture

For his subsequent-run at the Village, Toronto, on "Pygmalion," Jack Purves featured his advance campaign with a puzzle idea distributed as a card, with guest tickets offered to those who could form the letters of the title through definite designs of the puzzle. Title was not mentioned in the copy. Contestants were asked to mail their answers to the theatre and out of 3,000 cards given out, Purves reports over 900 returned. All were acknowledged and among those whose entries arrived after deadline, Jack offered consolation prizes of tickets to his coming date on "The Mikado."

Second outstander in Jack's campaign was a series of small colored cards carrying cartoon drawing of George Bernard Shaw followed by some of the author's famed epigrams and his advice to see the picture. These cards were placed in outgoing packages from some 30 of the more popular neighborhood stores.

Ingenious Newspaper Ad Secured On "Dodge" by Miller-Pearlstein

Unique half page from one of Cleveland's leading department stores was secured by Manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein for the opening of "Dodge City" at Warners' Hippodrome. Featured were photos of the picture's stars shown in what the well-dressed Dodge City buckaroo wore in 1872, run alongside latest men's styles, in comparison, and found available at the store. Ad ran three days ahead of opening, with picture and date featured prominently.

As a runner-up stunt used by the Miller-Pearlstein duo, tieup was effected with local baker on "Love Affair," where a search for the city's longest married couples was instituted over the merchant's radio program on Station WGAR. Theatre agreed to act as hosts to the 25 couples filling the bill. Daily air plugs were secured five days ahead and two days after opening. Theatreman reports that the big response to this promotion indicated the vast listening audience the program commanded.

Four-Page Newspaper Section Promoted for Theatre Opening

To usher in the opening of the new Cactus Theatre, in Lubbock, Texas, Publicity Director Glenn Fannin obtained from the local daily a complete four-page section devoted to the occasion. Page was topped by a four-column cut of the theatre, entire first page given over to stories on the modern equipment used in construction and special story by the local fire chief lauding the fireproof equipment.

Balance of section was devoted to congratulatory ads from leading merchants, theatre policy, plug for coming attractions and greeting from the management.

Binstock Cracks Roto Section With Model Airplane Contest

In connection with the serial "Flying-G-Men," Manager Paul Binstock, now at Warners' Lyric, in Hartford, Conn., staged a monster model airplane contest for which he succeeded in landing Deputy Aeronautical Commissioner George Kane as a judge in addition to presenting the winners with prizes promoted by the theatreman.

Abundant newspaper publicity was secured on the stunt which also broke in the Sunday roto section of the Hartford Courant, showing the commissioner with Paul, presenting prizes to the winners.

NUMEROUS CONTESTS ARRANGED

Most Popular Cop Search Instituted In Racine for "Sergeant Madden"

A popularity contest to seek Racine's finest was launched by Harvey Kny, at the Rialto, in that Wisconsin city on behalf of "Sergeant Madden." Contest started day before opening and broke with a double truck which was sold to leading department store. Winning office was given a gratis all-expense trip to the World's Fair, plus $50 in cash, which event was generously publicized in the newspapers as was the picture.

Also through the theatreman's efforts, Wallace Beery was made Honorable Sergeant of the Racine Police Department through the cooperation of the Mayor and Chief of Police, each of whom wrote the star a letter asking him to accept the appointment. Police badge and hat medallion accompanied the letters with card of identification signed by the commissioners. Front-page story broke in local paper announcing Beery's acceptance. Also requested by Kny from the MGM Studios were letters of appreciation from the star to the Mayor and Chief. On receipt of these accompanied by star's autographed photo, additional publicity was landed.

O'Donnell Arranges Month's Tieup With Paper and American Legion

What he choose to call an "I Remember Him" contest which ran daily for a full month was the stunt arranged by Manager Jim O'Donnell of the Haines Theatre, in Waterville, Maine, with the cooperation of the morning paper and local American Legion Post. Each day a picture of some war veteran was run, and readers requested to save the month's set at which time contestants were instructed to identify each picture run and write a 50-word essay on "Why I Think the United States Should Have a Strong National Defense."

In addition to nine promoted grand prizes awarded winners and guest tickets to runners-up, each day a photo of some movie star was run and to the first five persons mailing the correct name of the star to the contest editor, tickets to the current show were awarded.

Redmond Ties Leading Department Store to Shirley Temple Popularity Contest

Discovering that a local store which handles Shirley Temple models sponsored an active Temple club of over 1,000 members, Jimmie Redmond, ad head, Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., sold the merchants on a children's popularity voting contest, put on two weeks ahead. Tiein was launched with the line "Shirley Temple Wants to Know Who Is Fairbury's Most Popular Girl Between the Ages of 5 and 12?" Winner was decided by voting, coupons given by the store for every purchase of one dollar. Prize was a complete outfit of Temple styles and winner was announced at the theatre during a special kid showing of "Little Princess."

Store paid all expenses including postcards to the club members, newspaper ads, special heralds, all of which plugged the special matinee, where all attending received star photos, candy and toys. Merchant also advertised the event throughout the store, in windows, etc. Over 200 entries were received with the matinee playing to capacity and the sponsor highly satisfied with the extra business done as a result. Total expense for the theatre was three dollars.

Full Page Art Spread on Castles Arranged and Planted by Dinerman

Despite the fact that it took plenty of time to make up the art, copy, engraving, etc., Dinny Dinerman, Cincinnati RKO Theatres ad head, reports the full-page spread promoted in the Post for "The Castles" date at the Shubert was well worth the effort. Layout showed the original Castles executing some of their famous dances, together with the steps done by Rogers and Astaire as they appear in the film. Tiein copy compared the earlier dances with those in vogue today.

Also used to advantage by Dinerman are his classified ads run weekly in the Times-Star, whereby readers are requested to scan the papers in search of their names which are scattered throughout the ads. Guest tickets go to those properly identifying themselves, with paper running tiein ads.

Successful Model Airplane Contest Held Over Second Week by Howe

Due to the unexpected interest evinced by his patrons in a lobby contest of model airplanes, John W. Howe of the Olympia Theatre, in Portsmouth, N. H., who had put on the contest in advance of "The Flying Irishman" and "The Eagle and the Hawk," found himself compelled to hold over the display for a second week to satisfy the demands of his customers. Local daily covered the display with writeups in which the pictures were prominently mentioned.

To launch the contest, Howe contacted the principal of the Junior High School and secured permission to borrow models of planes made by the students in the school's Aircraft Club. Children themselves chose the models which should be used and they together with teachers personally supervised the arrangements of the display.

Local Winter Carnival Queen Tied to "Ice Antics" by Morris

With the Cortland, New York Normal School holding its first winter carnival week ahead of the short "Ice Antics," City Manager Seymour Morris, of Schine's State Theatre, arranged for the girl, selected as Queen by the school, to be formally coronated on the theatre stage. Girl was presented with special MGM trophy with ceremonies covered in local dailies by stories.

Announcements were made in the school about the special attraction booked for the occasion, trophy was placed in leading store window with card calling attention to the presentation and during the ice carnival, theatre posters were planted at the skiing course also stressing the stunt.

Local Baker Sponsors Series Of Quiz Contests for Wartha

Modeling his program after several now popular on the air, Art Wartha at the Roxy, in La Porte, Ind., secured the cooperation of a local baker to sponsor a series of weekly quiz contests from the theatre stage. Five contestants are used, five rounds of questions asked and a fog horn sounds when a contestant fails to answer correctly. The sponsor gives $15 weekly as prizes in addition to plenty of free newspaper advertising and 300 sample loaves of bread each week.

Everyone sending in a question that is used on the program receives a pair of tickets, as does each contestant appearing on the stage, irrespective of whether or not he is a cash prize winner. The audience also has an opportunity to join in the fun, a special group of questions being used solely for the audience reaction. Merchant is placed under an eight-week contract.

Chemistry Class Builds "Frankenstein" Displays

Seeking the aid of the Professor of Chemistry in local high school, John Howe, at the Olympia, Portsmouth, N. H., prevailed upon the instructor to help him exploit the opening of "Son of Frankenstein." What the theatreman wanted was a lobby display of assorted chemistry jugs, jars, etc., with some form of animation that would permit use of the line, "These created a monster." Problem was turned over to an advanced class in chemistry with the result that Howe reports receiving some of the liveliest and most interesting displays ever used in the theatre. Needless to say, much goodwill and word-of-mouth comment was secured, since the students and their friends were all interested in the experiment.

Also reported as proving lucrative for the theatreman is his use of fashion stills and mats received monthly from the studios. These are split up, hat photos to the milliners, gown photos to dress shops, etc. With the merchants frequently using the mats in their newspaper advertising and the stills to tiein for window displays. Howe personally delivers these to cooperating merchants each month, making suggestions for their use.

Howell and Kreag Win M-G-M "Shorts" Contest

In the recent contest conducted by MGM on the basis of the best execution of one single exploitation idea on a short, Tommy Howell, Bison Theatre, Dallas, Texas, and Ward B. Kreag, Community Theatre, in Catskill, N. Y., were named winners. Howell won his laurels on a diaper contest staged for men in connection with Robert Benchley's "How to Raise a Baby," and Kreag took down his prize for a peace contest on "The Story of Alfred Nobel" with guest tickets going to those submitting the most original idea on how to insure peace.

Dance Contest Exploits "Honolulu" for Holland

A La Conga tap dance contest conducted at local night club in advance of opening of "Honolulu" helped publicize the date for City Manager Sid Holland for the date at the Elco, in Elkhart, Ind. Stunt was held in the grand ballroom of leading hotel, duly plugged by them, with prizes going to winners so judged by a committee.

Entire house staff wore leis as advance teasers, lobby setpiece of cutout Eleanor Powell was used and Holland also dressed one of his girl ushers in Hawaiian costume and stationed her in the lobby. Music store devoted entire window to Hawaiian troupe strumming hit tunes from the picture which were transmitted outdoors from loud speaker and amplifier.

Footprints Plug Picture

Distributed by H. A. Rodick, at the Tower Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., for "The Hound of the Baskervilles" were 5,000 imprinted five-inch square "footprints," copy reading, "Beware, lock your windows, bolt your doors." On opposite side was the name of the picture, cast, theatre, etc. For street bally, man led a huge great dane dog with banner plugging the attraction.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

McManus' Ingenious Display

Picked up from another type of business and applied successfully for theatre use are the brightly colored crimped celluloid strips about two inches wide employed bv Johnny McManus at Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo. Inserted in slits cut in display boards along the outline of picture title words, sign is given a distinctly neonized appearance, especially at night. The side-lights reflect off the celluloid to create the effect. McManus reports much favorable comment on the displays.

'Derby' Broadcast Starts Campaign On 'Rose' Advance

The exclusive broadcast of the Kentucky Derby by 20th Century-Fox on behalf of "Rose of Washington Square" featured the national campaign on the picture, with four spot announcements heard by an estimated audience of over 40 million. Al Jolson, who stars in the picture with Alice Faye and Tyrone Power, was present at the track and interviewed after the race during which he plugged the feature. Arrangements for the broadcast were made by Charles McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, the stunt reported as the first time a film company had ever sponsored such an event.

Also featured in the national exploitation is distribution of heralds by Liberty magazine boys throughout the country. Tieup is available to all exhibitors, who are instructed to contact their Liberty magazine district representatives in their territory. 20th Century-Fox estimates some two million heralds to be distributed in this fashion.

Another tiein sponsored by the company at the Derby was giveaway of roses to guests at leading hotels on day of the big race. Similar tieups with Florists Trade Delivery Service and local florists along the same line are suggested for individual dates.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Controversial Contest Used for "Jesse James"

In order to fan the glowing embers of controversy into a publicity flame for "Jesse James," Bill Johnson, Opera House, Millinocket, Maine, who heard rumors to the effect that some of his patrons thought it wasn't right to glorify a criminal, issued special mimeographed sheets and distributed them broadcast.

Headed "Should Jesse James be featured in a movie," copy pro and con followed. Contest angle was injected when Johnson offered cash prize to winner submitting best letter on what in his opinion is most important in determining the type of pictures that should be made and shown at the Opera House.

Merchants Aid Barrett On Cooking School Tieup

Generous newspaper publicity was accorded the recent cooking school classes held on the stage of the Strand in Woburn, Mass., and arranged by Manager Russell Barrett. Promoting Lever Brothers of Cambridge, Mass., theatreman secured a demonstrator gratis to cook and bake on stage using Spry in preparation of the foods.

Also promoted were 45 large baskets of groceries from local merchants, 15 to be given away at each of the three classes. Other gifts were promoted for giveaways including a grand prize of new model range which was displayed in window of large grocer. Women patrons paid regular matinee admission prices and were entitled to stay and see the double feature program following the classes.

'April Fool,' Says Jimmie Redmond to Record Grosses

The boys down south are not the only ones to profit greatly by the April Fool's Midnight Prevue, as is evinced by Jimmy Redmond from the Bonham Theatre, in Fairbury, Neb., who sets down some of the same in reporting this to be one of the biggest nights in the history of the theatre. Outstanding screwball gags welcomed eagerly by the customers are set down for members who want to adapt the stunt for current use or to hold in their files.

Admission was handled by advertising that the theatre would pay 50 people from one to 30 cents to attend, 50 would get in free, the rest paying from one to 30 cents. Average admission was 24 cents. As it worked out, the theatre paid out for the one to five cent admissions, with patrons paying the house mostly in 25 and 30 cent admissions. Redmond says on this basis, an average of about one person out of 10 either got in free or were paid by theatre.

Staff Goes "Screwball"

Two hundred small imprinted envelopes containing nails for coat hangers and matches for cigarettes lighters were distributed to men and women. Before the picture started and during the shorts, the doorman, ushers and assistant manager ran up and down aisles selling popcorn, candy, peanuts and crackerjack, and ushers used mine lamps to direct patrons to their seats. Cartoon was run upside down along with the newsreel.

For street bally, man dressed with all his clothes on backwards distributed peanuts and advertising on the show. A week in advance, entire staff wore dunce caps made of light weight cardboard in all colors, tops of which had fool's bell. Small sign in front of cap advertised the special show. These caps were also placed on all posts and platforms in the theatre advertising the picture. Special trailer was used one week in advance and entire staff cooperated by selling the show personally to at least a dozen people each day.

What he chooses to call a photo-flash contest is stunt put on weekly by Harry Kriegsman, Claridge Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., who has his operator, Jimmy Demetrius, take a flashlight photograph of his kid matinee audience. Later an eight by ten of the youngsters is placed on display in the lobby. A slide is also made from the photo and then projected on the screen the following week. The three children each week whose faces are encircled from the group photo and who immediately identify themselves, are invited up to stage and presented with gifts promoted from local merchants.

Kriegsman reports the contest as becoming increasingly popular with the kids, entire cost being price of slide and photo.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Since the local women's clubs of Lancaster, Pa., had banded together to give the children of the town "better entertainment," Fred E. Forry, manager of the Colonial Theatre, approached them with the idea of sponsoring a special kiddie show with "Huckleberry Finn" as the feature. Aggregation plugged the show at their various meetings, arranged for poster displays on the bulletin boards in all grade schools of the city and county and then acted as chaperones for the special matinee.

As suggested in the pressbook, cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded to winners of Frank Murphy's "Uncle Samogram" run in cooperating paper for a week ahead of opening of "Let Freedom Ring." Entrants were requested in addition to submit a brief essay on what freedom meant to them. Winners' names and stories were later published in the paper, thus bringing further publicity to the date.

Capitalizing on the title of the picture, "You Can't Take It With You," Wilbert Brizendine, of the Rialto Theatre, in Baltimore, distributed four-page colored heralds, back cover of which carried merchants' ads. Under the banner "You can't take it with you, but you can spend it wisely," each store's ad tied in with the picture. Entire cost of printing and distribution was met by the paid ads.

To herald the opening of the Illinois Theatre, in Jacksonville, Ill., Ralph Q. Bartlett, resident manager in charge of the Illinois and Majestic Theatres, arranged for a special newspaper edition of the Jacksonville Courier. Section was devoted to stories on the equipment, design of the theatre together with art work. Merchants congratulatory ads were carried together with messages from Elmer C. Rhoden, division manager of Fox Midwest, Bartlett and other company executives. Also gotten out for the occasion was a souvenir program in two color job; this, too, included merchants' ads and art work on special theatre construction features.

Displayed in the lobby of the Rialto Theatre, in Allentown, Pa., was wire-hair fox pup promoted by Manager Leo Trainor in connection with his showing of "Blondie Meets the Boss." Pup was awarded to the person giving him the most suitable name, so decided by a committee of judges. Through tieup with Station WSAN a "world's most famous blondes" contest was put over, this included sidewalk interviews, etc. Opening day, a local bus filled with attractive blondes toured the streets with banners and noise makers, girls distributed visiting cards with title, playdates and copy. Also planted in paper was a "sour-puss" contest, photos taken before and after witnessing the picture, were run.

Bodiford Executes 23 Exploitations For 4th-Run Date

For the fourth-run of "Jesse James" at the suburban Parkway in Fort Worth, Texas, Manager Lowell T. Bodiford reports tremendous business with a campaign composed of 23 different exploitations which are listed as follows:

Prominent old gun collection was displayed in "hard-to-get" bank window for two weeks ahead. 1898 model car was parked downtown on most conspicuous corner week before opening bannered with theatre copy. Another old model car was parked in front of the theatre for two weeks bannered in the same manner. A "Jesse James" trio, of girls in old-fashioned costumes, appeared at the theatre at the local Kiwanis Club and on the Interstate Theatres Circuit radio program. Girls sang the Jesse James song with additional words which gave the cast, date, etc.

Local Merchants Cooperate

Tieup was effected with local merchants to put out 1,000 large broadsides, stores also distributed Tyrone Power fan photos. Theatre staff was dressed in full costume. Heralds were also made available at schools. Bodiford discovered a localite named "Jesse James" and arranged to have a photo taken of the man holding up the box-office. Newspapers ran the photo as a gag, in addition to stories. Theatreman also secured a chair found locally in which James was supposed to have been seated when shot. Chair planted in bank window ahead and in theatre lobby during run, brought feature column story in the Fort Worth Press.

Giant banner with figure of Power in "James" character was displayed in outer lobby, in addition to 33-foot sign over marquee in advance. The Ripley trailer was used three weeks ahead, 1,000 technivues with frame of the picture attached were distributed as were coloring contest heralds to schools, with colored autographed photos to winners. Also aimed for kid patronage was a soap modeling contest with guns to winners.

Local armored motor service was promoted to banner their trucks, sidewalks stencilled and folks invited to write revues on the Street and Smith "James" books for which prizes were awarded. Special badges were made up and distributed to employees of various business firms, same to be their admission to the show and usher in bandit costume with back copy was entered in local roller skating derby.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

IN THE MIDDLE

"YOU ought to start a campaign." And with that Mr. Dave Harris, who travels the land in the circulation service of Motion Picture Herald, back in the city for a spell, burst into the editor's office like a gust of woodpeckers and proceeded as usual to lay down a barrage.

Man of action, firm of conviction, Mr. Harris is one of those who wants something done about everything, at once.

"The campaign," he said, putting his brief case down on top of the editor's papers, "will be to urge the exhibitor to try to educate his customers away from their destructive habit of dropping in any time and seeing pictures from the middle instead of the beginning. It is doing a lot of expensive damage to the business."

"That," pensively observed the editor, "reminds me that I heard something almost exactly like that from Mr. David W. Griffith in the spring of 1915—then he went and made 'Intolerance,' accidentally so constructed that it didn't make any difference when the customers came in—in fact, a lot of them didn't come in at all. Also, it seems to me that several times now and then down the years, Mr. Martin Quigley has editorially suggested that the place to begin is at the beginning. . . ."

"Maybe so, maybe so," snorted Mr. Harris, "and if they were right then, I'm righter now."

"And I'll tell you why," he hurried along, jarring the desk with a fist of emphasis. "The big expensive productions that are the life blood of the screen today are so made and put together with story and plot and cumulative effect that they have got to be seen exactly the way the story is told—otherwise no story, misunderstanding, a puzzled patron, bad word of mouth, a two million dollar picture ruined for another set of customers.

"It was bad enough back in the silent picture days, when story construction was simpler and themes were not so complex, when the story did not depend on the turn of a phrase, on action more than ideas.

"NOW in my travels I notice that a swell line of product is getting a lot of kicking around. It starts off first run with a bang, sold by premieres with audiences that start at the beginning and patronized by a lot of people who read the papers, know their pictures and have sense enough to go to the show when the show starts. Then as the picture plays down the line the poison sets in, and it's right in the sector where the initial selling fades out and the picture sells by word of mouth. The word comes from a lot of monkeys who go to the movies like they went to continuous vaudeville. One of the best examples of what happens is afforded in the case of 'Idiot's Delight.' I don't need to say how good it is, or how it started off, but out in the 'subsequents' the knocks are piling up—look at our 'What the Picture Did for Me' pages and you'll see exhibitors saying it's a grand picture and then wondering where the audiences are. It's a fine example of the sort of a picture that has to be seen from the beginning to be understood, to be enjoyed or even to make sense.

"That's happening right along, and it is a lot more serious than most showmen realize because it is not something that has come about abruptly. It is just a hangover from the other days with selling and seeing clinging to the old practices with a new and utterly different product."

Mr. Harris paused, ever so slightly, for breath, at which juncture the editor took his feet off the desk and fired, point blank: "You would do about it what?"

"EDUCATE, educate the monkeys"—that's Mr. Harris' show vernacular for the common run of seat buyers—"tell 'em while you sell 'em. It only takes a few lines of copy in the ads, a time schedule that means what it says in the lobby and some publicity that I'm sure the newspaper movie pages would be glad to cooperate on. The fast way to do it would be for the theatre to set aside a line of reserved seats and sell them with extra publicity on their availability at the proper hour. Make it a fashion. Exhibitors are timid about that—they can't stand the idea of letting a dime be turned away at the box office, no matter when the customer applies, and they are not of a state of mind to sacrifice a dime today for a dollar tomorrow.

"But it can be done—look at the way the customers line up to be in at the start on a prizefight, a horse race, or even a ball game. If they were ever convinced that they could not get their money's worth by starting in the middle of the motion picture they'd be there for the beginning. The motion picture theatre isn't a short-order and sandwich joint any more—it serves nothing but banquets. The customer who starts with the ice cream and coffee is in a hell of a state of mind when he sits around until the soup comes in again."

There you have it—Mr. Harris' campaign. He, by the way, has been an exhibitor too.

RADIO MARCHES ON

WHILE this pen was setting down last week's observations concerning radio as the newer news medium and reactions on the status and function of the press, arrangements were being completed to give radio reporters place in the press gallery of the House of Representatives in Washington.

That becomes official acceptance of the de facto news function of the radio and an assertion of its parallel rights, alongside the press of the printed word, to have access to news in the making. That is a milestone.

And while this column of type was still in the composing room, Governor Lehman of New York signed the Moffat-Coudert bill calculated to give radio the status of the press and privileges of free speech enjoyed by the daily newspaper, including equal protection against charges of libel, slander and invasion of privacy.

Media capable of service tend to prevail. Radio has made

Buying Pool

Spokesman for a group claimed to number 2,500 independent theatre operators will present a petition at the national Allied States convention in June asking support for a move to establish a buying and booking combine far exceeding in scope any organization previously formed along these lines. The move, reported this week, was said to have the sanction of Allied leaders. Its purpose was declared to be to acquire, through the combination, buying power equivalent to that of the largest circuits.

Concerted Protest

The British industry, exhibitors and distributors, is uniting in protest against the new import and excise taxes imposed on the industry in the new budget read to the House of Commons last week by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer. Conservative estimates in the trade place the total annual increase in the tax burden at $3,125,000 of which American interests, it is said, will be billed for 85 per cent.

its way, and will so continue, in spite of the press in so far as it can do things the press can not.

Radio enjoys two advantages, the speed of light across vast distances, and the communication of the spoken word with its capacities for infectious emotion as against communication by the difficult and scholarly art of reading of which so few are really effectively capable.

The news pages of this issue present the first summary of the state of a medium which tends to bridge between radio and press, the radio facsimile receiver. Despite its very considerable significance, facsimile radio has had scant attention from the press, possibly because of the higher pressure on television publicity. Doubtless the press is, too, a shade more really concerned about facsimile transmissions of the printed word—a newspaper printed in your home just before breakfast—than about television. Potentially facsimile may make the deeper impact upon the press. Just incidentally it does not promise to increase competition for the screen.

Economy Urged

Added costs, taxation, uncertainty in the foreign market and other factors make it necessary for Hollywood producers to take steps toward economy, without, however, injuring the quality of the product, in the opinion of Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, who visited the home office in New York this week for the first time in seven months.

He is quoted on this and other subjects on page 15.

"Directed" Peace

After negotiations extending two years and some bitter words that mellowed towards the end of negotiations, especially after Frank Capra, in February, had threatened a strike of all studio directors, the agreement between the motion picture producers and the Screen Directors' Guild this week appeared in final stages, as it awaited signatures by both interests, at mid-week. The agreement is in the form of two contracts, for nine years: one by the producers with the Screen Directors' Guild; the other, with the Unit Managers' Guild. Some salient terms are longer preparation time for directors, before shooting; raises and minimum salaries for unit managers and assistant directors; vacation and severance pay terms; and other wage, hour, and arbitration terms which will smooth, it is expected, this section of the "Hollywood labor front." Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Associated Motion Picture Producers, head of the producers' labor committee, and chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, this week asserted that "a conference table with a democratic give-and-take is the best medium" for settling differences.

Details on page 54.

Radio Developments

Two moves designed to extend "freedom of the press" to radio news reporters and commentators were noted this week.

In Albany, Governor Herbert Lehman signed the Moffat-Coudert Bill extending privileges of speech on news commentaries to radio broadcasters, stations, etc. It confers the same privilege of free speech now enjoyed by the press and amends the Civil Practice Law in relation to libel suits. The New York law empowers radio to make "fair and true" reports of any judicial, official or legislative news or proceedings without being liable on actions, providing the version is not misleading or malicious.

In Washington, arrangements were being completed to give radio reporters a place in the press gallery of the House of Representatives.

Other legislative moves are reported on page 38.

Taxes in Quebec

Theatre operators in Quebec are preparing to close all theatres in that city of 80,000 population in protest against the imposition of a new municipal tax of "10 per cent and breaks" on the gross receipts of all houses in the city. About 10 theatres including three first-runs have given their staffs notice of dismissal, but have not set a definite closing date. The new levy, decreed by Mayor Lucien Bornes, is to apply immediately but was announced as a temporary measure. Application of the tax, which exhibitors claim would in practice amount to about 14 per cent, would increase the total tax burden to about 40 per cent of gross receipts. A complete shutdown of theatres in the city would tie up theatre property worth approximately $1,500,000.

"Sucker Lists"

The publication of high bracket salaries reported to the Government, which in the past resulted annually in the compilation of booklets and lists for sale to promoters of luxury merchandise and others, has been ruled illegal in New York state, the first test case of its kind in the state courts.

The suit and the implications of the ruling are reviewed on page 36.

Reorganized

Transfer of the United States Film Service and the radio service of the National Emergency Council to the Office of Education, which, in turn, will be shifted from the Interior Department to a new Federal Security Agency which will be set up next month, is provided for in Reorganization Plan No. 2, submitted to Congress May 9 by President Roosevelt.

Comprising a number of shifts of bureaus and independent agencies, for the dual purpose of eliminating overlapping of governmental functions and introducing economy, the reorganization plan contemplates abolition of the National Emergency Council and the transfer of its functions to the White House Executive Office.

Under Reorganization Plan No. 1, transmitted to Congress last month and effective June 24, a Federal Security Agency would be set up to take in a number of the social and educational activities of the Government, including the Social Security Board and the Interior Department's Office of Education.

Under Plan No. 2, the Office of Education will administer the film and radio activities now conducted by the NEC, the President pointing out that they are clearly a part of the educational activities conducted by the Government.

King and Queen

Newsreel footage of the arrival of the British King and Queen in Quebec on Monday morning, aboard the Empress of Australia, will be in New York that evening, for the "make-up" of the regular issues of the five newsreel companies, under cooperative plans formulated a month ago, and approved by the Canadian Government. All duties on equipment brought into Canada by American newsreel cameramen will be waived for one month. However, the newsreel companies must, in addition to their own crews, cooperatively employ five Canadian cameramen. No specials will be issued by the American companies here, under their joint agreement, which also includes pooling of resources and footage. However, in Canada, there will be two 500-foot specials issued weekly during the stay of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Facsimile

More quietly introduced but none the less significant in the development of the art of communication, radio facsimile broadcasting by means of which printed matter of all kinds, news and advertising, is transmitted to receivers in homes was launched officially at the New York World's Fair together with its companion, television. It has been in experimental operation for more than a year.

Possibilities and accomplishments are reviewed on page 25.

Radio Probe Renewed

The Government's investigation of chain broadcasting and charges of monopolies in radio will be resumed on Wednesday, the Federal Communications Commission announced this week. David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, and Marks Levine, manager of the Concert Division of the National Broadcasting Company, are expected to testify.

Admission Tax

A tax on theatre admissions now is included in the New York state housing program before the legislature at Albany. The tax is included in a party-backed bill to be pushed by a majority in both houses.

French Awards

Five of the 10 prizes awarded foreign films by the newly formed French Academie du Film have been awarded to American players and product. Honored were "Dead End," for general technical and acting excellence; "You Can't Take It With You," for comedy; "Night Must Fall," for best drama; Bette Davis, for the best feminine interpretation (in "Jezebel"), and Robert Montgomery, for the best masculine interpretation (in "Night Must Fall").

Four of the 14 scheduled prizes were not awarded, as the Academy had not finished its findings. The Academy consists of 150 journalists, technicians, artists, directors and others connected with the industry.

Passed by Censors

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy" has been approved by all official censor boards in the country, it was reported this week by Warner Brothers, producers of the film, after the Kansas City board of censorship upheld a previous decision allowing the picture to be shown without cuts. Mrs. Eleanor Walton, city censor for Kansas City, had called on three members of the censor appeal board to view the film after a petition had been filed demanding its suppression.

In Hollywood Jack L. Warner, vice-president of the company, issued a statement which said in part:

"I understand about 100 people signed a petition asking the Kansas City censor board to re-review 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy.' I also understand this movement is headed by Herman Gastreich, German vice-consul in Kansas City, who obviously is not a citizen of the United States. I cannot believe that any group other than one sympathetic to the Nazi cause or to espionage in the United States would object to the picture. . . . It has been endorsed by leading patriotic societies who do not subscribe to the Nazi regime and by American war service and educational societies everywhere. . . . We feel the petition against our picture is un-American and repugnant to our citizens. Naturally we do not expect every individual to agree with the contents of our story, but we feel that no one other than the duly constituted authorities has the right to censor American motion pictures."

Canadian Boards

Premier Angus MacDonald, of Nova Scotia, has assured exhibitors that the regulation-of-distribution bill passed by the legislature will be held in abeyance while a self-formed conciliation board of exhibitors and distributors seeks to prove its worthiness.

Meanwhile, the Canadian government at Toronto enacted a measure for a National Film Board, to sponsor and regulate the production, distribution and exhibition of "national" films. There will be a film exchange, operated under the government's Motion Picture Bureau.

Fight Film Hearing

Hearings in Washington on the Barbour bill to repeal the ban on interstate transportation of fight pictures will be held by a Senate subcommittee May 25 and 26, with Jack Dempsey and other ring luminaries among the principal witnesses. Senator Ernest Lundeen of Minnesota will be chairman. The subcommittee expects to hear representatives of the motion picture and broadcasting industries as well as delegates from a number of organizations that will oppose the bill.

2,500 HOUSES ASK ALLIED FOR A BUYING COMBINE

Independent Owners Reported Ready to Present Petition at June Convention; Buying Power of Circuits Sought

Proceeding with secrecy, spokesmen reputedly representing 2,500 independent theatres, affiliated with Allied States Association and otherwise, have asked for and been given permission to bring before Allied's national convention, in Minneapolis, on June 13th-15th, a detailed plan for the establishment of what would be the largest independent buying-and-booking combine in the history of the business. Admission of the petition and the permission came Tuesday afternoon from William Alvin Steffes, national Allied vice president, in Minneapolis, who is in charge of convention arrangements.

Mr. Steffes would not divulge the identities of the petitioners, although certain Allied leaders are known to have nurtured such an idea for three years.

Its basic intention is to continue along new lines the Allied six-year-old fight against circuit "aggressions", to gain buying power for the independents such as would enable them to enjoy some part of the trading position held alone by the large chains.

The sponsors are understood to be ready to put strong effort behind the project to obtain this position for the independents in view of the several facts that (1) Neither the Government's or individuals' pending trust suits against the majors are likely to be adjudicated for a long time; (2) State legislatures have practically all adjourned, carrying over for another year or two Allied-sponsored bills against the majors; (3) Hope seems gone for any action by Congress this year on anti-block selling; and, (4) The majors' lawyers are still holding the industry trade practice program for self-regulation, which, even when enacted, says Allied, will not contain all of the relief demanded.

Government Argument Cited

One argument expected to be brought forth by the sponsors in behalf of a nationwide organization of independent buying power is the Government's repeated assertions, in its trust suit complaints and elsewhere, that the large circuits, both affiliated and independent, are in many instances operating monopolistically to the detriment of owners of individual theatres.

Both Mr. Steffes, as a national Allied officer and the national convention head, and sources otherwise involved declined to divulge any details of the plan to be proposed or the manner and method of its operation. It is known, however, that when first broached, it provided that the individual Allied member and any others entering into the project would agree in contract to relinquish full control of their film purchases to the new buying-and-booking combine, which would take the form of a company controlled by national Allied Directly operating the company would be Allied's national board of directors. These directors, in turn, would elect operating officers for the company, the financial cost and support of which would be obtained by participating members' contributing a certain percentage of their annual film rentals—probably fixed at three per cent.

ALLIED AND THE CODE

With the majors' lawyers still recasting the trade practice program, chief interest in the program for self-regulation centered this week, in the general invitation extended to all owners by Allied States to participate in an open forum at Allied's national convention in Minneapolis, June 13th to 15th; and, secondly, in the request made Monday in Allied States' affiliate in New York for the naming by National Allied of a new committee to negotiate in any further program conferences with the distributors.

New York Allied will bring up its proposal at an open forum on the code on May 25th at the Hotel Astor in New York. National Allied's original negotiating committee passed out of existence some time ago.

Acceptors of the invitation of W. A. Steffes to all industry groups to attend the Minneapolis meeting include several from the MPTOA major distributor and circuit executives, and representatives of the MPPDA.

Among them are Neil Agnew, Jack Cohn, Ned Depinet, E. L. Kuykendall, William F. Rodgers, James R. Grainger, W. Ray Johnston, Tom Conners, Al. J. Schlaifer, Joseph I. Breen, H. M. Richey, Charles C. Pettijohn, Harry Buxbaum, Sam Dembow, E. A. Golden, David Palfreyman, Abe Montague, William Scully, Edward M. Saunders, Mort Singer, George Skouras, Max Roth, Gradwell Sears, Jules Levy and Harry Brandt.

Previous Attempts Opposed

Most of the major distributors down through the years have viewed independent buying-and-booking combinations coldly, some even going so far as to refuse to sell pictures to them. As a result few survived any length of time.

The majors' present day attitude toward such a buying combine is unknown. Most of the corporate or sales leaders of the large companies on Wednesday stated that they were in no position to comment on the proposed independent project because of the suddenness with which it has come into the open, and the lack of details concerning it.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, said no statement could be made for his company, "because it all depends upon the principals involved." He added that, "Our pictures are for sale to responsible people."

Maurice Silverstone, head of Unitted Artists, said from the company's convention headquarters in Hollywood, "In order to make any comment it would be necessary to know the complete setup, the number of houses and their locations before United Artists, or any other distributor could enter into negotiations."

S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox said: "When it becomes an accomplished fact, I will state the company's policy."

Paramount Opposed

Neil Agnew, general sales manager of Paramount, said, "We are definitely and flatly opposed to booking and buying combinations as such—i.e., straight buying-and-booking combinations," as against the stock and/or ownership buying-and-booking arrangements.

Nate Blumberg, president of Universal, said he did not believe that there will be such a combine. "They have usually been unsuccessful," he added, concluding with the observation: "Anyway, let's cross the bridge when we come to it."

At Republic, Herbert J. Yates, and James Ross Grainger, president, were in regional sales convention, in San Francisco.

At Warners, no comment was forthcoming.

Abe Montague, for Columbia, said he would withhold comment, until he learned "what the combination is, who is in it, what its purposes are."

Edward J. Golden, vice president at Monogram, said, "We would have to meet the situation when it came up. Frankly, Monogram would like very much to sell to 2,500 exhibitors at one time."

Strangely, one official spokesman for the distributors held that "maybe such an arrangement would go a long way toward stabilizing distributors' contractual relations with independents through a central agency."

Agitation for local independent buying-and-booking combines has been strong of late. Formation of such a combination is on the agenda of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association convention, to be held in Kansas City, May 25th-26th.

In Oklahoma, where agitation has been the strongest, a plan to effect a combine was dropped at the last minute this week in favor of the formation of a state Allied association.

Small Groups in Operation

At present there are only a handful of independent "straight buying-and-booking combinations" in existence. A decade ago there were a dozen or more.

C. E. Buermley now operates the Cooperative Theatres booking combination in Detroit, for 75 theatres. Cooperation was formed 19 years ago by Ray Moon, who now is operating the Mutual booking combine outside of Detroit, also for 75 theatres.

The Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, formed by Milton Mooney, is one of the newest, operating in Cleveland and Cincinnati.

E. V. Richards has a combination partnership and booking arrangement in the New Orleans territory, which was the headquarters of the old Southern Enterprises of Stephen A. Lynch, who operated the largest buying-and-booking company of the day, buying and booking for theatres from Washington, D. C., clear to Dallas.

Watterson R. Rothacker Joins Quigley Publishing Company

Watterson R. Rothacker has been appointed vice president of the Quigley Publishing Company, publishers of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Motion Picture Daily, Better Theatres, the International Motion Picture Almanac, Fame and Teatro Al Dia. His headquarters will be in Hollywood.

Mr. Rothacker has conducted an exhaustive survey of foreign market conditions throughout the world. He recently returned from a visit to the principal markets of Latin America. He has had an extensive experience in motion picture affairs. Initially his contact with the motion picture was in journalism. He was variously connected with general amusement and musical publications and was United States representative of London publishing interests. He contributed articles to various advertising and selling publications.

In 1910 he established his own company, being the first to specialize in motion pictures for general advertising and educational purposes. In that year he was the author of the first book devoted to those uses of the motion picture medium. The Rothacker company was founded in association with Carl Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane. Mr. Rothacker subsequently acquired complete ownership of the company.

In 1915 he made several war pictures, including the evacuation of Antwerp and action on the Russian and Serbian fronts and behind the lines in Germany. The first important cartoon on film was produced in his studio that year. The subject was Sydney Smith's "Old Doc Yak." In the two succeeding years he produced several pictures at the Chicago studio and made in New York the first motion picture of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle. He produced the first motion pictures photographed from the air, the actual camera work being done by Herman DeVry, now head of the DeVry corporation.

At the Rothacker studios, too, there were early experimentations in sound pictures, recording, incidentally, the voice of the late and famed Frank Bacon, father of Lloyd Bacon, the director.

One of the more pretentious and successful production enterprises of the Rothacker studios was his production of "The Lost World," a fantasy made with stop motion manipulation of models and intricate sets. It was a famous First National release.

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER

In 1926 Mr. Rothacker sold his laboratories and studios to Herbert J. Yates, of Consolidated Film Enterprises. Since then, between sundry and extensive travellings abroad, Mr. Rothacker has been variously vice president and managing director of First National Productions at Burbank, also vice president of the Motion Picture Producers Association in Hollywood, in charge of the reorganization of the General Service Studios for Electrical Research Products, Inc., and vice president of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

Various persons now prominently associated with the industry were connected with the Rothacker organization. Among these are: E. O. Blackburn and George Gibson, of J. E. Brulatour, Inc.; J. Wesley Smith, of DuPont Film Manufacturing Co., and Harry Joe Brown, Twentieth Century-Fox producer. Edgar Bergen, of Charlie McCarthy fame, incidentally, once operated a polishing machine in the Rothacker Chicago studio. Ralph Morgan, now president of the Screen Actors Guild, first faced a motion picture camera at Rothacker's Chicago studio, co-starring with Peggy O'Neil in a feature film entitled "The Penny Philanthropist."

U. S. Requests Release Of Rosson and Wife

Raymond H. Geist, United States consul general in Berlin, has requested the Gestapo (German secret police) to release Richard Rosson, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and his wife, American citizens held at Graz on charges of making unauthorized pictures of military objects. Mr. Geist said he had a telegram from Winfield Sheehan, MGM producer, explaining exactly what work had been assigned to the Rossons and added that specific permission had been granted by the German propaganda ministry, which has jurisdiction over photographic activity, and the War Ministry, whose approval must be obtained for filming military objects. Mr. Rosson was sent to Austria by Mr. Sheehan to take pictures in connection with the production "Florian," written by Felix Salten. The story deals with the famous Lippizan horses of Austria.

The seizure in Montreal of a Nazi film, "Pour le Marite," is under investigation by the attorney general's department, according to the Provincial Police.

Film Preservative Report Is Issued

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has issued a report on film preservatives available to the industry for treatment of release prints. The report is based on extensive tests conducted by the Council's Committee on Improvement in Release Print Quality.

Comparative tests of the commercially available preservatives were made by including in one reel a sample of release print treated by each of the processes, and subsequently subjecting the test reel to release print film projection under actual theatre conditions.

A 2,000-foot reel of film was secured from a regular release, cut into 200-foot samples and each sample subsequently treated by one of the following preservative processes: Consolidated Edge Waxing, Eastman Cold Waxing, Gage Process, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Edge Waxing, Paramount Process, Peerless Process and Perfexit Process. The reel also included one 200-foot sample of unprocessed release print.

The report said:

"These tests indicate that because of the fact that a film preservative contributes to better projection as well as longer life, all release prints should be given some treatment before being placed in use. It is further recommended that in order to obtain full benefit from a preservative, any preservative used should be applied at the laboratory during the release printing procedure.

"However, the results of this one test indicate that all of the preservatives tested benefit the film, and in the opinion of this committee there is little difference between the results obtained from any one or the other of the preservatives under consideration."

The Council's Committee consisted of L. E. Clark, chairman; Gerald Best, A. C. Blaney, Gordon Chambers, George Crane, Ferdinand Eich, J. G. Frayne, Emery Huse, K. F. Morgan, Hollis Moyse and Ray Wilkinson.

"Hetzfilm" List Gains Two More

Two more films have been added to the list of "hetzfilm," pictures which the Nazis charge are produced by Americans and British "to whip up hatred against the Totalitarian states." The latest are RKO's "They Made Her a Spy" and the Edith Cavell film which Herbert Wilcox is producing in Hollywood for RKO.

By German Government decree, all music considered harmful to the National Socialist culture has been banned. The Reichsmusikkammer has issued a list of proscribed numbers, the publication, sale and performance of which are forbidden in Greater Germany.

Funds for Refugees

The committee handling funds collected by the Motion Picture Art Fund for German refugees has distributed $3,500 each to American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, Committee for Catholic German Refugees, and the American Committee for Christian German Refugees.

HOLLYWOOD CAN ECONOMIZE AND PRESERVE QUALITY, SAYS SCHENCK

Chairman of Twentieth Century-Fox Says Taxes Hold Net Profits Below Last Year, Though Gross Income Is Higher

At the company's New York home offices last week for the first time in seven months, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, "relaxed" and put forth a number of opinions on the situation now facing his company and the industry in general, thus—

The motion picture producers should economize without injuring their product. Ingenuity, he said, was necessary.

Taxes have added to costs, and foreign exchange fluctuations to uncertainty; hence, while grosses for the company were up this year, the net was less.

His own company was writing off all possible losses to be in sound financial position, in case of war.

The studios would not negotiate a basic labor agreement with the unions until they knew "who is the authorized bargaining agent."

If stories of social content were in good taste and of material lending itself to dramatic treatment, the company would produce them.

Regarding possible acquisition by the company of further exhibition interests, "now is no time to buy."

"Political Pictures"

Mr. Schenck, who had been detained on the coast by labor conferences, at which he represented the producers as president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, and chairman of the producers' labor committee, expanded on the "political pictures" theme.

"We deal with topical themes, if we have a subject that lends itself to screen treatment," he said. "We produce subjects of a controversial nature, and no one can object as long as they are presented truthfully, and without bias or propaganda.

"But we do not propose to deal with any subject that is objectionable to a foreign government, and therefore might be objectionable to our government as well."

Mr. Schenck added that the Warner Brothers production, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," had been feared by Hollywood as a possible harm to the industry, but that, attending the Hollywood premiere, he was "gratified" that the picture was in good taste, and felt it would have a "salutary" effect.

Cites Higher Grosses

Mr. Schenck doubted the imminence of a European war, but he asserted that the "war speculation has been a deterrent" to all business.

"As soon as it is settled, business may be expected to boom," he said.

He cited the higher grosses which Twentieth Century-Fox had obtained in the first quarter of the current fiscal year over last year's similar period, and the fact that the company's net was less than the similar period last year, as an instance of the unsettled business conditions.

"If business conditions and expenses were normal," he said, "our net probably would have been 100 per cent more than it was."

"More vigilance is needed in watching costs," he said.

Mr. Schenck declared all the studios were "working hard" to produce good pictures. He mentioned the current "Rose of Washington Square," of his own company, as a film upon which the qualities he termed necessary had been expended.

"Talking" with Baird Personnel

Inasmuch as Twentieth Century-Fox has an interest in the Gaumont British holding company, and GB's subsidiary Baird Television Company, is conducting a "television invasion" of America, Mr. Schenck was asked whether Baird's first theatre television installation would be at the Roxy, a New York first-run controlled by 20th-Fox. He conceded only that Sidney Kent, president of the company, had been "talking" with the Baird representatives here.

Ian Cremieu Javal, commercial director of Baird television, and a staff of engineers are in New York to demonstrate the equipment and install it in one or more Broadway theatres. The apparatus is on demonstration at the New York offices of the GB Company of America, 1600 Broadway.

PATRIOTIC SHORTS PRAISED BY DIES

Patriotic short subjects being produced by Warner Brothers were praised this week by Congressman Martin Dies, chairman of the Congressional committee investigating un-American activities. He was guest at a luncheon given in his honor at the company's studio at Burbank. Mr. Dies said the films aroused public support for his committee.

Foreign Film Group Aids New York Fund Drive

Distributors of foreign films have organized to raise a sum for contribution to the Greater New York Fund. Heading the campaign is an executive committee including Joseph Burstyn, Arthur Mayer, Max Goldberg, Jean Lenauer.

The Fabian circuit held two meetings this week on behalf of the drive, and Warners are also planning meetings for that purpose at the New York and Brooklyn Strands.

Gene Towne Joins RKO With Producing Unit

George Schaefer, RKO president, has closed a deal which brings Gene Towne, screen writer, to the studio as a producer. The terms call for four films a year for three years, with the first to start May 15th.

Graham Baker, Mr. Towne's writing partner for the past five years, will serve as the vice-president of the new producing unit, which is termed "The Play's the Thing Productions."

Fairbanks Pays U. S.

Payment of $103,730 by Douglas Fairbanks in Hollywood on Monday settled federal income tax claims in dispute 10 years.

May Insist U.S. Name Witnesses

The United States Department of Justice may be required to reveal the names of the makers of the complaints upon which it bases its anti-trust action in New York City against the large companies. It also may have to submit more particulars to the defendants.

At mid-week a ruling was expected from William Bondy, federal judge, in New York City, after a hearing Friday in which he reserved decision on the Government's request that it might keep secret the names of its witnesses. He asked the defendants to file a statement that they would not intimidate any witnesses whose names were revealed. The defendants, through their counsel, Colonel William Donovan, of the RKO legal staff, also were expected to ask for a more detailed bill of particulars.

Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, asserted that witnesses had begged the Government for protection; that Paramount, for example, in North Dakota, had refused to service an exhibitor who had filed a complaint.

In affidavits Sidney Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox; Gradwell Sears, sales manager of Warner Brothers; William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM; and Ned E. Depinet, sales manager of RKO, denied the companies ever had intimidated witnesses or would.

Mr. Kent declared it "was impossible to denounce" sufficiently the Government's charges; and that the Government attorneys were intimating that the companies are "habitual lawbreakers."

Colonel Donovan cited instances in which exhibitors had complained against companies but the companies had continued to service them. He said the defendants were not satisfied with the bill of particulars.

Momand Suit Hearing

Hearing on the defendants' motion to dismiss the action was expected on Friday in federal district court in Oklahoma City, in the A. B. Momand independent suit against the major companies.

Ask Extension

Further extension of time is expected to be sought by the independents Monday in Chicago federal district court, in the Adelphi theatre anti-trust action against the majors.

Jack McPherson Honored

A testimonial dinner was tendered Jack McPherson Tuesday evening in Chicago. Mr. McPherson is leaving National Screen for a new business connection in Hollywood. The speakers included Jack Osserman, Clyde Eckhardt, Henry Hershel, Jack Kirsch, W. Banford, James Donohue and Felix Mendelssohn.

Pete Mayer has resigned from his position as west coast manager for RKO Pathe News to work with Herbert Kline on a documentary travelogue in Europe.

THEATRE RECEIPTS OFF AS MUCH AS 50 PER CENT IN COAL-STRIKE AREA

Declines Noted in Three Hundred Houses in Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania; Twenty Theatres Closed

Motion picture theatre owners, like other local business men, are somewhat "in the middle" between the coal mine operators and the miners in one of the biggest "wars" between management and labor in the war-scarred history of the soft coal industry.

The two-month-old deadlock over a closed shop in the mines, which this week caused the President to intervene, has resulted in many darkened theatres and in declines in box office income of as much as 40 per cent in the areas affected the longest—Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania—where John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America have been on strike since March 14th. Calling out of the western soft coal miners did not come until last week, and it is yet too soon to notice any serious inroads on theatre business in those states.

300 Theatres Affected

More than 300 theatres have suffered business decreases in the last month varying from five to 50 per cent under last year, due to a general industrial slump accentuated by the strike.

Houses in certain mining areas have been shut down, and others have curtailed their playing time from seven days to two or three, particularly in small towns of southwestern Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Reduced revenue has been common to the Warner Brothers Circuit, which operates 61 theatres in the district, to Harris Amusement, which owns 18 theatres, 13 of them in the strike area, also to the Manoz Circuit, managing 18 theatres, and more than 200 independent exhibitors who clear much of their business information through the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania.

Daylight-saving time, begun April 30th by many of the larger towns and cities, also has been blamed for part of the let-down, as well as some factory and minor office force contraction, by-products of slackened coal production which is a vital key to business prosperity in this nation's great bituminous area.

One bright spot in the situation is the prospect of a fast-paced summer in the black-diamond fields, predicted to exchange men and exhibitors by coal operators who say that their reserves are almost exhausted, and that with settlement of the strike, the miners will be called back to fill orders that should keep them working at top speed for months.

Smaller Theatres

Larger theatres have not suffered so keenly as that minority which has seen average box-office slide to mid-July figures, in some cases. Viewed more direly by the house managers than by exchangemen, who have not yet felt serious repercussions, the coal crisis is blamed by coal-area business and finance circles for a downward trend in trade that before Easter was not only encouraging but, in some cases, surpassing 1938 returns.

Indicative of the general retrogression, which some theatre men believe to be only temporary, are decreases in street car and bus traffic, liquor sales, bank clearings, and car loadings.

Downtown first-run houses, however, and a number of suburban and inland towns, are showing fairly stable grosses, attributed to the crop of highly promotional pictures being currently released.

CENSORSHIP VIEWS AT FILM FORUM

At the spring meeting of the Philadelphia Motion Picture Forum, last week, Mrs. Edna Carroll, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Censor Board, upheld film censorship, while Langdon Post, of the National Board of Review, attacked censorship in any form.

Mrs. Carroll said that the people of Pennsylvania need a certain kind of protection against the small minority of motion picture producers who, she said, turn out films of an obscene nature.

Mr. Post said that censorship, in any form, is wrong.

20 Theatres Closed

Effects of the miners' strike in the soft coal fields of Kentucky and West Virginia are likewise being definitely reflected in the closing of theatres, particulary in the smaller situations, where patronage has dwindled to the equivalent of an irreducible minimum. The situation, which is described as the worst in many years, is especially acute in the eastern portion of Kentucky and throughout the entire state of West Virginia, in the combined area of which approximately 20 theatres have already closed.

The smaller theatres in this section, with little or no surplus or reserve with which to carry on when business takes a serious dive for any length of time, have no alternative other than to go dark, with the exhibitors thus taking it for that inescapable overhead which is a constant factor even when the houses are inoperative.

This territory is served out of Cincinnati, and some of the Cincinnati exchanges have withdrawn their salesmen from the affected areas. Others are contemplating similar action.

Reports from those interviewed in this territory are to the effect that houses in the larger situations, although being able to operate because of adequate financial reserve, are off as much as 50 per cent in their grosses, with business gradually declining. These houses, however, are able to weather the storm, for a time at least.

Ellis Now Attorney for Quiz Case Complainants

Emil K. Ellis, New York film attorney, is now handling the suit by Milton Spitz against the eight majors, several realty corporations, and the Motion Pictures Greatest Year, Inc., charging violation of copyright in the use of the "Movie Quiz" Contest, and asking for an accounting, costs, damages, and certain properties.

Shortly after the suit was begun, Louis Nizer, as attorney for most of the defendants, and Rosenblatt and Jaffe, as attorneys for Columbia, moved for dismissal of the complaint. Arguments on these motions, after repeated delays, will be heard on June 3, it is expected.

Two Companies Report Profits, One a Loss

First quarter for Consolidated Film Industries and subsidiaries resulted in a net profit of $217,733, the equivalent of a 50 cent regular quarterly dividend on 400,000 preferred $2 dividend shares and three cents each on 524,973 common shares.

Net profit of $395,751 was earned by DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation in the first quarter as compared with $329,751 for the same period last year. Pathe Film Corporation holds 35 per cent of the stock and the balance is owned by E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company.

American Seating for the March quarter reports a net loss of $55,688 as compared with a net loss of $30,051 in the first quarter of 1938

Three Companies Set Dividends

The board of directors of Paramount Pictures at a meeting in New York Tuesday declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, payable July 15th to stockholders of record June 30th. The company also declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the first preferred stock and 15 cents a share on the second preferred stock payable July 1st to stockholders of record June 15th. The common dividend was the first since the 1935 reorganization.

In the past three years Paramount and its consolidated subsidiaries have reduced their interest-bearing indebtedness by over $10,000,000, according to a company statement.

The board of directors of Roxy Theatre, Inc., New York, this week declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents per share on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation, payable June 1, 1939, to stockholders of record May 18th.

Columbia Broadcasting System this week declared a dividend of 35 cents on both Classes A and B stock, payable June 9th. Current disbursement compares with 25 cents paid three months ago and 25 cents paid a year ago on the issues.

Hoblitzelle, Others, Talk At Interstate Convention

The importance of citizenship and of voting was impressed upon the employees and partners of the Interstate Circuit of Texas, by its head, Karl Hoblitzelle, in his keynote speech at the annual circuit convention in Galveston, Texas, on Monday and Tuesday.

P. K. Johnson and Harry Sachs, booking department heads, discussed booking situations. R. J. O'Donnell, general manager, said the "best" program was composed of one feature and several shorts. Joe Luckett discussed attendance of children. John Maroney, general counsel, outlined possible effects of late court decisions.

Among others who spoke were Y. Frank Freeman and Austin Keogh, of Paramount Pictures; Judge D. F. Strickland, of the legal staff; Besa Short, short subjects head; Frank O. Starz, publicity and advertising director, and Ray Beall of the advertising department.

Other visitors to the convention were Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures; E. V. Richards of the Saenger circuit; R. B. Wilby and Mike Kincey, of the Wilby-Kincey circuit.

3,500 Bookings Called Highest Number Possible on Foreign Picture, Most Receiving Between 200-400, Say Exchanges

In the face of rapidly contracting foreign markets for American product and despite any leanings of American sentiment in the political and military disturbances in Europe and the Orient, the last 16 months have brought a sizeable increase in the number of foreign films offered in this country, and in the number of distributors as well. There were 231 foreign films released by 37 distributors.

Distributor sentiment, however, as expressed this week, was as follows:

Foreign product cannot compete with Hollywood's, save in a few instances, and the majority of foreign films is not successful. (British pictures were not considered "foreign product" in the general study. Though 33 all-British films are among the 264 titles listed herewith, any pictures made in England by American companies are not included.)

The absolute possible maximum number of bookings for a foreign picture is 3,500, most receiving between 200 and 400.

The appeal of foreign pictures is to the American intelligentsia rather than to individual language groups.

Deny Threat to U. S. Product

That these films, led by the French in number, constitute a threat to domestic product was denied by such distributors as Jean Lanauer, of Lenauer International Films, and I. E. Lopert, of Pax Film, both of New York. Characterizing the whole question of the importance of distribution and exhibition of foreign films as "a storm in a teacup," Mr. Lanauer said that it is and would remain a small business simply because of the limited supply of good foreign product. He explained the increased number of distributors this way: "Each time there's a new big foreign picture, another distributing company is formed." To this Mr. Lopert added that "foreign pictures will never be able to compete with Hollywood; no such scale is possible."

Only the Foremost Films

It was also asserted that all but the foremost product of any other country would be "doomed to complete failure" in the American market and there is "no such thing as quantity, but only quality." In terms of actual distribution, the more than 10,000 bookings which many a major American film receives compares to a ceiling of about 3,500 for a top foreign film. Mr. Lopert cited "Mayerling," which, while playing such circuits as Loew's, RKO, Warners, Fox Intermountain, Brandt, Balaban and Katz, Consolidated and Interstate, will not exceed the 2,500 mark in bookings. He added that the success of "Mayerling" may well make it easier for some other foreign film to exceed this number, but not by more than 1,000 situations at most. Meanwhile, a run-of-the-mill foreign film may not receive enough bookings to pay its negative costs in this country, even falling underneath 25 bookings. Mr. Lopert put it this way: "It must be considered superior to Hollywood product to make money."

FRENCH FILMS LEAD IN IMPORTATIONS

French product led, numerically, the 231 foreign films shown in America in the past 16 months; with the total foreign product representing 17 different nationalities ranging from Bali to Greenland. The French accounted for 78 pictures, or 34 per cent of the total; with Germany (29 films) next in line.

A listing of the nationalities represented, with the number of pictures for which they accounted, follows:

French—78
German—29
Russian—25
Hungarian—24
Mexican—17
Yiddish—12
Viennese—12
Italian—9
Irish—8
Polish—5
Czech—4
Chinese—3
Swedish—2
Balinese—1
Greenland—1
Ukranian—1

Motion picture production of Austria and Czechoslovakia has become part of the German industry since the absorption of those countries by the Reich.

The average number of bookings for the 24 Hungarian films shown in America from January 1st, 1938, to date was about 40 per film; while the Casino Film Exchange, which distributed 20 of the 29 German films released during the period, accounted for even fewer steady bookings of its pictures, the average running about 25 regular bookings a film, not including irregular showings.

Market for Good Films

Irving Shapiro, general manager of World Pictures, distributors of "Grand Illusion," which was booked in such top situations as the RKO, Warners and Publix circuits, said that "there does not exist a market for foreign language pictures per se, but there does exist a market for good films irrespective of where they have been produced." Thus, "A good foreign film will do business all over and an inferior one will do business nowhere."

That the appeal of such foreign pictures as are successful is primarily to the "intellectuals," was also pointed out by Mr. Lenauer, who called this the reason why the French not only outnumber but outgross other foreign films. As attested by the Hungarian and German situations, the appeal to a foreign language element in America is limited.

Propaganda Films "Don't Pay"

In addition, Mr. Lenauer said that pictures obviously propaganda don't pay, which makes "foreign distribution in this country hang on the fate of Europe." Aside from the question of war, which would virtually stop production in those countries affected, a political change in any of the major European producing capitals toward the Axis type of government would result in films carrying a totalitarian message, and then they would cease to be of great interest to American audiences, it was pointed out. Hope of stabilization in the business was felt by Mr. Lenauer.

Of the 264 films from other countries (including the all-British films) released in the United States in the past 16 months, only 20 were handled by the large American companies. All of the majors were represented except Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners. 20th-Fox began distributing Gaumont-British product as of the beginning of this year. Of the 20 films, all but three were British. Columbia, through its Famous Foreign Features Department, released three French films.

A list of the distributors of the 264 films and the titles of the product which they released from January 1, 1938, through April of the present year, follows:

RADIO FACSIMILE TRANSMISSION OF NEWS FOR HOMES TRIED OUT AT FAIR

"The Radio Press" Small Newspaper Sponsored by New York Herald Tribune and Shown in RCA Exhibit

by FLOYD STONE

Less ballyhooed than television to the thousands at the New York World's Fair, but as pregnant with possibilities to the motion picture industry, is the art of radio facsimile: the transmission of news and other matter directly into the home on radio facsimile receiving sets.

"The Radio Press," a small newspaper sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune, was shown to the public at the RCA Exhibit at the Fair, as it was supplied news from the Herald staff and wire services, as it was edited, as the copy was given to an electrical typewriter with interchangeable type, as it was fed into the electrical scanner, and as it came out, a small but informative paper, from the RCA facsimile receiver, in the same room.

Plans "Photo-Offset" Chain Of Newspapers in 25 Cities

While radio facsimile is in an admittedly "infant" stage, and dependent for its success upon the number of radio facsimile receivers in homes, wire facsimile, used for many years to transmit pictures, has advanced so that various interests feel it can supplant printed newspapers.

Burgeoning now is a plan for a chain of "photo-offset" newspapers in 25 "underpapered" cities; a plan authored by Herb Moore, president of Transradio Press Service, which supplies news to radio stations. The proposal is for the transmission of national and regional news from New York and from regional units, to local newspaper offices, where "photo-offset" machines (instead of highly expensive printing presses) would turn out thousands of copies for local distribution. Purely local news would be typed by a special typewriter with interchangeable fonts, in the office of the local paper; it would then be pasted onto the dummy being photographed by the offset press.

Radio facsimile would also be used by the local paper's radio transmitter, it was pointed out, when an appreciable number of local homes had sets.

Transradio's plans include cities of Boston, New Orleans, Phoenix, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Dallas, Pittsburgh, and Richmond. Canadian cities may also be used.

Engineers Optimistic

The demonstration was unique in the East but not wholly so, nor was it new to the country as a whole, for this type of facsimile broadcasting of news has been underway for some time by Station WOR, in New York City, and stations in Columbus, Ohio, Buffalo, Cleveland, St. Louis, Chicago, Sacramento, Fresno, and other cities.

It assumed importance mainly as a reminder that the facsimile art, slumbering in the laboratories until several years ago, and up to two years ago buried by its exclusive use in telegraph company and wired-photo service offices, is regarded by engineers and newspapermen with as much optimism as television and with perhaps more determination.

Experimentation Cost Lower

Primarily, this, as pointed out by the engineers, is because facsimile costs less for experimentation than television, or radio. No talent, no lights, not even a regular studio is necessary; only printed matter. Also, the applications for facsimile appear to be innumerable; limited only by human ingenuity. It can be a purveyor of literature, of news, of pictures, of entertainment. No one at the present time knows for a certainty, but it is ventured by some that facsimile may replace newspapers to a large extent, if not wholly. It certainly, from all appearances, might make unnecessary the use of the printing press as now constituted. It can be used simultaneously with the broadcasting of sound and sight information; thus, it can be appurtenant to television and radio. It can be sent out on short waves and on the standard wave bands. It does not demand any attention by the person receiving the news; he need not be present for a facsimile transmission. There are other factors.

Facsimile, at present, is thoroughly experimental. The attention to television by most of the nation's radio manufacturers, especially RCA, has prevented engineering staffs from giving their full time to the process, however, highly they regard it. The lessening of tension, now that television has become a public feature, may be expected to bring increased promotion of facsimile, the exhibit at the RCA building in the Fair being an example.

Sixteen Experimental Licenses

The licenses granted to some 16 stations by the Federal Communications Commission are purely experimental, and there is no prospect of commercial licenses being granted for some time. No station has yet asked for one. Granting of a commercial license awaits the setting up of standards, and there are no standards; the building of a market, and no one knows what the market is; the selling of sets to the public, and only about 1,500 sets have been sold.

To the FCC, the situation resembles that of television. Standards are most important; and facsimile, however good, is still a laboratory product, subject to almost daily change or improvement.

Two Leading Systems

Two systems at present lead: the RCA and the Finch, this the product of the Finch Telecommunications Laboratory, New York City. The RCA system is used by the St. Louis and California group of stations; the Finch by the Eastern and Midwestern stations.

The two systems, at this week's writing, differ in advantage, according to engineer opinion. The RCA is said to give clearer type and pictures, and to give a wider page, four newspaper columns to the Finch's two. However, an RCA receiver must operate on the same current source as the transmitter; very few RCA sets have been manufactured, and none is for sale to the general public. It is for this reason, it is said, that the Eastern and Midwestern group of stations have turned from RCA to Finch.

The Crosley Radio Corporation, of Cincinnati, is manufacturing facsimile sets, under Finch patents. This means, to the network, a market at which they can aim their broadcasts. The Finch company is working on improvements to speed up the reception of their receivers, also. And, most importantly, the Finch-Crosley receivers do not require the same current source as the transmitter.

Not "Jumping the Gun"

It was said this week at the RCA Laboratories in Camden, N. J., that "before" the end of summer the RCA sets would be able to work independently of the transmitter source of current. However, it was also said that no plans had been formulated for sale of RCA sets to the general public. When it was pointed out that stations using facsimile would find it advantageous to have a large receiving public, something which could be achieved only by sale of sets directly to the public, it was answered that the RCA company felt that, because the present FCC licensees are only experimenting and probably will continue to be doing so, because the industry is still in a formative state, the company did "not want to jump the gun." The official spokesman emphasized that the establishment of a large receiving public would force an experimental station to establish rigid schedules.

Proceeding on the opposite assumption, that to obtain a commercial license from the FCC requires the establishment of a large receiving public, the Crosley Radio Corporation, manufacturers of radio, refrigerators, and other mechanical products, and operators of Station WLW, Cincinnati, have placed on the market their Finch-patent "Crosley Reado," facsimile receiver, retailing for $79.50 and attachable to any radio receiver of five to seven tubes. Since its introduction approximately two months ago, a thousand or so of such receivers have been sold. There are 400 or so more in use, experimentally produced.

Used by Mutual Network

The Mutual facsimile network using the Finch system is composed of WGN, Chicago; WOR, New York; WLW, Cincinnati; WHK, Cleveland. They broadcast facsimile news every Saturday morning from 1:30 to 3:00 A. M., on the regular broadcast band.

The Crosley sets have a time clock attachment, which permits starting a set approximately at the time the station broadcasts, and ceasing, automatically, at the end of the broadcast, while the owner is away from the set.

The sets also are equipped for short wave, to catch facsimile during hours when the standard broadcast bands are occupied with the usual radio transmission. Stations in the network with short wave stations are WHK (W8XE); WOR (W2XWP); and WLW (W8XUJ). The WOR short wave unit, atop 1441 Broadway, next to its home offices at 1440 Broadway, New York City, broadcasts facsimile every afternoon from four to five o'clock.

20th-Fox Uses System

The first motion picture company to make use of the medium has been Twentieth Century-Fox, which has placed its photos and publicity matter consistently in the issues of WOR Radio Print, the title of that station's radio facsimile news service.

Ultra short wave facsimile, while necessary for daytime broadcasts because of the preoccupation of the regular radio channels, is limited as television is, to the "optical range" of 40 to 50 miles, and is regarded as for city dwellers only.

Besides its use by the Mutual network, facsimile is being experimented with by the McClatchy Newspapers in California, and by the St. Louis Post Dispatch, in St. Louis. These use the RCA system.

The McClatchy newspapers publish "The Radio Bee' daily over station KFB, Sacramento, and KMJ, in Fresno. It has eight pages of United Press news, and features, pictures, and comics. The transmission is from KFB, but both stations are "tied in" on the broadcasts. One hundred RCA sets, placed in Sacramento and Fresno homes, and periodically shifted to other homes, are in use in that area. The McClatchy company owns these sets.

To an unstated number of RCA sets in the St. Louis area (the FCC requires an experimenter to purchase at least 50 sets, to provide an audience), the St. Louis Post Dispatch is publishing, in facsimile, a nine-page daily edition over station W9XZY, the short wave outlet of the regular station KSD.

Other interests and stations experimenting or having licenses for experimental facsimile are: W2XR, Long Island City; Detroit News; St. Louis Star-Times; Sparks Withington Company, Michigan; WBNS (W8XUM) Columbus, Ohio; WBEN, Inc., Buffalo; Yankee Network, New England; WHO, Des Moines.

SIMPLIFY RADIO FACSIMILE SETS

In designing home radio facsimile receivers, engineers have worked these factors out as "desiderata":

The set should be automatic, except for periodic servicing.

It should give black and white reproduction, of newspaper standards.

It should be sound-proofed, to avoid waking sleepers while it records during night hours.

Its basic design must be amenable to future improvements.

Its cost should be equivalent to that of a "good" radio receiver.

It should operate with very little attention from non-technical owners, differing from the experimental sets monitored by laboratory engineers.

It should be, preferably, in one unit.

Facsimile is a greater problem in application than it is technically, from the opinions gathered among those interested in its emergence from obscurity. Some of the ways in which it could be used are described earlier in this article; following are other phases.

The early morning broadcasts on regular wave bands are expected to service rural listeners, and the ultra short wave to service metropolitan. The carrying power of the regular wave bands will reach remote districts, it is expected, and make unnecessary in such districts the distribution or even the publication of newspapers. Obviously, the costs of route boys, of local distribution offices, even of local presses, might be undercut by a service from a central metropolitan office, carried at virtually nothing over the air waves to the remote receiver in the home.

Interchangeable Typer

A press is not needed even for the setting of the type which is sent over the air. At the Herald Tribune RCA exhibit at the Fair, the typesetting is done by a Coxhead interchangeable and self-adjusting electrical Varityper, a semi-typewriter whose cost is fractional to that of a standard press, the attachments and the large plant necessary to maintain it.

Such a typer, at local stations of the network, could insert local news for the rural listener. While the facsimile could be sent only at morning hours over long wave, the local stations in a network could maintain short wave outlets for facsimile broadcasting, during the day, of local news.

The city dweller could be serviced more easily by short wave only, as that is not hampered by time limitations, and the city dweller is in a circumscribed area. As in the case of the rural listener, the issuance of a newspaper as now constituted would be unnecessary both from the viewpoint of the receiver's convenience and the viewpoint of publication costs.

Under another idea for the transmission of facsimile news to local stations, from the large metropolitan news center, this news would be augmented at the local station by local news typed in properly spaced pages or blank spaces, and the whole would be photo-offset in the local area, as a daily paper is printed. Such procedure would not be dependent upon home receivers; would supplant, and appear as, an ordinary newspaper; and a photo-offset plant is much cheaper than a printing plant.

Simultaneous Broadcasts

It is also possible to broadcast both sound and facsimile simultaneously over the regular long wave channels. Thus, the cost of "servicing" present radio or television programs (i.e., the sending out, after or before, the program, of printed literature of instruction or advertising) would be eliminated. While the program was being received by sound or sight in the home, the facsimile receiver would be receiving printed matter about the program. It is possible too, to send facsimile via short wave, simultaneously with the broadcast of a long wave program.

The uses to which facsimile can be put appear unlimited; one of the latest ideas, and apparently practical, is for the reception, by short wave facsimile receivers in patrolling police cars, of "rogues' gallery" pictures.

The function of advertising in facsimile has not been worked out yet, because of its purely experimental nature. At present it appears that advertising will be used as it is in newspapers; side by side with the news items. Therefore a wide printed page, such as the RCA system affords is considered advisable, for it is thought that the public will not stand for a column or two of news and a column or so of advertising, this standing alone as it comes from the receiver.

Pull "Nation" Reissue

"The Birth of a Nation," advertised as the first showing with sound, was pulled out of the Alhambra theatre in Milwaukee after two days following a decision by the Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission that the film is historically untrue and tends to arouse racial hatred.

Charles Leonard, formerly of the United Artists publicity and advertising staff, last week was named producer's home office representative for Herbert Wilcox Productions, Inc., and Max Gordon Plays and Pictures Corporation. His headquarters will be at RKO Radio in Hollywood.

Playwrights Producing Company, Inc., producers of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Knickerbocker Holiday" have moved into new offices at the International Building, Rockefeller Center, New York City.

"SOFTBALL" GAMES RETURN AS COMPETITOR TO U. S. THEATRES

Spring and Summer Attendance Estimated at 72 to 100 Millions, All During Show Hours, with Movement Spreading

"Softball" games, bane in the past to many a spring and summer night's business at motion picture box offices, are returning this year as an even greater competitive threat to exhibitors, particularly in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, the south and the east, and, in a new mushroom growth through the west and Rocky Mountain regions.

Basing estimates on the growth of the "backlot" pastime in the last six years, M. J. Pauley, executive secretary of the Amateur Softball Association, declares that atendance at the games this spring and summer will run upwards of 100,000,000. Frank G. Menke, noted sports authority in Chicago, gives the more conservative estimate of 72,000,000. Whatever the total, virtually all of the attendance is during early evening theatre hours and on Saturdays and Sundays.

Most Active in Chicago

The most active participant of all cities is Chicago, where the young women who cavort about Chicago's vacant lots in scanty silks again are making their annual appearance, much to the delight of sports lovers who enjoy free softball games and much to the discomfiture of theatremen.

Mr. Pauley, of the Softball Association, an international organization that governs the activities of most of the softball teams throughout the world, says the game has grown from a mere nothing to its present status as a national pastime since 1933, only six years. Mr. Menke adds that, next to basketball, which has been around for some 50 years, softball drew the largest crowds of any sport last season.

100,000 Teams

More than 100,000 softball teams have been organized during the past six years. About the same number of unorganized or "wildcat" teams are active, Mr. Pauley reports. Not only has the United States gone extensively into the game, but in Canada, Cuba, the Philippines, Hawaii, New Zealand, Porto Rico and England the softball activity is growing rapidly.

The midwestern cities show the greatest interest in softball games. Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati are almost on a par with the number of teams and total attendance reported.

In Chicago, for example, there are some 2,800 organized softball teams. Of this number about 500 are composed of girls. The number of "wildcat" teams is about equal to the organized group, it is said, making a total of about 5,000 teams in the Chicago area alone.

The average attendance at the games is 100 people. Many games draw from 1,000 to 3,000 persons at the height of the season. The average number of games played by a team during the summer season is 50.

Daylight savings time is credited for the strong foothold softball has gained in the last few years. Another factor is the development of so many teams among girls.

In the last two years many local merchants have organized teams of either sex to represent them in competitive games. Vacant lots in the neighborhoods have been converted into "ball parks" with grandstands erected for the patrons, who pay nothing for admission but get to see a game free, although it must be said that the ever-present public address systems give the merchants sponsoring the games plenty of adverting in return for his investment.

Mr. Pauley reports that 1939 undoubtedly will be the biggest year in the game's history. The game is spreading throughout the south and into the east. New York state has many teams but New York City, due to a scarcity of playing fields, is behind other cities in the number of teams as compared with the population.

The West Coast is a softball mecca and the Rocky Mountain area is fast developing.

In Chicago, as elsewhere, exhibitors are interested in finding some means of converting this softball "mania" into an asset. Last year some theatre managers had the neighborhood teams appear in person on the stage of their theatres after the games. The idea was to get the team followers to the theatre. Some exhibitors said this gave the games more prominence, others felt it got business.

John Balaban, head of Balaban and Katz theatres, Chicago, has, with the advent of daylight savings time, ordered his managers to arrange to start their evening shows later than has been the custom.

Last year a number of exhibitors were planning to start a movement to require the licensing of the lots where softball is played. They felt this would bring about a cessation or cause an admission fee to be charged. This movement is to be revived.

NEWSPAPER PAYS SOFTBALL BILLS

Francis Blake, Kansas City, Kan., street commissioner, told 4,500 soft ball players of the city that there weren't enough funds to pay for lights. The Kansas City Kansan stepped forward and guaranteed the light bills at the various parks and grounds so that the players could go ahead.

National Decency Legion Classifies Twelve Films

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing this week four were approved for general patronage, seven were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Code of the Secret Service," "Fixer Dugan," "Romance of the Redwoods," "Sorority House," Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Boys' Reformatory," "Heroes of the Marne" (French), "Outside These Walls," "Stolen Life," "Three Waltzes" (French), "Torchy Blane Runs for Mayor," "Wanted by Scotland Yard." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Curtain Rises" (French).

Chilean in U. S. For Film Survey

The answer to obtaining the uncultivated Latin-American market is the production of pictures in Spanish, Alfonso Merlet, assistant manager of the Italo-Chilena theatre chain of Chile, intimated this week, in New York City, in his tour of inspection, which, naturally, took in the New York World's Fair. (Picture in Pictorial section.)

Mr. Merlet, who is in the country as an official representative of the Chilean Government, in which capacity he will inspect the motion picture industry and other industries of this country for about two months, cited the success of Spanish language pictures in lower priced "neighborhood" theatres.

Mr. Merlet's theatre chain this year is playing 65 Hollywood productions, about 25 French, and about one dozen Spanish language. The latter pictures, he emphasized, are a necessity in the neighborhood houses.

According to Mr. Merlet, the Argentine productions now are nearing the quality of Hollywood productions.

Some other observations of Mr. Merlet:

First run Chilean houses do not "double feature."

By government law, no theatre is allowed to operate a single show for more than two hours.

Censorship in Chile is strict.

Chilean audiences do not like "dubbing."

Admission prices in Chile are the lowest in South America.

Exhibitors are now trying to boost the present top admission price of six pesos, to eight pesos.

Mr. Merlet's chain operates 14 theatres. Eight of the houses play Spanish language pictures.

The Chilean exhibitor said this week that he planned to visit the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition, and the Hollywood studios. He had brought with him five Chilean produced newsreels, which he is offering to exhibitors here, free of charge, as a good-will gesture.

"Union Pacific" Train and Stars Reach New York

The "Union Pacific" special, after a stopover at West Point, arrived in Jersey City last Friday, with a party headed by William Dine, associate producer, and Arthur Rosson, location director. Cecil B. DeMille, producer-director, joined them there.

Included in the train party were Lynne Overman, Brian Donlevy, Patricia Morison, William Henry, Evelyn Venable, Robert Preston, Anthony Quinn, Sheila Darcy, Judith King, Luana Walters and Evelyn Luckey. A "Union Pacific" costume ball was held at the National Arts Club last Saturday.

President Roosevelt viewed the train in Washington on Tuesday and a group of 300 Congressmen were guests at a screening of the film Tuesday night.

On last Friday evening a broadcast over WMCA took place from the lobby of the Paramount Theatre in New York.

RIGHTS OF LABOR, ASCAP, FILMS IN TELEVISION BRING NEW PROBLEMS

Jurisdiction to Actors' Equity Indicated; ASCAP Says Rights of Members Are Vested but Delays Setting Fees

Now that television has rounded that corner with regular daily telecasts to the public underway, questions are being posed for settlement regarding the rights of the various factors in the new field, particularly the position of labor, of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and of the film industry with the vast sources of dramatic rights that it controls.

Jurisdiction to Equity

At meetings held last week by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent body of all American Federation of Labor performer groups, it was indicated that jurisdiction over the television field would be granted to Actors' Equity. Other labor groups involved had been the American Federation of Radio Artists, the American Guild of Musical Artists and the Screen Actors Guild.

Meanwhile, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, at a meeting of the board of directors last Friday, adopted a resolution to the effect that the television rights of its members were vested in it, but agreed that inauguration of a schedule for fees would await the actual commercial use of television. Mechanical rights, including television, to the works of the members of the Song Writers Protective Association will be taken over on June 1st.

Literary Rights

Literary rights for television performances have been included in approximately 95 per cent of the contracts under which authors and playwrights have sold their work to film companies since the advent of sound, attorneys, editors and agents point out; while television's use of films at present accounts for about 90 per cent of the total programs, a proportion which will not be maintained in the future, it is indicated.

Although no official announcement of jurisdictional rights is due until Monday, Actors' Equity spokesmen say that there is "no question about awarding jurisdiction to Equity, in our minds, because we feel we have always had it, inasmuch as television jurisdiction is included in the preamble to the Constitution, as adopted in 1930 at a general meeting. There was not then, nor later, any questioning of that jurisdiction." A year and a half later, in September, 1931, the Equity Council enjoined its members from accepting television work without Equity's consent. While both moves were acquiesced in by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, it has been pointed out thatn either the Screen Actors' Guild nor the American Federation of Radio Artists was organized at the time. That there may be a difference in status between the actors who appear in films which are televised and those who act in studio shows is also indicated as a possibility.

Time Not Ripe for Fees: Mills

Speaking prior to the board meeting of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers last Friday, Edwin C. Mills, chairman of the executive committee, said:

"The Society has pursued a policy of awaiting the full development of television and has not yet urged its members to take a position, nor has the Society itself.

"I don't think the time is here for licensing fees. Until television is a practical commercial success, it is in the same position as radio and sound films at their beginning; there is no point in choking them off."

8,000 SCHOOLS IN U. S. SHOW FILMS

School films saved one out of every four pupils in Chicago schools from failing in their studies last year, according to Mrs. Richard M. McClure, president of the Better Films Council of Chicago.

More than 150,000 reels of films were used in Chicago public schools last year, Mrs. McClure said, preliminary to the first Midwestern Forum on Visual Education to be held at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago on Friday and Saturday.

In explanation of the work of the group, Mrs. McClure said: "Human beings are 80 to 90 per cent eye-minded. Tests show that subjects presented through the medium of films have increased the beholder's knowledge from 38 to 42 per cent. Visual education today is used by 8,000 schools in the United States."

Mr. Mills affirmed, however, that ASCAP felt that the television rights of its members were vested in it, and that licensing arrangements would be worked out when the new science had been sufficiently developed. The board of directors bore out Mr. Mills' views, in affirming control of the television rights of its members, so that there could be no question as to where the rights were controlled, and in taking no action on the question of fees. When commercially feasible, a separate fee will be asked.

Part of Same Field

That film companies consider television rights to the dramatic material they purchase within their own province was indicated by D. O. Decker, of Loew's legal staff. Mr. Decker said: "The buying of television rights to a literary property is considered not as a separate field but as part of the same field covered by pictures. In essence, the two are the same: projection, with sound, of action on a screen save that television does not have the time lag of projection. If the film companies did not make an effort to secure these rights, someone else could present the same material the same way, making our purchase valueless."

Mr. Decker predicted the television of films, if it should take place in the future on a large scale, as simply a different method of distribution of pictures, and doubted that television ever would take patrons away from places of entertainment.

William J. Fadiman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer eastern story editor; George Bye, of the agency bearing his name, and Henry Hubman, of the American Play Company, all pointed out that the position of the film companies with regard to television rights will prevent a repetition of the situation which arose with the advent of sound. At that time, since only silent rights had been sold, there was the necessity of making a separate purchase of the sound rights, even though the silent rights were already owned. The new contracts, made for dialogue rights, also included radio and television rights where possible.

Typical Contract Clause

A clause from a typical contract made for the purchase of a literary or dramatic work today by a film company, and also true generally since the advent of sound, reads as follows: "Included in the said motion picture rights are: sound, musical and talking motion picture rights; all radio and television rights in the said work and its motion picture versions including transmissions from recordings and living actors; the right to record and reproduce sounds, music and speech, taken from the said work or other sources, accompanying motion pictures based on the composition; and the limited right to print and publish novelizations, stories or summaries of the motion picture versions thereof which advertise such pictures."

The industry's Copyright Protection Bureau, with the growing importance of the television field, is continuing in its efforts to prevent the unauthorized use of a film for television purposes. The Copyright Prevention Bureau has carried through only one law suit in this connection, Walt Disney and Columbia Pictures vs. the Pioneer Mercantile Company, in 1933, for the unauthorized use of a print, and uses the permanent injunction obtained against the defendants in this case as a method of preventing unlawful uses for television purposes.

Programs 90 Per Cent Film

The use of films in television is proportionately much higher now than it is likely to be in the future, according to Thomas Hutchinson, the National Broadcasting Company's television production manager. At the present, the NBC programs are 90 per cent film and 10 per cent studio telecasts, due to the World's Fair and the necessity of servicing dealers, Mr. Hutchinson points out. The films used are nearly all commercial, and Mr. Hutchinson has said that all major film companies recently refused to make their pictures available when NBC announced a definite television schedule. Prior to that announcement, he said, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO, Universal, Columbia and Pathe had made their films available.

The need for continuing telecasts of the spot news, sports and special feature variety has been pointed out by those within the industry. Mr. Fadiman has also raised the question of the time element involved in the televising of films, as it applies to product. The approximately 600 films a year distributed in this country, if televised to the home television audience at the rate of five a day, would last only 120 days, leaving some eight months to fill in completely without the use of films. Another point raised by Mr. Fadiman is that of the personalities involved; with film stars now acceptable to both eye and ear, as against radio favorites, now known only by voice to the listener, he says film personalities seem the logical choice for television appearances.

Circuit Provides Hospitalization

A free hospitalization plan for all employees of the 18 theatres of the Wometco circuit, Miami, Fla., was announced this week by Mitchell Wolfson and Sidney Meyer, operators of the group.

Wometco organization operates 12 theatres in Miami, two in Miami Beach, one in West Palm Beach and three in Nassau, Bahamas.

FILMS HAVE NOTHING TO FEAR FROM TELEVISION, SAYS LOHR OF NBC

Cost to Produce Pictures Solely for Television Called Prohibitive; Use of Trailers Suggested

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Television will not hurt the motion picture business, Major Lenox Lohr, head of National Broadcasting Company, said this week in Chicago on a visit from his headquarters in New York.

"We cannot compete with motion pictures for many reasons," said Mr. Lohr. "In fact, we can perhaps be of much help to them instead and they likewise will be in a position to do us much good."

Cites Prohibitive Cost

The reasons why the film industry has little to fear from a wide usage of television are several, Major Lohr pointed out. In the first place, the cost to produce films solely for television is prohibitive. The most expensive Hollywood film last year cost $23,000 a minute of running time, to produce. The least expensive film cost $1,000 to produce, per minute of running time. To think that commercial sponsors would pay even the lowest price for making a television film, is absurd, the radio executive said.

The use of old films for telecasts is not feasible, it was brought out, for the public interest would probably be very small. Therefore, he said, the best plan would be for the film companies to supply the television broadcasters with trailers of their coming attractions. These trailers would be free to the television station, in return for which the broadcast time would be free to the film company.

Newsreels in Broadcasting

The use of newsreels in broadcasting is also out of the question, Major Lohr said. It would compete directly with the theatres using the same newsreels. Where television will fit into the theatre is in the showing of special events such as prize fights, horse races, etc., as they actually take place. This plan would, he said, be of great interest to theatre patrons and act as a boxoffice attraction for the theatre.

He mentioned several ways in which the showing of such events could be exclusive to theatres. One would be through the use of special wave lengths for such telecast with the receivers used by the theatres having a television service, set at a specified wave length, thus eliminating reception of the same telecasts on other receiving sets. Direct wires to theatres also could be used.

Major Lohr said that the telecasting of films was the least expensive type of program to put on from a production standpoint as only two men were needed to handle the telecast whereas in the case of televising a production as it was being acted out in a studio took at least 30 persons to put it on. Another advantage of using films is the fact that 35 mm, 16 mm and even 8 mm are suitable to television.

Joining the Crowds

That television could not replace motion pictures was further brought out in the statement by Major Lohr that psychologically persons did not care to have all their entertainment within the confines of their homes or with small groups. The tendency of amusement seekers is to join the crowds and see things along with lots of other people. Television sets in the home could not supplant this desire to be with others, he said.

New York is the testing grounds for television at the present, Major Lohr said. When the television experiments now underway there show that it is ready for development elsewhere, expansion will be started. To bring television programs from New York to Chicago can be done with less expense than many think, the Major stated. He said that "booster stations" every 15 miles would help to send the telecasts from city to city. No one would be needed to operate the "booster stations" as they were automatic, he said. The ability to "pancake" light waves is responsible for this new system it was explained. Micro waves would be used on newly discovered wave lengths to transmit the programs.

Major Lohr said it was not possible to determine as yet how long it would be before a national television network would be started. He did think that it probably would be done within the next five years.

He said he expected to see motion picture producers take a keen interest in television. Motion pictures and television have much in common, he said, and both can profit by cooperation.

One obstacle delaying television is the lack of capital for experimentation, Major Lohr said, citing federal regulation as a factor.

KING AND QUEEN SEE AMERICAN PICTURES

Included in the list of films being shown King George and Queen Elizabeth while they are en route from England are the March of Time films, "Inside the Maginot Line" and "The Refugee—Today and Tomorrow."

"Inside the Maginot Line" is a regular March of Time monthly release. There is a feature also dealing with the French line of fortifications, "Double Crime on the Maginot Line," distributed by Tower Pictures.

Before they sailed for America, King George and Queen Elezabeth saw the MGM release, "Goodbye Mr. Chips" in London, at an American Embassy party given by Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain.

Stock Application Made

The Majestic Radio and Television Corporation filed an application last Thursday with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the registration of 200,000 shares of one dollar par value capital stock on the New York Curb Exchange.

Television Programs in Second Week

The reaction to the first week of regular television service, which began last Wednesday, has been highly favorable both as to public reception and press comment, according to NBC officials. The opening show consisted of a presentation of Fred Waring's band, an adaptation of the play, "The Unexpected," a juggling act and a Walt Disney cartoon, "Donald's Cousin Gus." The American Red Cross film, "Behind the Flood Headlines," is being televised daily over the NBC station, W2XBS, and will continue up to and including May 19th.

DuMont and Anthony Build

The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate, will build "telesound" stages in a new studio in New York as soon as the Federal Communications Commission grants permission to the company to erect a transmitter on top of the building chosen. It is understood that Paramount will make available such films as may be needed by DuMont as the television field progresses.

Earle C. Anthony, Inc., owner and operator of stations KFI-KECA, NBC outlets in Hollywood, has leased space for the construction of an experimental television station, and has filed application for an experimental visual broadcasting station with the FCC.

Few Sales of Sets Noted

With television receiving sets on sale in the New York area for two weeks, the main public reaction has been one of curiosity, with few actual sales reported. RCA-Victor models are being demonstrated, as are DuMont, General Electric and Westinghouse. Philco will announce prices and market its models after its convention in June, while Andrea and Stewart-Warner expect to be ready soon. Stromberg-Carlson has started manufacturing receiving sets. Crosley is putting on experimental programs both for transmission and reception.

Carnegie Has Receiver

The Little Carnegie Theatre, in New York, has installed an RCA-Victor television receiving set, and says it is the first theatre in the area to have television reception. The set picks up the NBC programs.

Baird Installs Television

The Gaumont British New Victoria Theatre in London has been equipped with a 20 by 15 foot Baird television screen, it has been announced. The company expects to have 12 London houses similarly equipped by May 24th, when the Derby is to be telecast. Apparatus is also being installed at the Gaumont British office in New York, at 1600 Broadway.

Farnsworth Names Rogers

Directors of the Farnsworth Radio and Television Corporation Monday elected J. P. Rogers as vice-president of the company. Most recently, Mr. Rogers was vice-president of the Crosley Corporation.

Special Television for Theatres

The possibility of the establishment of separate television transmission channels for theatres, with specified frequencies on which theatres alone could tune in, has been reported. In this way, two completely different types of programs could be evolved.

Two RCA Patents

Two new patents assigned to the Radio Corporation of America have been developed in the television field. A transmitting tube that can pierce fog and haze picks up scenes by the heat waves developed by objects in the scenes. A black "back drop" for the screen of television transmitting tubes results in more sharply focused and detailed images.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Calm before Storm

Between its activities in this and that, Hollywood got around to starting seven pictures in the week and completing the same number. It is probable that exhibitors and patrons will welcome a pair of the completed pictures with special interest.

A measure of activity has been resumed at Grand National Studio. Under the production guidance of Jack Skirball, "Miracle of Main Street" went into work. The cast includes Margo, Walter Abel, Wynne Gibson, Veda Ann Borg, Lyle Talbot, Jane Darwell, William Collier, Sr., Dorothy Devore, Willie Best and Luis Alberni.

Boyer and Irene Dunne

Universal started the John M. Stahl production, "Modern Cinderella." Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer are the stars. Nydia Westman and Frances Robison will head the support.

Two pictures were sent on their way at Republic. Bruce Cabot, Ralph Byrd, Tommy Ryan, Zasu Pitts, Jessie Ralph and Robert Elliott will be seen in "Stand Up and Sing," the picturization of a story which despite its musical sounding title is a melodrama. The second, "Caliente," will star Roy Rogers, with Mary Hart, George Hayes, Katherine DeMille and Jack LaRue.

Warner Bros. started three pictures. "Not Wanted" will present Fred Stone, Gloria Dickson, Dennis Morgan, Bernice Pilot, Sunny Bupp, Greta Meyer and Tommy Bupp. "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Stair Case," a series picture again will star Bonita Granville, supported by Frankie Thomas, John Litel, Fred Tozere, Vera Lewis, John Ridgely and George Irving. Jane Wyman and Allen Jenkins will be the new leads in the series picture, "Torchy —Dead or Alive."

Universal Finishes Two

Universal was the only studio to complete two pictures. More important item of the pair is "The Sun Never Sets," a story of the British Foreign Service, in which will be seen Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone, Virginia Field, Lionel Atwill, Barbara O'Neil, C. Aubrey Smith, Melville Cooper, Mary Forbes, Arthur Mullinor, John Burton and Sidney Bracy. The second picture, "Inside Information," will present June Lang, Dick Foran, Harry Carey, Mary Carlisle, Addison Richards, Joseph Sawyer, Grant Richards, Paul McVey and Selmer Jackson.

"Maisie Was a Lady" was finished at MGM. Robert Young, Ann Sothern, Ian Hunter, Ruth Hussey, Cliff Edwards, Anthony Allen and Art Mix are the principal cast members.

A Ginger Rogers solo starring picture, "Little Mother," was completed at RKO-Radio. A comedy romance in which the star will not dance, the supporting cast lists David Niven, Charles Coburn, Frank Albertson, E. E. Clive, Ernest Truex and Bessie Thomasetsky.

Columbia finished "Men from Sundown." Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith are the stars. Bob Nolan, Hank Bell, Eddie Cobb, Richard Fiske, Dick Botilier and the Sons of the Pioneers comprise the support.

"Lighthorse Harry," a comedy in which Bert Wheeler, Marie Wilson, Gloria Dickson, Eddie Foy, Jr., DeWolf Hopper, Jr., and Charles Wilson will be seen, was finished at Warner Bros.

Republic's "Mountain Rhythm" will present Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Maude Eburne, Bernard Suss, Ferris Taylor, Jack Pennick, Walter Fenner, Hooper Atchley and Ed Cassidy.

Record Production

Scheduling 12 pictures to start within the next few weeks, MGM, which presently has six before the cameras, will have 18 productions in work this month. This total establishes a record production activity for the company, which is now entering its sixteenth year. The films now in production, plus those ready to start, will place about 90 per cent of the studio's roster of stars and featured players before the cameras.

The tidal wave of production begins with completion of the company's $2,000,000 building program; last Friday the studio's thirtieth sound stage was opened for use. A new administration building, six stages and quarters for 15 departments were erected.

Between May 8th and the end of the month work will begin on the following films: "Babes in Arms," in which Mickey Rooney will be teamed with Judy Garland; "Balalaika," which will co-star Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey; Greta Garbo's "Ninotchka," which Ernest Lubitsch will direct; the Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Circus"; "Northwest Passage," in which Spencer Tracy and Robert Taylor will lead a cast of more than 2,000; Wallace Beery in "Thunder Afloat;" "Blackmail," starring Edward G. Robinson; Tod Browning's "Miracles for Sale"; the picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "It Can't Happen Here;" Winfield Sheehan's "The Emperor's Stallion," "The Great Canadian" and "Willow Walk."

Scores "Carnival"

Werner Jannsen, conductor of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestras, has been signed by Walter Wanger to compose and conduct the "Winter Carnival" music score. A Dartmouth graduate, Jannsen played the piano in Hanover's only movie house during his college days. Completing his musical education in Europe, Jannsen became Toscanini's assistant with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and wrote and directed music for the stage, concert platform and radio.

His first musical score for a picture, "The General Died at Dawn," won an Academy Award, and last year his score for "Blockade" made him the runner-up in Academy voting.

Fonda and Kelly

Henry Fonda and Nancy Kelly have been selected by Darryl F. Zanuck to play the leading roles in the Twentieth Century-Fox production "Drums Along the Mohawk." The picture will be made in color.

Fonda has just completed his role in "Young Mr. Lincoln" and Miss Kelly will finish her part in "Stanley and Livingstone" shortly. John Ford, who directed "Young Mr. Lincoln," will handle "Drums Along the Mohawk."

Whitney Returns from Study of Television

Saying that he is not making any further investment in television "for the present," John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board of Selznick International Pictures, returned to New York from London Monday on the Queen Mary. Mr. Whitney said that he spent most of his two weeks in London observing television activities. He recently purchased $50,000 of convertible notes of DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate. He will leave for the coast by plane on Saturday or Sunday, and said that the company's new United Artists releasing deal would be closed within a short time in Hollywood.

James Roosevelt, Samuel Goldwyn, vice-president, who arrived on the same boat, will attend the closing sessions of the United Artists sales convention on the coast.

Predict Defeat of Florida Tax Bill

The defeat of a Florida legislative bill to tax theatres of the state $1 per seat was being predicted in Miami this week as the state's exhibitors and motion picture machine operators presented a united front to kill the measure with an unfavorable report by the finance and taxation committee of the House.

Miami exhibitors, who joined forces with the Sparks circuit, operators of 85 theatres throughout Florida, referred to a communication received by Mitchell Wolfson of Wometco Theatres, Inc., from Representative H. E. Overstreet, sub-chairman of the Florida House finance and taxation committee, which indicated the bill would have rough sailing.

Tax measures elsewhere included the bill in the New York State legislature which would impose a two per cent sales tax for relief purposes, which is expected to pass the Assembly but will meet strong opposition in the Senate.

New bills in Illinois divorcing exhibition from distribution, establishing state censorship, and prohibiting children under 14 from entering theatres after nine at night, reached a second reading Tuesday; an anti-double bill measure reached its third reading.

The Ohio Tax Commission has been named in a second taxpayer's suit challenging its authority in exempting film rentals from the sales tax collections.

A bill to permit the showing of prize fight pictures was the only legislation affecting film theatres passed by the recently adjourned Iowa legislature.

The Michigan State Senate Affairs Committee has "pigeonholed" a measure that would create a state censorship board.

$250,000 to Charity By Variety Clubs

The total contributions to charity made by the Variety Clubs of America during 1938-39 will exceed $250,000, according to John J. Maloney, chairman of "The Heart of Show Business," the title given the committee in charge of charity. Mr. Maloney has recently received a report of the charitable activities of the 21 chapters of the organization during the past year.

Tent No. 11, Washington, D. C., has been selected as having contributed the most noteworthy charity during the year, and will be awarded a silver plaque. Among its contributions was the installation of a Premature Birth Station at Sibley Hospital, credited with saving the lives of 200 infants.

The clubs named Monsignor Edward J. Flanagan, the founder of Boys' Town, as the individual in the United States who accomplished the greatest humanitarian work.

In summing up the charitable activities of the clubs during the year, Mr. Maloney said: "More than 2,500,000 bottles of milk were donated to children in homes and institutions; three iron lungs were donated to hospitals; 1,000 boys were sent to summer camps; 3,000 children were entertained at Christmas; 10 crippled children were adopted; a dental chair and equipment and an ambulance donated to a hospital; 500 cots supplied to camps; $50,000 raised for refugees; funds donated to Boys' Town and for experiment and research on pneumonia."

Arkansas, Defying Union Demands At Fair, Threatens to "Secede"

Domination by the New York projectionists' union, Local 306, of the 16 mm machines at the commercial and other exhibits at the New York World's Fair, was abruptly challenged this week by M. C. Blackman, publicity director of the State of Arkansas exhibit at the Fair, who threatened to have the state exhibit withdrawn, rather than accede to union "demands."

These "demands," which the union emphasizes are observed by every other exhibitor using 16 mm machines at the Fair, are for a $75 weekly scale for one operator, working an eight hour shift. With the state exhibit, and most others, working some 16 hours daily, this would mean an expenditure by the Arkansas exhibit of $150 per week.

Mr. Blackman on Monday asserted that the exhibit's one projection machine could be "operated by a five year old child with average intelligence and at least one hand," and added that he wished to "serve notice that the State of Arkansas intends to operate its own machine with its own personnel . . . until forcibly restrained."

The machine was being used to run off three reels depicting the beauties and industries of the state.

General Dennis Nolan, chairman of state participation, declared that the episode, which received some newspaper mention, was a "publicity stunt"; that Arkansas had "been a little slow in getting publicity"; that "Mr. Blackman is a good newspaperman"; and that "the question is being settled."

At the Local 306 offices, executives attributed the same motives to Mr. Blackman's firm stand against union requests. Said one official:

"All the newspapers and wire services are recognizing this business for a piece of ballyhoo. Every other exhibitor has accepted our standards. As for Arkansas, you've got to consider that the living standards are pretty different than they are in New York, so maybe that's the reason for their funny attitude. Anyway, you've got to give some credit to this fellow from Arkansas, coming up here, and attempting to grab off a piece of publicity like this."

Writing to General Nolan, Mr. Blackman had asserted that if the exhibit is prevented from showing its film by "order, force, or sabotage," it would "lock its doors and retire from the scene."

At mid-week, the situation remained an apparent deadlock, with the state machine still outside of Local 306 domination, and all parties, except Mr. Blackman, who could not be reached, confident that a settlement would be made—and that Arkansas would not withdraw from the Hall of States exhibition at the Fair.

New Trailer Company Starts Sales Monday

The newest entry in the advance trailer field, the Alexander Preview Company of Colorado Springs, Col., has announced Monday as its first selling date, with July 15th set as the time for initial deliveries. The company will be national in scope, operating from its studios in the Alexander Film Building in Colorado Springs. Distribution will be in New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas, San Francisco and Colorado Springs.

The company was organized by Don Alexander, Jr., son of J. Don Alexander of the Alexander Film Company, producer and distributor of advertising films. Harold N. Schwarz, formerly with National Screen Service, is vice-president, and Byers E. Smith, for several years auditor for Alexander Film Company, is secretary-treasurer.

The Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers met at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York Wednesday and heard two addresses on television. They were "Television Studio Technic," by A. W. Protzman and "Television Lighting," by William C. Eddy.

New DeVry 16-mm. Projector Shown

Demonstration of a new 16-mm. projector designed for theatre use was to be conducted by Herman A. DeVry, Inc., of Chicago, Thursday afternoon in the Coral Room of the Hotel Astor in New York. The equipment includes soundheads and a high-intensity carbon arc light source. Nearly 300 representatives of various theatre interests in the east were invited to attend the New York demonstration.

One of the purposes for developing a 16-mm. projector for theatres at this time, according to Herman A. DeVry, head of the company, who was present from Chicago, is to provide apparatus for the screening of local news films which the DeVry organization has been promoting. The company makes a camera for this purpose, and tieups are arranged between theatres and local newspapers. Instead of the claw type movement, a sprocket intermittent movement is employed, while magazines accommodate 4,000 feet of 16-mm. film, and the light source is rated as capable of providing a 24-foot image with a throw of 125 feet or more.

It Could Happen to You

Comedy Mystery Melodrama

The origin of the story to be told in this picture is a Saturday Evening Post piece by Charles Hoffman. It was transcribed for the screen by Allen Rivkin and Lou Breslow. One of the Sol M. Wurtzel pictures in the 20th Century-Fox program, its making is under supervision of David Hempstead, and Alfred Werker, whose credits include "News is Made at Night," "Up the River" and "Gateway" is the director.

The featured players are Stuart Erwin, now in "Backdoor to Heaven" and Gloria Stuart. The supporting cast lists Raymond Walburn, Douglas Fowley, June Gale, Clarence Kolb, Paul Hurst, Richard Lane and Robert Greig.

Entertainment elements include action, comedy, mystery, melodrama and suspense.

Besides the showmanship title there is amusement merit to the story, the character of which is sometimes merry, sometimes suspenseful with danger all built upon the central character. All the hero wants to do is make good his college class prophecy which voted him "the man most likely to succeed." His wife, who goads him on to bigshot business ambitions, indirectly is the cause of his arrest on a murder charge. He is saved by his wife and best pal who ferret out the real killers.

Young Mr. Lincoln

Romantic Biography

Scheduled for release June 9th, "Young Mr. Lincoln" most likely will be the first of a cycle of productions dealing with the life and incidents in the career of the immortal figure who to countless millions is the greatest American that ever lived.

The words in the title definitely cue the years from Lincoln's life, his early maturity, the formative period, when a series of circumstances started him on the road to an unknown but great destiny. Lamar Trotti's screen play will tell the story of the young pioneer and lawyer whose wit was boundless, who had the strength of an ox and the heart of a lion, yet an eye for beauty and a soul for romance. It will tell the story of a young man who knew the bitterness of tragedy when his first love died; the love story of Lincoln and the girl who was to become his wife. It will picture young Lincoln as the arch-foe of intolerance, oppression and injustice. Phantom glimpses into his great future will be revealed when he becomes the protagonist of Stephen A. Douglas in romance, politics and jurisprudence. The many episodes will culminate with Lincoln's first victory over Douglas.

Darryl F. Zanuck entrusted production of the piece to Kenneth Macgowan, maker of "In Old Chicago" and "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." Trotti either wrote alone or collaborated on "The Alexander Ragtime Band," "In Old Chicago" and "Alexander Graham Bell." The director, John Ford, for years has been among the leaders in his calling with a whole catalogue of pictures from "Arrowsmith" to "Stagecoach."

Henry Fonda, whose work in "Jesse James" and "Alexander Graham Bell" has brought new popularity, will be seen in the title role. The part of Mary Todd (who became Lincoln's wife) has been assigned to Marjorie Weaver, most recently in "Jesse James." As Ann Rutledge, Pauline Moore will be seen. Another young woman of importance is Arleen Whelan, wife of a lad whose life Lincoln saved. Also of consequence are Alice Brady, Eddie Collins, Richard Cromwell, Donald Meek, Eddie Quillan, Spencer Charters, Milburn Stone (Douglas), Fred Kholer, Sr. Francis Ford and Edwin Maxwell. There will be hundreds of character and extra players.

Release June 9, 1939.

Old Grad

(Universal)

Sport Feature

A fresh story idea will help differentiate "Old Grad" from the usual football picture. A post season championship game is being counted upon to supply the thrills. The real hero is an old grad who in his collegiate days was a football star. He is able to hold only a meager paying job, but through a series of circumstances, mainly provoked by a nimble minded press agent, he is made to appear as a successful business man, just the type of personality who can inspire the members of his alma mater's team to glorious gridiron accomplishments. Ashamed of the situation in which he finds himself, he appears on the field the next day to inspire his college team to victory. Subsidiary is a love story involving the old grad's niece and a football player.

For name value the film will present Charles Grapewin, last in "The Man Who Dared," in the title role; Anita Louise, now in "The Little Princess" and "The Gorilla," Dick Foran, long with Warner Bros.; Berton Churchill, Emma Dunn, David Holt, Richard Lane, Samuel S. Hinds and many members of the USC and UCLA football teams.

The original story was written by Matt Taylor and transcribed into screen play form by Harold Buchman. Harold Young is the director.

Release date: To be determined.

The Sun Never Sets

(Universal)

Story of an Institution

Though comparatively little has been said of "The Sun Never Sets," Universal officials are expecting it will prove one of the surprise attractions of the company's new season. While not a historical picture, in the strict sense of the term, it is, however, a story of the British Colonial Service. It mainly concerns itself with the careers of two brothers, but it will also picture the whole extent and scope of British overseas administration. If one will recall such productions as "Lloyds of London," "Wells Fargo," "The House of Rothschild" and the current "Union Pacific," he will get a clear idea of the production's character. Incidentally W. P. Lipscomb, who contributed to the "Lloyds of London" and "Clive of India" screen plays, did the present adaptation of the Jerry Horwin-Arthur Fitz-Richards original. Rowland V. Lee, who directed "Cardinal Richelieu," is directing.

The elder brother has been proud to carry on the 300 year old family tradition of service in the British Colonial Administration. The younger rebels. He is goaded into it, however, and with his brother assigned to the African Gold Coast, where he works out his regeneration and destiny under trying circumstances. Disobeying an order, he disgraces his senior, but in the finale becomes a hero as he discovers a secret radio station that has been broadcasting subversive propaganda, and guides a fleet of bombing planes to the spot to destroy it. His heroism reestablishes his brother and gives him determined ambition to carry on the family tradition.

With the subject matter of the story, which includes two interesting love stories, readily lending itself to different types of exploitation, the cast also has much showmanship value. The younger of the two brothers is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., lately in "Gunga Din"; the elder is Basil Rathbone, seen recently in "Dawn Patrol" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles." The two principal feminine characters are Virginia Field, who since her Hollywood debut in "Lloyds of London" has been in fourteen pictures, and Barbara O'Neil, seen in "Stella Dallas."

The supporting cast will feature Lionel Atwill, C. Aubrey Smith, Melville Cooper, Mary Forbes, Arthur Mullinor, John Burton and Sidney Bracy.

Release date: May 26, 1939.

Stand Up and Sing

(Tentative Title)

(Republic)

Melodrama

A few winters ago a Colorado school boy made himself a national hero when he saved the lives of his mates trapped in a snowbound bus. Reenactment of that courageous episode, following a preliminary build-up that gives the story a human, melodramatic quality, will be the spectacular highlight of "Stand Up and Sing."

The boy, son of a wanted criminal, is placed under the care of his grandmother in a country town. Although changing his character somewhat under kindly influences, still he is loyal to his dad. But when his father's bid to escape menaces the lives of many children trapped in the bus, the youngster turns on his parent. Then, while the criminal, regenerating, goes out into the storm to seek help, it's the youngster who encourages his little friends to cling to their hope.

The production is based on an original story by Alice Altschuler which Doris Malloy and Gordon Kahn adapted. It is being directed by Arthur Lubin under the production supervision of Herman Schlom.

The youngster is Tommy Ryan. Role father will be played by Bruce Cabot. Members of the support cast include Ralph Byrd, Zasu Pitts and Jessie Ralph.

SALES OF SALARY LISTS ARE RULED ILLEGAL

Peddling of "Sucker Lists," Following Publication by Senate, Barred in New York State

by IRA S. WIT

Publication of high-bracket salary lists with addresses and other identifying information, as sold for purposes of wholesale solicitation, is illegal, it has been ruled in New York.

Annual publication by the United States Senate of high-bracket salaries of business people and professionals—in which motion picture names play no small part—the headline attention given to the high incomes in the press, and their subsequent compilation and publication in some form of booklet for sale privately to others for "luxury" and other forms of solicitation, has long been the cause of complaint by those whose incomes are made available by the Senate. Attempts have been made variously down through the years to stop the practice, without success. A case settled this week in the New York courts, the first on record, establishes a new legal status.

"Sucker Lists"

Not only have many of those listed complained about their being bothered no end from the inclusion of their names on socalled "sucker lists" made up from the Senate's listings, but have also complained of the unfairness of the salaries mentioned, pointing out that the gross salaries listed are far from the net incomes accruing after the high Federal and state taxes are paid. In the last Senate list, for example, in April, the salary of Louis B. Mayer, MGM vice-president, was given as $1,296,503, and J. Robert Rubin's salary, also from MGM, as $754,254, but in neither case, as in all other grosses listed, was the fact disclosed that the incomes were subject to as much as 60 per cent in federal and state taxes.

"The right to be let alone" is not one generally accorded by the public or press to prominent figures either before or behind a camera in the motion picture industry, and in other fields. It may not be understatement to say that some of the more famous have not discouraged such recognition. It is apparent, however, that the spotlight of publicity in which the prominent are bathed has been the cause of certain grievous disadvantages. Among the more irksome of these is the prevalence of various periodicals and manuals which list the substantial salaries of the higher-ups. It therefore may be good news to them to know that a New York Supreme Court Justice last week ruled that a directory which listed the salaries of highly paid executives had illegally violated the right of these individuals "to be let alone."

The Universal Syndicate, some time ago, published a "Salary Directory" in which the names, addresses, salaries and offices of the higher income bracket in the United States was listed. Among those named was a Mr. Rembert R. Wurlitzer, vice-president of Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, who promptly brought a suit in the New York Supreme Court in which he asked $50,000 damages and an injunction restraining sale of the directory as an encroachment upon his right of privacy under Section 51 of the New York Civil Rights Law. Furthermore, Mr. Wurlitzer complained, the $60,000 salary with which he was credited in the directory was "grossly exaggerated" and had caused him great personal embarrassment and annoyance by inciting envy among employees of the company. As a matter of fact, he said, he had already suffered specific damages to both his personal and business reputation.

Asks Injunction

Mr. Wurlitzer applied to the court for an immediate injunction pending trial. Even if the directory had been correct in its figures, he said in his affidavit, "I see no reason why any unscrupulous person should be informed of the amount of my salary, thus leaving myself and my family prey to any schemes that such persons might evolve." Finally he charged the defendant with having "maliciously portrayed" him as receiving an excessive salary.

In support of Mr. Wurlitzer's affidavit he filed a brief which contended that Section 51 of the Civil Rights Law forbade the practice complained of in the suit. This section prohibits the use of a "name, portrait or picture" for "advertising purposes or for the purpose of trade" without first obtaining consent of the person in writing. Furthermore, it allows a person aggrieved under the statute to obtain an injunction and damages. This rule, fixed by statute in New York State, is recognized under the common law in many states in the Union. The brief argued that the directory was a clear violation because: "Here defendant's very business is the sale of names with information which is by its very nature the most carefully guarded, namely, information relating to income. It is the sole aim and purpose of the defendant's service to sell for a price the names of persons who constitute a certain income group in the country."

Lone Exception

The only exception to this rule is the publication of items of news in newspapers, newsreels or magazines. This case did not come under this exception, the brief continued. Since the directory "was purely a commercial book" an injunction should be granted. It is interesting to note that the brief asked for an injunction on the broad ground that any salary directory was illegal and at no time raised the argument that the directory was incorrect. Sufficient to say that Justice Isidor Wasservogel agreed with the plaintiff and issued an injunction without written opinion.

A substantial number of suits involving the question of the right of privacy have directly affected the motion picture business. The very case upon which the plaintiff's brief relied (Blumenthal vs. Picture Classics, Inc.) involved suit by a street vendor depicted in a travelogue "Sight Seeing in New York with Nick and Tony." Here the New York Appellate Division ruled that a scene showing the New York City streets in which the plaintiff was photographed in her role as a street vendor violated the statute.

In 1919 the Appellate Division (Humiston vs. Universal Film Mfg. Co.) had decided that a newsreel of a current event was similar to a newspaper account and was therefore not prohibited. The court went so far as to say that the use of the name and picture of the plaintiff which the defendant displayed on posters outside the theatre was proper as necessarily "incidental" to advise the public what the film was about.

Another action (Sweenek vs. Pathe News) involved a newsreel depicting a group of corpulent women attempting to reduce with the aid of a novel apparatus. This, too, was ruled legal since, the court said, the newsreel involved "public interest" and was not for "trade purposes" notwithstanding certain amusing comments which had accompanied the picture.

Urges Films Hew To Entertainment

Charles Rossi, of the New Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y., in a letter to the HERALD this week on the subject of propaganda in motion pictures, expressed himself as follows:

"I have noticed with a great deal of satisfaction your untiring efforts to keep the screens of our country free from the taint of propaganda, and your contentions that the screen of an exhibitor is to be used for the primary purpose of entertaining those persons who pay their hard-earned money for the principal purpose of being entertained and not 'enlightened' or through the subterfuge of propaganda become browbeaten into viewing any political trend in the eyes of certain motion picture producers.

"It is with a great deal of regret that I noted Mr. Wanger's indiscretion in injecting the propaganda he did into his subject of 'Blockade.' . . .

"No sane minded person, regardless of the extent of his own prejudice, can question the righteousness of our government in the steps it has taken by way of its antitrust suits that are directed at those companies whose heads are blind to the handwriting on the wall; perhaps because they are too busily occupied turning out pictures that are in direct violation of the basic principles which has made the motion picture industry the great medium that it is.

"The generosity of the American public as manifested by their willingness to consistently patronize an exhibition of good motion picture that does not deviate from any principle of entertainment, makes its clear that American show-goers will not permit themselves to be cheated out of their show money, and that they expect and demand, for their admissions, to be given only those type of motion pictures that depict every essence of entertainment. . . .

"I wonder if there breathes any producer whose soul is so dead or whose natural instincts have taken him, with all his prejudice, beyond the point where he realizes that empty seats and closed theatres will do none of us any good. . . . I am glad to note that I am not alone in my desire to keep our screens free and clear of all propaganda and every form of 'ism' and '——ocracy,' and I will be one who, if I am ever sent a picture containing any form of deviation from entertainment, will be glad to throw such product into the nearest ash-can."

Rose of Washington Square

Musical Melodrama

(20th Century-Fox)

Filmed in the format of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and with musical content of similarly nostalgic appeal, "Rose of Washington Square" contains all the essential ingredients that box office hit contained, plus two it didn't.

One of these is Al Jolson in blackface, playing and singing his own spotlighted past under a character name that deceives nobody, and the other is a story so close to the factual story of one of his contemporaries as to have become a matter of discussion in the daily press. There was the customary notice of resemblance being "purely coincidental."

Like "Alexander's Ragtime Band," this picture has Alice Faye and Tyrone Power as young folk in love and in difficulty. Unlike it, this one has Al Jolson as faithful friend of the girl and, therefore, aid to the boy in his emergencies.

Don Ameche served equivalently in the earlier picture, and notably, but Al Jolson steps into a white spotlight repeatedly in this one to sing the songs he sang that way—"Rockabye Your Baby to a Dixie Melody," finally the imperishable "Mammy"—and steals the picture utterly from everybody else connected with it. (Forgotten, in the tumultuous success of these sequences, are the whiteface Jolson of those last two regrettable feature pictures and the invisible Jolson of that sponsored radio program, for this is the original Mammy-singer in the pink of the form that made him a Broadway and an American institution).

A dozen or more familiar songs of yesteryear are worked into the picture, unlisted, "Pretty Baby," "The Vamp," "Ja-Da" and others of like vintage. "Rose of Washington Square" is sung, danced and smartly dealt with as a production number, featuring Miss Faye. The story comes down to a focal point, dramatically, in Miss Faye's singing of "My Man" in a stage setting nobody with a good memory will fail to identify. "I Never Knew Heaven Could Speak" is a new and sure-fire number by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

Nunnally Johnson, associate producer, wrote the screen play from a story by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin derived from Broadway history well known to nearly everybody. It details a Follies star's marriage to a gambler, later crook, to whom she is devoted in spite of his misdeeds, and ends wth her promise to wait for him to return from the penitentiary. It is embroidered with the incidents and experiences generally known to have attended the real romance here treated fictionally, and with the actual presence of Al Jolson as friend of the heroine.

Directed by Gregory Ratoff with a nice balance of emphasis, the picture spurts along from high spot to high spot with vigor and bounce. Theatrical in subject matter, it is theatrical in treatment. Musical in large degree, it utilizes music as content rather than ornament. A certain jerkiness considered a flaw in a straight film belongs, definitely, in this one.

"Rose of Washington Square" is suitable for any type of theatre in any city, town or village. Its roots are in a recent past and its music is in fond ear memory of the whole population.

Invitation to Happiness

(Paramount)

Love Story

Irene Dunne, Fred MacMurray, Charlie Ruggles and William Collier, Sr., contribute standout performances to this mature, well rounded and soundly conceived love story, a Wesley Ruggles production in that veteran director's ablest manner. It is solid entertainment aimed at the more informed and intelligent type of audience but containing, for any and all, a heavyweight boxing bout that packs a wallop.

The screen play by Claude Binyon, based on a story by Mark Jerome, is a finely wrought account of a romance between a young woman of wealthy background and a pugilist born on the other side of the tracks. The picture opens in 1927 and closes a decade later. What time and the circumstances of their relationship do to the couple is told simply, clearly and entertainingly.

Girl meets boy when her father buys a half interest in his boxing contract. They are married almost immediately and in full awareness that matches between rich girls and pugilists are traditionally beset by difficulties arising from economic and social differences. She accepts long separations from him as necessary to success of his training, but their boy, at 10, resents what seems to him his father's neglect of his mother. A divorce is negotiated and the judge arranges for the father to have custody of the boy for six months, the mother to have him the next six months, the boy to decide, thereafter, which parent he shall live with.

At this point the boxer gets his chance to fight the champion. Devotion to his son interferes with his training. Son, divorced wife and all interested parties conspire to convince the boxer that he has won his son's affection. The boy tells him he had decided he wants to live with him always. He loses the fight and takes the boy to his mother. Realization that only his ring ambitions, now blasted, have made domestic unity impracticable, brings reunion of the three in a temperately handled happy ending.

Miss Dunne's portrayal of the wife is excellent, Mr. MacMurray's performance of the pugilist is his best to date. Mr. Ruggles has a completely serious role as the boxer's trainer and Mr. Collier as the wife's father has an only partially humorous assignment. The picture is happily free of the pattern comedy material commonly used in fictions pertaining to the squared circle.

Hotel Imperial

Wartime Melodrama

No, it's not another "Grand Hotel" type of picture.

Yes, it's a war picture, set in the area disputed by Austrian and Russian forces in 1916.

And no, the star is not Marlene Dietrich, although customers arriving after the credits have been flashed will think it is; the star is Isa Miranda, Paramount import, who looks and talks a great deal like Miss Dietrich used to and acts a good deal more convincingly.

The scene is an unpronounceable town held alternately by Austrian and Russian forces. Action takes place principally in a hotel therein. Miss Miranda plays a Polish girl who works as a chambermaid at the hostelry in hope of finding out why her sister, who used to have the job, killed herself. Ray Milland plays an Austrian officer, Polish by birth, whom she at first suspects of causing her sister's death, later learns to love. J. Carrol Naish is cast as a Russian spy, the individual responsible for the suicide, Gene Lockhart gives a strong performance as the hotel porter, and Reginald Owen is a standout as a Russian general who also paints. Much melodrama accompanies the working out

Tell No Tales

(MGM)

Crime Melodrama

What this selling title suggests in showmanship entertainment the picture delivers in modern style melodrama. While telling the story of one man, it also tells six others. That concerning the hero is continuous, of the others it is episodic, but the man's approach to all has a common purpose.

All that audiences are asked to do is follow the adventures of a nimble witted headline hunter out to save his own job, keep hundreds working, break a kidnaping mob and keep his newspaper from collapsing.

Picking up a $100 bill which he identifies as part of a ransom payment, "Cassidy," editor, outwits the police and establishes contact with a school teacher "Ellen," the witness to a kidnaping. The bill's trail winds through a half dozen living stories.

Each sequence is pictured sharply and tensely.

The manner in which "Tell No Tales" is presented is different from current trends. The skill with which Lionel House transcribed the Pauline London-Alfred Taylor story, plus Leslie Fenton's daring in his directing effort—endows the production with freshness upon which exhibitors may capitalize.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, Cal. Audience reaction gave the indication that MGM may have a "surprise sleeper" in "Tell No Tales."—Gus McCarthy.

Some Like It Hot

(Paramount)

Comedy with Music

Widely mentioned in the public prints as a film treatment of the jitterbug phenomena, "Some Like It Hot" comes to the screen a light vehicle for the quick-lipped Bob Hope, the soft-spoken Shirley Ross and the drum-thumping Gene Krupa. It does get into the jitterbug subject, but not extensively. Its best moments are when Hope is uttering his better gags and when he and Miss Ross are singing "The Lady's in Love," a tune likely to catch on.

Mr. Hope plays "Nicky Nelson," amusement pier impresario, whose bad luck at dice deprives him of his concessions, his band contract and the professional and romantic association of "Lily Racquel," played by Miss Ross. She and the band, which is Gene Krupa's, who plays himself in the picture, get along better without "Nicky," who reappears in their lives just as the girl's engagement to another impresario is being announced, whereupon she switches her allegiance again to "Nicky."

Produced by William C. Thomas and directed by George Archainbaud from a screen play by Lewis R. Foster and Wilkie C. Mahoney, the film derives, apparently quite remotely, from a play by Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler. It is handled as comedy all the way and depends mainly upon Bob Hope's personality and humor, save when the band's playing. Gene Krupa, in charge of these sections of the entertainment, is a favorite of the jitterbug element. Very little jitterbug dancing is shown.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, where audible reaction from the younger element present was to the effect that more hot music and less else would have been appreciated.—W. R. W.

Boy Friend

Comedy

Exhibitors are well aware of Jane Withers' drawing power. Audiences know her ability as an entertainer. Consequently, regardless of the all around merit, or lack of it, of any picture in which she has appeared, exhibitors have exploited her talent, and her films, generally, have found a ready market. But in "Boy Friend," although all Jane's talents are on display again, showmen have something more than her personality and ability to exploit.

A most important item in the piece, considered either from an entertainment or commercial viewpoint, is the fact that in it Jane experiences her first love affair. Second to this, as an inducement to popular interest, is a rip-roaring chase comparable in excitement to any similar bit of theatrics ever devised for the screen. Thus the title, when tied in with the name of the star to play up the appeal of "puppy-love," plus other marketable elements contingent upon the active theme, opens the way to all sorts of interest-creating ideas.

There are three stories in the production. First, of course, is the juvenile love match. The second has to do with a police school. The third, into which both blend, sometimes smoothly, sometimes jaggedly, is a crime melodrama. Needless to say, it's Jane and her boy friend, George Ernest, who expose Douglas Fowley's loft-robbing gang and inspire the pulse-tingling, nerve-wracking chase.

As the picture jumps its way along, audiences get a full quota of comedy in the sequence in which Jane and Warren Hymer, rookie officer, steal the captain's squad car. Also, they will see how police force candidates are trained; how loft-robbers go about their trade; how undercover operatives work, and how a pair of kids make monkeys of ruthless criminals.

Previewed at the Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles. As in the case of all Jane Withers' pictures, the audience was articulately of the opinion that "Boy Friend" is an all-family attraction.—G. M.

Three Waltzes

(Vedis Films)

Family Portrait to Music

The most noteworthy factor in this musical film visitor from Paris is the "Beatrice Fairfax" role assigned to the industry. After the competitive appeal of the army and the stage has separated two preceding generations of lovers, the cinema acts cupid and conciliator in uniting a pair of hearts and a triple line of family history, all to waltz time.

Numerically, the foreign rendition of the Strausian musical motif is two up on the recent Hollywood variation on a similar theme, "The Great Waltz." But, in regard to the entertainment quotient and technical accomplishment, the Parisian entrant is an inferior second. The singing is done chiefly by Mlle. Yvonne Printemps in a small, thinish voice, with the assistance of some skimpish ensemble singing. In the dance numbers the principals waltz around a room rather stiffly or a set of girls walk up and down stairs waving their skirts. Direction is static, while the lighting is particularly uneven and inept. Perhaps the outstanding note in the production is the decorative wardrobe devised for Mlle. Printemps by Jeanne Lanvin. The picture carries superimposed English titles.

Outside of the musical saleability in the Strauss father and son combination, the only merchandising item in the film and this limited to French speaking and stage inclined audiences is the presence in leading roles of a team of Gallic mimes rather prominent in Paris circles. Mlle. Printemps, playing herself three times as time moves on, has been hailed ecstatically by Piccadilly and Rialto theatre audiences. Playing opposite her and also portraying three generations is Pierre Fresnay, more familiar to American audiences than his co-star through his recent brilliant performances in "Grand Illusion" and "The Puritan."

of suspense. Fani, the ballet dancer, loses her lover to the siren call of a bugle; daughter Yvette, the rage of Paris music halls, chooses the applause of her audience in preference to the snobbish affection of the son of an army man. Comes the new day and granddaughter, Irene, now the glamour girl of the French screen, is united by a doubly strained coincidence to the male descendant of the original gentleman who started the disruptions and postponements in the first amatory arrangement. The final section, concerned with the shooting of a picture under French cinematic supervision, appears to be a Gallic turn on "Once in a Lifetime" film burlesque.

Tumbleweeds

(Astor)

(Reissue, with Sound)

Welcome Back

In sponsoring the revival of what perhaps was the greatest picture of one of the greatest western stars, Willim S. Hart of fond but not forgotten memory, Astor pictures has avowed a "desire not only to bring Bill Hart back to his old loyal fans, but to present him for the first time to a new generation as one of the greatest and most beloved film actors."

The new version of the 1925 production carries a modern note in a prologue of eight minutes during which sequence Mr. Hart comes down from the hills in his California ranch home to speak a word of welcome. Sound effects and a rousing musical background lend atmospheric assistance.

Despite the technical advances and changes in lighting, directing, acting and editing, the revival saga sports scenes depicting the opening of the Cherokee Strip to land settlement, material made memorable more recently in "Cimarron," that pack scope of magnitude, drama and thrills equal to any present day production output.

For those whose memories may be a bit hazy as to story detail and for those to whom the plot is something new, the narrative is localed in the Cherokee Land Strip between the states of Oklahoma and Kansas around the time of 1889. Mr. Hart plays "Don Carver," a character similar to the prairie tumbleweeds. With the new grant arrangement, he with the other cattle grazers finds himself without a job. At the homesteaders' settlement, he meets "Molly Lassiter" and through his attachment for the girl decides to enter the land sweepstakes. "Molly's" half brother, "Noll," and his equally villainous confederate, "Freel," frame "Carver." Then comes swift action.

Comedy and a good grade of it is supplied by "Kentucky Rose."

The Rookie Cop

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Containing a readymade appeal to animal lovers and children, RKO's "The Rookie Cop" is the story of a young police officer who fights to have the department use police trained dogs in the battle against criminals. The formula-like story is enlivened by the action of Ace, billed as The Wonder Dog, a well trained German Shepherd.

The cast is composed of Tim Holt, as the young officer; Virginia Weidler, a 9-year-old girl anxious to become a policewoman; Janet Shaw, Frank M. Thomas, Robert Emmett Keane, Monte Montague, Don Brodie, Ralf Harolde and Muriel Evans.

Morton Grant and Jo Pagano wrote the screenplay from an original by Guy K. Austin and Earl Johnson. Bert Gilroy produced and David Howard directed.

"Clem," suspended when he arouses the ire of the police commissioner by his insistence upon using the dog, is held prisoner, with "Gerry," the daughter of the chief of police, by a gang of criminals looting the city. The dog manages to free the pair and point out the leader of the gang, thus ending the commissioner's prejudices.

Escape from Yesterday

(Hoffberg)

Foreign Legion Melodrama

A test of talent would seem to be the treatment of a formulated story pattern to result in an appearance of originality and interest. This has been realized by Julien Duvivier in his handling of the setup of a murderer seeking escape from his crime in the "no man's land" of a foreign legion. There are the customary elements of a detective nemesis, a dancing girl for romantic interest and a collection of well recognized atmospheric shots, but Duvivier has fashioned a picture that becomes worth watching, either as a melodramatic composition or as a more subtle psychological study.

Besides the exploitation fact that Duvivier directed "Un Carnet de Bal" and "The Great Waltz" is the asset that in the leads are the internationally recognized Jean Gabin of "Grand Illusion" and Annabella of "Suez."

The camerawork is particularly outstanding.

The story easily could be followed without the superimposed English titles. "Gillieth" seeks sanctuary from a Paris murder in the Spanish Foreign Legion. He is joined by another man of mystery, "Lucas," of whose identity he is suspicious. Through the wiles of his native wife, "Aischa," the murderer learns that his companion is a detective. The pair meet at a besieged fortress and both demonstrate their bravery, "Gillieth" dying. The final sequence of the siege is so realistically done as to be perhaps a bit too strong for select feminine tastes.

Panama Lady

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama and Romance

Double dyed-in-the-wool melodrama, and love interest which is not permitted to catch up with itself for some time, are entertainment elements of "Panama Lady." A run of the mill production, it offers comparatively little that is new.

Panama, with all its dangers, especially those which threaten one's moral character, is no place for a lady, a fact which "Lucy," a poverty stricken, discouraged show-girl, soon finds out. Deceived by one man in whom she placed her hope for rescue, the heroine, accused of stealing another's bankroll, makes a "work out the loss" deal with him and accompanies him into the jungles as his housekeeper. A victim of the jealousy of "Cheema," a native girl, "Lucy" upholds her end of the bargain by changing "McTeague's" squalid quarters into a spic and span residence. But "McTeague" discovers oil, and when "Roy," who had come to rescue her, is killed after trying to steal the unrecorded land claims, "Lucy" contrives to escape. Some time later, "McTeague," now rich, finds her in New York and the past is forgotten as both realize their earlier association was the beginning of honest to goodness love.

A Girl Must Live

(Gainsborough - 20th Century-Fox)

Romantic Comedy

Though this brand of wisecracking backstage comedy, with a flavor of hardboiled femininity, is by no means unprecedented, its English accent is somewhat of a change. All the featured names, Margaret Lockwood, Lilli Palmer and Renee Houston, are of local appeal in varying degree, but all put up performances which register on their own merit. It is a capable array capably chosen, with some exceptions.

The picture unfolds the adventures of three young show girls with an English earl. It vivaciously and at times pugnaciously etches the quarrels of two over their unwilling prey, and more tastefully the effortless way in which he falls for the unsophisticated member of the trio. The relations of Lilli Palmer as a foreign trouper, and Renee Houston—a radio and vaudeville top liner here—as a Scots chorine, provide much of the comedy.

Directorially 'A Girl Must Live" is another Carol Reed success.

Shown to a preview audience, the film provoked constant laughter. There were special bouquets for Renee Houston.—Aubrey Flanagan.

Boy's Reformatory

(Monogram)

Juvenile Melodrama

A mild melodrama has been devised to picture the activities of a group of juveniles in a correctional institution, a problem studied before and to better success.

Frankie Darro, billed in the chief role, makes his assignment appealing. A juvenile troup consisting chiefly of Frank Coghlan, Jr., David Durand and Warren McCollun offer adequate support. The principal adult players number Grant Withers, Lillian Elliott and Ben Welden. Howard Bretherton directed from a script supplied by Ray Trampe and Wellyn Totman.

"Tommy" takes a "rap" to protect "Eddie," son of his foster mother, "Mrs. O'Meara." The lad makes friends with the prison physician, "Dr. Owens." "Eddie," framed by the gang when he attempts to quit the racket, soon joins the reformatory personnel. "Tommy" pretends to be a member of the "mob" and with them effects a break from the "little big house." With the assistance of the doctor, he is able to round up the adult members of the gang.

Commentary on Marriage

Three times married and about to embark on a fourth venture, "Dr. Marcelin," played by the 54 year old Sacha Guitry, here discusses the mores of marriage in a conservation piece in the unconventional manner of M. Guitry, producer, director, writer, actor and sometimes commentator.

The story is set almost exclusively in "Dr. Marcelin's" home. The doctor, discovering that his wife is unfaithful, makes up a new will dividing his estate three ways, one-third to his wife, one-third to his mistress and one-third to his illegimate daughter, who is also his secretary. The will finds its way into the hands of his wife while she is entertaining the "Worms," old family friends. Believing her husband a suicide "Mrs. Marcelin" reads the will and swoons, for in it also are mentioned her unfaithfulness and her lover, "Fernand Worms."

At this point "Dr. Marcelin" turns up, alive. Nothing is said of the will. The next day "Mrs. Worms" pays a visit to the doctor and informs him that everyone knows the will's contents. There follows a series of talks participated in by the doctor, "Mrs. Marcelin," the "Worms" family and the daughter, "Juliette Lecourtois," in which the doctor lectures them all.

Obviously the film is adult fare.

March of Time, No. 10

(RKO Radio)

Dixie—U. S. A.

Since the Civil War the South has been fighting valiantly to solve reconstruction problems. The March of Time delves into the subject. Lowell Mellett, director of the National Emergency Council, undertook a survey of the conditions of the South and found thousands of persons, colored and white, living in dire want. In the educational field Miss Martha Berry has devoted her life to the building of the Berry School, where sons and daughters of poor farmers who show promise are given an education without financial tuition. To earn their board and tuition each student does 20 hours' work, exclusive of the lessons, in one of the twenty-five types of work open to them. The greater part of the school has been constructed by the students, who made their own brick. Along with the construction work, farming, agriculture and poultry raising are all part of their education. This issue is an interesting and revealing subject. Running time, 20 minutes.—George Spires.

The struggle for possession of the machine is waged by "Mandrake" and "The Wasp," super criminal, unidentified until the concluding chapter. Warren Hull plays "Mandrake"; Al Kikume is "Lothar"; others include Doris Weston, Rex Downing, Edward Earle, Forbes Murray, Kenneth MacDonald and Don Beddoe. The first chapter gives promise of some exciting moments in the succeeding episodes. Directed by Sam Nelson and Norman Deming. UA TO HAVE 28 TO 32; BUDGET UP; GOLD, SCHLAIFER, VICE-PRESIDENTS

Individual Advertising Campaign for Each Feature, Says Farnol; Silverstone Defines Producers' Contractual Status

Twenty-eight million dollars for 28 to 32 films, and another $3,000,000 to advertise them; that is the commitment made by United Artists Corporation to exhibitors for 1939-40, as announced Monday by Murray Silverstone, company head, at the opening of the distributing organization's annual sales convention at the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles, in the middle of its 20th anniversary in business, with 175 attending.

Eleven Producers

At the three-day meeting, Mr. Silverstone disclosed the names of 11 producers who will provide the product, the largest number ever on UA's roster, and including David Oliver Selznick, Charles Chaplin, Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Walter Wanger, Hal Roach, Edward Small, David L. Loew, Sol Lesser and Ernst Lubitsch —in the order named by the company. The Loew, Lesser and Lubitsch units are new to United Artists releasing.

Besides the promised production expenditure and product and player identities, of primary interest to the exhibitor customers, one of the liveliest developments of the convention was the election to vice-presidencies of Harry L. Gold and L. J. Schlaifer, eastern and western general sales manager. Their elevation completes the roster of vice presidencies, with Arthur W. Kelly and Harry D. Buckley continuing in the posts they have held for many years.

Started as Salesman

Mr. Gold arrives at his corporate executive position after years with the company, starting as salesman in Cincinnati, and from then on holding, in turn, the offices of branch manager, district manager, assistant to Al Lichtman, in sales, and finally eastern general managership.

L. J. Schlaifer, in motion pictures since 1912, when he took his first job with Warners in Minneapolis, served from 1919 to 1928 with Universal, and for the last 11 years has been western sales manager for United Artists.

Amplifying the statement of Mr. Silverstone, that the company would spend $3,000,000 on advertising, Lynn Farnol, director of advertising and publicity, said the record budget would be expended on individual campaigns for the 32 features. Each campaign will be "individually tailored," and an average of $60,000 to $100,000 will be spent on ads in the newspapers and the trade on each production. In addition, on certain selected pictures an extended use will be made of the national weekly periodicals and national women's magazines, similar to the campaign recently utilized on "Wuthering Heights." The ad budget will be $1,200,000 more than this year.

Among the pictures to receive such advertising concentration, Mr. Farnol said, are Alexander Korda's "Four Feathers" and Walter Wanger's "Winter Carnival." Special exploitation is planned for the Selznick production of "Intermezzo" and his "Rebecca."

Mr. Farnol said further that in association with the MPPDA a nationwide campaign is underway for the Jascha Heifetz film, "Music School." Albert Margolies and Monroe Greenthal also spoke.

Mr. Silverstone defined the contractual status of the owner members of United Artists, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Sam Goldwyn and Alexander Korda, and the contributing producers, David O. Selznick, Hal Roach, David Loew, Walter Wanger, Sol Lesser and Ernst Lubitsch, most of whom hold contracts expiring in September, 1945. Mr. Silverstone expressed regret at the exception of Mr. Selznick, who is affiliated on a shorter term arrangement.

He said he is personally sympathetic toward the trade practice code but that the nature of the United Artists setup, in which each contributing producer has complete authority to accept or reject any contract for his pictures makes company adherence to the code impracticable.

He forecast increasing importance of television as an entertainment factor but said the industry has no cause for alarm "if it will arm itself with good pictures."

Declaring the Neely Bill "is on the wrong track," he said, "You don't have to block book good pictures."

Mr. Silverstone was followed by Harry Gold, who divulged statistics showing the increase in contract sales to a new high.

Mr. Schlaifer presented gold buttons and cash bonuses of $250 each to delegates who had sold 100 per cent or more of their quotas. These were M. Magill, Guy Gunderson, Richard Harrity, J. H. Nash, Mark N. Silver, Nat Nathanson, E. V. Donnelly, A. N. Keeper, E. A. Ashkins, Ray Wylie, Earl Collins, Harry Rees and F. M. Higgins.

Mary Pickford, David O. Selznick, David Loew, Richard A. Rowland, Walter Wanger, William Wyler, Alfred Hitchcock and Leslie Howard addressed the delegates at Monday's session.

Hal Roach screened a special trailer showing scenes from five features and four Laurel and Hardy four-reel pictures, designed, he said, to balance the growing length of "A" pictures. Mr. Selznick described "Intermezzo" and when delegates disapproved the name, agreed to change it.

Selznick, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Roach, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, Mr. and Mrs. Tay Garnett, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ginsberg, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. George Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Thornton.

"Robin Hood" Sets Record for First Run Attendance; German, French Films Popular

by JOHN LORANT

in Athens

The Greek film market is ruled almost exclusively by American and French films. The current film season has started very favorably and both distributors and exhibitors are content with the results so far. A total of 76 pictures has been released up till now during the 1938-39 season. Of these, the following ten films were the most popular, judging by the number of people who went to see them in first-run movies:

Top Attendance 102,500

"Robin Hood" was seen by 102,500; "The Hindu Monument" (German) by 99,000; "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" by 61,500; "The Adventures of Marco Polo" by 59,000; "La Citadelle du Silence" (French) by 46,000; "Carmen" (German) by 45,500; "J'accuse" (French) by 44,500; "La Refugiée" (Greek) by 43,600; "Firefly" by 45,000; "Her Jungle Love" by 36,200.

Of the ten most popular films of the season, five were American, two French, one Greek, and two German. "Robin Hood" was a record breaker in Greece; this was the first film seen by more than a hundred thousand cinemagoers, in the first-run movies. The previous record had also been held by an American film, "The Life Story of Emile Zola." "Robin Hood," "Carmen," "Firefly" and "Her Jungle Love" were released in a single theatre at a time, but the others were shown in two first-class cinemas simultaneously. "Robin Hood" and "Marco Polo" were dubbed in French, but the others were shown in the original version. The only Greek film, "La Refugiée," shot in Egypt, did not score the anticipated success and is only eighth on the list. It is expected, however, to do better in provincial cinemas.

As a rule the financial success of a film depends mostly on the deluxe cinemas in Athens; the provincial theatres do not count for much in the way of box-office figures. But in the case of a local film, which appeals more to country folks than the cosmopolitan city population, this may be reversed.

Of the 76 films shown since the beginning of the season, 38 were American, 24 French, 11 German, 2 Italian, and one Greek. Three films were seen by more than 50,000 persons, 11 were attended by 20,000 spectators, and 30 by more than 10,000.

Others Successful

Of the American films, the greatest hits were those mentioned in the list above. Fairly successful were: "One Hundred Men and a Girl," "Jezebel," "Blue Beard's Eighth Wife," "Internes Can't Take Money," "Wings of the Morning," "In Old Chicago," "Vivacious Lady," "Devil's Playground," "Madame X," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Happy Landing," "When You Are in Love," and "Mannequin."

As these facts show, the Greek film market is dominated almost exclusively by American and French films. German pictures are only popular if they deal with a romantic, spectacular subject, like the "The Hindu Monument." The Greeks, like the public of other Balkan countries, like to see adventure and romance on the screen. This is the secret of the enormous popularity of "Robin Hood" and that is why Dorothy Lamour is the most popular star in Greece. A portion of the local public is also interested in films dealing with social and psychological subjects, but prefer to get these in French. American and German films of this type don't interest them at all. Since a great portion of the population understands French, this being the most widely spoken western language in the Levant, many American films are released with French dubbing.

There are two non-stop movies in Athens, each giving an hour's program eleven times a day. They show American short subjects, educationals, newsreels and cartoons. Big cinemas, however, do not release short subjects since the presentation of newsreels is not compulsory in Greece as it is in many other countries. The program in the big cinemas consists of a new thriller and a big feature film. There are four performances a day, and the prices of tickets range from 15 to 25 drachmas (15 to 25 cents).

India Company to Study Our Industry

A new motion picture company in India proposes to send a British representative to the United States to study the American film industry and contact American producers of motion picture equipment, according to a report from the American Consulate at Bombay made public by the Department of Commerce in Washington.

The new company, called Cine Finance and Banking Corporation of India, Ltd., will also seek American technical cooperation in connection with its projects, through the visit of its British representatives to the United States, the report said.

The new Indian company has an authorized capital of $3,480,000 and has arranged an ambitious program for financing and servicing the motion picture industry of India. No direct competition with existing companies is contemplated by the new company, according to the report.

Under present plans it proposes to organize independent companies to handle the industry's problems in connection with production, distribution, publicity, equipment purchases, effecting insurance and training technicians.

The gross income of the film industry in India was estimated at $31,320,000 in 1938, the report said. There are 996 motion picture theatres, 500 touring cinemas, 75 active film companies producing 200 pictures annually, and 253 distributors handling Indian and imported pictures, according to the report.

Form New Company

Peninsula Pictures has been formed in San Francisco to produce six and possibly eight pictures a year there. The first production will be "Moon Over Monterey," to be made in both English and Spanish for the United States and South America markets. Executives of the company are listed as Gordon Burdge and Ed Blas, San Francisco theatrical agency owners.

America Holds Lithuania Lead

Lithuanians imported films of 33 per cent less rental value in 1938 than in 1937, according to figures obtained by the American legation at Kaunas, capital of the country, and released to the trade here through the motion picture division of the United States Department of Commerce. The decline of the number and value of the films is tempered, however, by the knowledge, according to the report, that United States films maintained first place, with 42 per cent of the total, followed by Germany, with 24 per cent of the total film imports.

In 1937, Lithuania imported films having a rental value of 231,000 Lits (the Lit 1.00 equalling $0.17); in 1938, it imported films with a rental value of 153,000 Lits. Following is a breakdown, showing how fared each country, in this connection:

	In Lits
Country of Origin	1937	1938
Austria	6,300	......
Belgium	1,300	1,100
Czecho-Slovakia	6,000	4,900
France	26,700	7,800
Germany	66,000	37,700
Great Britain	9,400	1,800
Hungary	1,100	......
Latvia	100	......
Netherlands	......	500
Palestine	......	2,400
Soviet Union	5,800	31,200
Switzerland	2,800	800
United States	105,800	64,900
Total	231,300	153,100

The report also shows that American films comprised 46.37 per cent of all those censored, and German films 31.39 per cent; that American films are censored because of their so-termed "criminal content," and German films for their propaganda; that there was no motion picture industry legislation during 1938; that theatre goers increased 30 per cent during that year; that there was no theatre construction in 1938, but that there may be some in this year; that in December, 1938, there were 68 motion picture theatres in the country, of which 64 were wired for sound; that 51 films, mostly newsreels, were produced in 1938, compared with 64 films, of similar nature, in 1937, all of poor quality.

Cuba Next to Increase Duties, Says Producer

With most Latin American countries taxing outside pictures and exempting from such taxes its own budding motion picture industries, it is "only natural" that Cuba should be trying the same, according to Eddie LeBaron, head of LeBaron Productions, who returned to New York recently from Havana, Cuba, after surveying distribution there.

The Cuban government, Mr. LeBaron said, is considering a measure to raise import duties on films. It has already exempted the major Cuban studio, Peliculas Cubanas, from taxes. Mr. LeBaron noted

Mr. LeBaron conducts an orchestra at the Rainbow Room, Rockefeller Center, New York City, and also produces Spanish-language films. One of his features, "Castles in the Air," is being distributed by Monogram, and has been running at the Regis Theatre, Mexico City.

MEXICAN UNION BANNING GERMAN AND ITALIAN PROPAGANDA FILMS

Financing Has Become an Acute Problem for Producers, with Production Costs Increasing and Returns Decreasing

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Unintentional aid is being given by American film distributors in Mexico in combatting competition from Germany and Italy by the Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mexico's most powerful labor organization. The Confederation announced when it forbade exhibition throughout Mexico of "Sergt. Barry," a German talkie, produced in Germany by Tobis Films, that it intends to prevent showings of any German or in fact any kind of picture that it considers to be a vehicle for Nazist propaganda, ridicules democracy and in so doing jeers at the basic principles of Mexico's social revolution.

Second from Germany Barred

"Sergt. Barry" is the second made-in-Germany picture to come under the Confederation ban. The first was "Carmen," which, though of Spanish theme and in Spanish, was produced in Germany. This film was forbidden because the Confederation deemed that some of its players have leftist political views. "Carmen" was banned on the eve of its expensively prepared and heralded exhibition in Mexico City. The ban was on for several weeks. The Confederation lifted the lid without explanation, giving rise to speculation as to why it reversed its action.

"Scipio Africanus," made-in-Italy, and of an ancient Roman story, was banned by the Confederation on the ground that it is Fascist and imperialistic propaganda. This ban is still in effect, though it was said some little time ago that the Confederation was considering lifting prohibition of this picture.

Bans Are Air Tight

Bans the Confederation exerts are air tight because this organization is all powerful in Mexico with regard to labor matters. All motion picture workers' unions are members of it. Not one of them would dare defy the Confederation's orders.

The Confederation is also keeping radio in Mexico free of Nazist and Fascist propaganda, for it is as powerful in air affairs as it is in cinematographic matters. Any radio station that attempted to spread totalitarian gospel would be closed up forthwith.

Financing A Problem

Financing has become an acute problem for Mexican producers. Gone are the days when a feature that afforded a reasonable return on the investment could be made for around $10,000 to $12,000. Gone, too, apparently, are the times of not so long ago when a net of nearly $400,000 could be garnered from an outlay of but $20,000, as in the case of Mexico's stellar picture, "Alla en El Rancho Grande" (Way Down on the Rancho Grande). That picture set box office records at home and abroad that have not even been approached by other Mexican films.

Production costs have increased so much in Mexico in the last two years that now $40,000 to $50,000 is about the average per feature. Pictures at those prices, a whole lot of money for Mexico in these times of her sharpest economic depression, just have to be good if the makers can hope to get a fair profit or at least break even. One feature is now in the making that will cost approximately $60,000 before it is finished, a new high for a made-in-Mexico. There is some worry that the producers will even get their money back, for this film will have to be an outstanding smash to even refund such a huge investment.

ENGLAND BARS AN ANTI-NAZI FILM

The British Board of Censors is adhering to its policy of barring films of a content which may be considered offensive to foreign governments. The latest instance is the banning of "I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany," starring Isobel Steele, whose experiences in Nazi Germany the film purportedly recounts.

The picture was distributed in the United States several years ago, by Malvina Pictures.

Backers of pictures are becoming more conservative. Some of them demand as high as 60 per cent of gross, a condition that makes the producer think twice before going ahead with production. Several producers are suffering the costly embarrassment of being obliged to "hock" their pictures (chiefly in South America where "Alla en El Rancho Grande" gave Mexican productions great popularity) before they are even finished, in order to defray making expenses. That business gives the producers plenty of gray hairs, but few pesos for themselves.

Benefits Predicted

The 20 features that are to be produced in Mexico by the end of spring, the most made in this country in any one season, are more or less involved in this sort of financial trouble. There are even doubts that some of them can be finished, at least on schedule.

Yet, shrewd observers of the industry in Mexico do not see the picture all black. They predict that substantial benefits will emerge from the turmoil, that the shoestringers, those who get together $400 or $500 and start to make a picture, depending upon borrowing right and left to make up the rest of the costs, will be eliminated.

Another benefit seen arising from this faulty financing is an increase in the practice of Mexican producers lining up with major American producers, as is the case with some of them joining up with Columbia and RKO. That combination is of mutual profit: Mexican producers are assured uninterrupted making and a just percentage of exhibition revenues; it enables the Americans to produce good pictures in Spanish at far less expense than is possible in the United States.

Mexico's first nationalized cinema is doing well in Cuernavaca, capital of Morelos state, which is a popular American tourist resort. The cinema, Teatro Morelos, was taken over recently by the Morelos government and modernized. High grade American pictures are exhibited at popular prices. Profits of the cinema go to the state school building fund.

Mexican producers have apparently insured themselves against labor troubles, rather a frequent occurrence in Mexico, with the appointment of a mixed committee of six members, three representing the producers, the others the workers. All labor grievances are to be heard by this body which will endeavor to bring about conciliation.

Fernando de Fuentes, noted director-producer, heads the producers' representation.

Fire fed by lack of water that broke out in the projection room during a performance destroyed the Teatro Variedades, a 3,500-seat cinema in Saltillo, capital of Coahuila state. Nobody was hurt, but soldiers and police had to aid firemen in controlling the blaze.

Flu, the worst that large sections of Mexico have suffered since the Spanish variety epidemic of 1918, has hit exhibitors hard. It has reduced business from 20 per cent to 30 per cent.

Four of Mexico City's most important radio stations are owned and operated by women, all of them married, one of them a widow. This is a new occupation for Mexican women.

Singing and reciting by students, some of them very young, of the national school for the deaf and dumb in Mexico City, are being broadcast by radio station XEQ as a means of demonstrating progress the Mexican government is making in restoring speech and hearing to mutes.

Brazil Prefers American Films

by L. S. Marinho
in Rio de Janiero

Of the 491 pictures shown in Brazil in 1938, 402 were American films or 82 per cent of all pictures. The predominance of films from the United States is partly due to the fact that all the large American companies have established agencies in Brazil and several others have their representatives here.

Another reason for the high percentage of American films is that people here are more inclined to accept films from our neighbors to the north than films from Europe or films in Spanish, because Portuguese is spoken almost universally in Brazil and consequently even Spanish pictures must have the dialogue translated into Spanish.

Broken down, the figures on imported product for 1938 reveal that the eight major American companies imported 356 of the 402 American films and nine English and two Mexican films. In addition there were shown in Brazil five more from England, 37 from Germany, 21 from France, six from Italy, two from Argentina, one from Portugal and one from Spain. Five Brazilian pictures were also shown.

Three of four former first-run houses this year brought back some old favorites and while the majority of them failed to draw very well some did make money.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

INTO OUR EDITORIAL ROOMS the other day walked a short, timid, frail appearing clergyman, who turned out to be Father Baltasar, a Capuchin priest, who had just traveled from Venezuela with a can of film he had shot among the primitives in the mountains of the frontier between Venezuela and British Guiana. Among them he had many a harrowing experience, not the least of which was the cracking up of his plane in the dense vegetation and the almost certain death from which he was saved by rescuers who reached him weeks later with sorely needed food and water.

A dozen others in the wrecked passenger transport were lifted bodily out of the ruins by little Father Baltasar. He staunched their bleeding wounds and for days nursed them in the jungle. Some died, others were badly shattered. The days dragged on. The radio system had been smashed in the fall. Death by starvation came nearer and nearer. One passenger had a gun, but only a crow and a parrot came near enough to be shot. In three weeks those who could walk at all were staggering. Ribs stood out, showing through holes in tattered garments. Planes apparently bent on rescue were heard at intervals overhead. But effort to attract attention failed.

Then one day voices were heard. Before the emaciated victims could realize that they were real voices and not hallucinations of disordered imaginations, a bronzed woodsman came through the underbrush. He led others. All carried packs—food for the famished survivors. One of the rescuers was a government doctor, led by the "King of the Jungle," who some days before had picked up the trail of some of the survivors who had been out searching for water. Torrential rains had obliterated most of the signs of their trail, but this woodsman followed so accurately those signs that did remain that he found the wrecked plane in underbrush so thick that neither it nor its passengers could be seen from a distance of 12 feet.

Soon a plane was heard. Signals were made to show its pilot where the camp was. Radio carried the news immediately from the plane to Caracas and the world. The 16 planes that were searching converged on the spot. Dozens of parachutes carried more food and medicines out of the blue into the great, green forest. Three days later the rescue was effected. Father Baltasar saved his film and is now in New York to sell it.

"Will the gent who grabbed my Melton at Pinewood Studios take pity? I feel like a Scots fancy canary in the substitute. And, anyhow, having already lost one huntin' mac to the film industry, I feel that charity has suffered too long."

The arrival here the other day of London's well known Will Fyffe to act for Paramount Pictures, brings to mind an interview with the Scotch actor some months ago in London's World Film News, in which he explained why he almost always plays roles of old men, like his Highland Doctor, Glasgow Drunk or Scots Engineer.

"When I was 15," he said, "I found that I could make up as an old man and I realized that if I put on whiskers and played old men, I could go on doing them until I was 90. The parts would always be older than me—and if that is not thrift, its foresight. You see, comedians have to change with the times, but a character actor, playing the kind of parts I do, can go on for generations. There will always be Scots Engineers and Glasgow Drunks in spite of Swing and Coca Cola."

The European war crisis is resulting in some grim advertising in British newspapers. Ads for air raid shelters for the back yard are standing shoulder to shoulder with movie ads. Hollywood pictures are being advertised on the same pages with bombproof shelters, shouting, "Build It Now, Later On It May Be Too Late," and, "It Will Provide Protection For You and Yours Against Blast, Splinters and Falling Debris"—which is a nice frame of mind to offer anyone as he reads through the pages looking for a good movie show.

The pillboxes, as illustrated, are built either below or above ground, selling from $175 to $200 each. The walls are a foot thick.

Other "wartime" ads are also appearing in the London papers, three typical ads following (the A.R.P. stands for Air Raid Precaution).

EVERY ONCE IN A WHILE we find in the outside press an editorial that gets and makes a laugh out of a topic that is generally regarded unsmilingly, by exhibitors as well as others—government extravagance, for instance. The Tucson (Ariz.) Citizen, owned by William R. Johnson, is edited, according to its editorial page masthead, by Alex Parker, who seems to know how to talk of technicalities for the unlearned reader. In his own words:

"Credo"

"Our faith in the government has just been revived by a little countinghouse experience, the telling of which may comfort others who have been misled by stories of Washington wastefulness and extravagance.

"The experience cost us nine cents but we shall frame the documentary proof of it and prize it as though it were a Rembrandt. In the regular course of business we printed in our advertising columns a little notice for the Farm Security Administration and billed the office for the charge, amounting to $3.90, which figure was obtained by multiplying the per inch rate by the number of inches by the number of insertions. A standard ruler was employed. We swore it was right. But the general accounting office, audit division, would allow only $3.81. It knocked off one line showing dates of publication, 'which is not properly chargeable to the government,' and excluded from the inchage the 'shoulders' of the type slugs or lines, which made a difference of .06 inch.

"All types have shoulders and printers think they are necessary, but you can't fool the general accounting office. Venus de Milo gets along without arms, doesn't she?"

Alfred Hitchcock, noted English director, now in Hollywood under contract to David Selznick's company, thinks English actresses are just too formal. "Plunge an English actress into a bath of cold water," he says, "and she'll come to the top trying to look aloof and dignified."

American actresses, of course, throw up the sponge.

Loretta Young, movie star, has made the picture pages with a statement, issued while she was reclining upon a cushion beside her private pool in Hollywood, calling upon Congress:

To create a Bureau of Public Beauty, setting aside millions, to help all women look attractive, thus make men happy and benefit the state of the nation, the world, and eventually, the universe. Pretty faces, opines Hollywood's Loretta, are more important than bridges and dams and public works.

Yes, and a Hollywood press agent with Hollywood imagination is often more important than a pretty face in Hollywood.

Eli Sugarman at Billboard has just rounded up the facts from a poll of American universities and colleges and finds, surprisingly, that the college students do not like "jitterbugging." One participant describing the "killer diller" dance as having "a spine with a lack of responsibility on both ends." Another called him "a man who has an itch where he can't scratch it."

42 FEATURES, 16 WESTERNS, FOUR SERIALS, 112 SHORTS FROM COLUMBIA

Director Personnel Emphasized at Atlantic City Regional Sales Convention; Budget Increased $5,000,000 Over '38

With other large companies setting "great stars" or "great novels" as the keynote concentration for their 1939-40 product, Columbia Pictures this week struck on "great directors" as the basis for the production of its new season's program.

First of Three Regionals

Calling 120 home office and eastern branch managers and salesmen to the Ritz Carlton, Atlantic City, Monday morning, for the first of three regional sales conventions to be held this year, Jack Cohn, vice president, and A. Montague, general sales manager, announced for the new year a program of 40 features, 16 westerns, four serials, two series of two-reelers, 12 series of single reels, a Frank Capra special, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," and a feature and shorts by Mrs. Martin Johnson, the last two features and shorts to be sold individually and aside from the regular program.

Columbia's new budget will be raised $5,000,000 above this year's bringing the total to $14,000,000, based on an outside estimate of $9,000,000 spent in 1938-39. There will be 14 "high bracket" pictures in two groups of six and eight.

At the opening session of the convention Mr. Montague set down as company policy its belief that exhibitors are best able to decide their own exhibition policies.

Up to Exhibitor

"If it is the exhibitor's policy to run single features we will cooperate with that individual. And if he prefers double features, again we will cooperate to assure his success.

"We want the privilege of producing and distributing without unreasonable interference, but always seeking constructive suggestions.

"We do suggest to some highly-placed individuals in our business that their personal ideas be tested first before they are urged on exhibitor groups and particularly before they are given to newspapers for public consumption.

"Columbia has taken an important position in the trade practice conferences and the company emphatically expressed its intentions of living up to the last word, comma and period of that agreement," said Mr. Montague.

"We believe, as I am sure a vast majority of the exhibitors in this country believe, that they can be better treated than by a Neely bill or any other form of government supervision."

PRICE WAR BRINGS FIVE CENT SCALE

A price war, with nickel admissions, is in progress in Boswell, Pa., between the Vernon and Mary Lee theatres.

The Vernon came out first with an announcement of a new summer policy reducing admissions to 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children "due to the wide spread of unemployment."

The Mary Lee retaliated by reducing its prices to 15 cents for adults and five cents for children, and, in a handbill announcing the reduction, said: "We will be honest with you—Due to competition (not unemployment) the prices in your movie entertainment are being cut."

Mr. Montague reported a record number of accounts sold.

Joseph A. McConville stressed the need of assisting Latin-American exhibitors with successful exploitation methods to attain good will in those countries. He announced the opening of new sales offices in Paris, Marseilles and Brussels and plans for others.

Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, opened Tuesday's meeting. After introducing A. Schneider, treasurer, and Nate Spingold, a three-reel film was presented to the sales group.

Harry Cohn, president and directors Wesley Ruggles, Frank Lloyd, Howard Hawks and Rouben Mamoulian spoke directly from the screen to the meeting. Shots of Frank Capra directing "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and scenes from the same picture now in production were shown.

Mr. Mamoulian directing "Golden Boy" and scenes with Columbia's new "find" William Holden, playing with Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and others were included.

Alexander Hall, directing "Good Girls Go to Paris," was shown in action.

The public must be sold more thoroughly than ever before on motion pictures, said Jack Cohn.

"Exhibitors who intend to rely upon the distributor to sell the picture are remiss in doing a job that primarily belongs to them," he said. "Distributors must scatter their 'shots' in advertising and publicity and as a result the specialized community showmanship has been glaringly missing.

"One of the dominant factors in building up the motion picture business was the fact that exhibitors themselves created their own showmanship. This has been lacking in the last few years.

"It isn't enough to provide good pictures for those exhibitors who complain there aren't enough good pictures.

"Columbia is doing its share with its 'direct to public' advertising campaign, which is being guided to a great extent by the advice of exhibitors."

Briskin Emphasizes Directors

Sam Briskin, representing Harry Cohn, president, who was detained in Hollywood by production, emphasized at the meeting that the company's policy will lay stress, as never before, on the importance of "director names."

"The policy of the Columbia Studio has altered considerably," said Mr. Briskin. "We know that in the hands of great directors even a mediocre story becomes great, while a great story becomes all-important when assigned to men who know their jobs."

Also continuing its policy that stories, too, make good pictures, the sales staff was told that the company had acquired the most expensive story material in its history, headed by Clarence Budington Kelland's "Arizona" and Elizabeth Page's "Tree of Liberty."

Because of the demand for the homey, domestic drama, the company will continue its "Blondie" group and will offer in addition a new series starring Edith Fellows.

80% OF 1940 PRODUCT COMMITMENTS MADE TO DATE TO U.S. EXHIBITORS

Two More Majors Hold Conventions; RKO Meeting June 19–22; Monogram Concludes Sessions; Paramount Foreign Meet

Exhibitors have in hand as of this week the program on paper of 80 per cent of the product promised by the large companies for 1939-40.

With Columbia on Monday announcing 58, the United Artists on the same day disclosing between 28 and 32 features, the identies of 90 features were thereby added to the 311 already announced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Monogram, Republic, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and Warners, all of these eight companies having held their annual sales conventions.

RKO on Wednesday announced June 19-22 as the date for its convention at Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., with representatives from all over the world attending and meeting for the first time under the new president, George F. Schaefer. The company will probably set 42 to 48 features for the new season.

Still to be heard from in convention are Paramount, which meets June 8 to 10 in Los Angeles, probably setting 58 to 60 features, and Grand National, whose new plans are being formulated.

Columbia's full product announcement appears on page 49 and United Artists, on page 44, this issue. For the benefit of exhibitors, dates of publication of programs of the other companies are listed as follows: Monogram, May 6th, page 46, 46 features; Universal, April 22nd, page 24, 58 features; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, March 25th, page 13, 52 features; Republic, April 8th, page 57, 50 features; Warners, March 18th, page 18, 48 features.

Monogram Meeting Ends

Following its annual product announcement made at the beginning of its convention, as published last week, Monogram Pictures concluded its four-day sessions, in Chicago, by announcing a $2,505,000 increase in its production budget for the 30 features and 16 westerns it promises.

Monogram on Saturday night held its annual banquet in Chicago's Knickerbocker Hotel, attended by 200. Jack Kirsch, of Chicago Allied, was a guest.

The main portion of the evening was devoted to the dinner and a special entertainment program arranged by Henri Elman, local franchise holder. Following, Edward Golden, as toastmaster, introduced Edward Kuykendall, of the MPTOA, and Al Steffes, of Allied.

Company executives headed by President W. Ray Johnston, paid tribute to the sales force.

The meeting ended with the presentation of gifts to company executives by the salesmen. Mr. Johnston, Mr. Golden, Scott Dunlap, George Weeks, Louis L. Lifton, John Harrington, Floyd Lind and Leon Fromkess were each called upon.

Mr. Kuykendall disclosed that the members of his MPTOA were interested in taking immediate advantage of the concessions offered in the trade practice agreements.

He pointed out that his members felt it more to their advantage to utilize the concessions offered them by major companies as fast as possible rather than wait until all points had been agreed upon and then start to make use of the concessions offered.

EDITORIAL COMMENDS MORALITY OF FILMS

The Quimby Circuit, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has reprinted an editorial appearing in the Journal-Gazette, local paper, in an advertisement in the same paper, running above its own announcement.

The editorial, headed "Movies and a Job Well Done," said in part: "The motion picture industry deserves more credit than it has been given for the steady trend away from sexy and gangster-glory movies. . . . A sense of moral responsibility has characterized the industry in recent months. Motion pictures bear an important responsibility. Motion picture men are making a genuine effort, and a successful effort, to maintain a high moral and cultural tone while providing first-rate entertainment."

Mr. Johnston at the last session announced that Jackie Cooper and Jean Parker have been added to Monogram's roster, Cooper for possibly two features, and Miss Parker definitely for two. Also, the production staff was increased with the addition of Jerry Brandt, son of the late Joe Brandt, who will serve as associate producer, having formed a new company with E. B. Derr.

Norton V. Ritchey, Monogram's foreign manager, announced that the company has under consideration a plan to acquire a number of Spanish language features produced in Hollywood or Mexico for distribution in Latin America. He reported that the company's business in England is at its best in years.

Mr. Johnston held the attention of the meeting with a point-by-point review of "company promises kept." Edward Golden and George Weeks, held up the manpower quotient as "the highest in the company's history." Sol Francis, new Monogram franchise holder in Omaha, addressed the final session.

Following MGM's national convention for managers and salesmen, in March, the third of a series of divisional meetings for office managers, bookers and checkers was held last week for five midwest exchanges at the Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City.

The home office group included Alan F. Cummings, in charge of branch operations, who presided; Charles K. Stern, Joel Bezahler, William Brenner, Parke D. Agnew and Mike Simons, editor of the Distributor. Local arrangements were made by Harris P. Wolfberg, district manager; Frank Hensler, branch manager, and Claud Morris, exploitation representative.

Last of Republic's regional sales meetings was held over the week-end at San Francisco's Empire Hotel.

Presiding was Grover C. Parsons, western district sales manager. Speakers included H. J. Yates, James R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures; William Saal, special representative; Floyd St. John, J. T. Sheffield and Francis Bateman, franchise holders.

Among others on hand were Grover C. Schaefer, controller, of the home office; Ed Walton and Sam Milner, Seattle; G. Gerbase, F. W. Sheffield, Denver; M. Ross, Salt Lake City; R. Boomer, Butte; J. H. Sheffield, Jack Rue, Portland; W. Weisbaum, W. Boland, J. N. Cane, S. C. Martenstein, San Francisco; F. Bateman, A. John Frey, J. S. Stout, Los Angeles.

Republic played host to a number of San Francisco circuit heads and other exhibitors at a luncheon in conjunction with its western regional.

Among those at the luncheon were Arch N. Bowles, northern California division head for National Theatres, and Charles Thall of the circuit; R. A. McNeil and M. A. Naify of Golden States Circuit; Morgan Walsh and George Mann, Redwood circuit; Rotus Harvey, Joseph Blumenfeld, George Nasser of Nasser Bros. and Sam Levin of San Francisco Theatres.

Paramount's Foreign Meeting

John W. Hicks, Jr., vice-president in charge of Paramount's foreign department, in New York, received a cabled summary of the Paramount sales convention concluded in London Monday night with a dinner at Grosvenor House.

Managing Director David E. Rose, in charge, reported that Friday and Saturday were devoted to sales and policy matters, and that Sunday witnessed the screening of "Union Pacific," "Invitation to Happiness," and "Grand Jury Secrets."

Also presented were shots from Paramount's British production, "French Without Tears," starring Ray Milland, Ellen Drew and Janine Darcey and three reels of another Paramount British film, "This Man in Paris."

Erich Pommer, production head of Mayflower Films, will attend the Paramount sales convention in Los Angeles, June 8 to 10. He is due here May 15 from London on the Normandie.

Mr. Pommer will address the convention on the Pommer-Laughton-Mayflower films to be distributed by Paramount here during 1939-'40. Three films are set, including "Jamaica Inn," "St. Martin's Lane" and "Admirable Crichton." Budd Rogers, Pommer's American representative, also will attend the meeting.

Film Carriers Reelect James Clark President

Rates, tariffs, safety in handling films, reelection of officers, competitive situations, and state and national governmental attitudes towards their businesses, marked the discussions of the 80-odd members of the National Film Carriers' association, during their sixth annual convention on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Park Central Hotel, New York City.

The officers re-elected were James Clark of Philadelphia, president and treasurer; Thomas Gilboy of San Francisco, vice-president; Clint Weyer of New York City, secretary. L. D. Benton of Atlanta replaces A. B. Abercrombie on the board of directors.

On Monday, the conventioneers heard Mr. Clark's annual report, discussed tariffs and competition, and then heard Harold Shertz of Philadelphia, general counsel, deliver a detailed resume of the rate and tariff situation.

Elections were held Tuesday afternoon, after an official convention luncheon. The convention broke up Wednesday afternoon.

BOOK REVIEW

"FOREMOST FILMS OF 1938". By Frank Vreeland. Published by Pitman. Cloth, 347 pages. $3.50.

Admittedly aiming to create for films a reviewer's year book of the type used by Burns Mantle in his annual "Best Play" series, Frank Vreeland, reviewer and editor, has gathered for his first volume brief summaries of 476 pictures released in 1938; more comprehensive reviews of 10 leading films; a review of the "trends" of films in Hollywood, Great Britain, South America and European countries, and a summation of highlight news events of the film year.

Treated in some detail are "Algiers," "The Citadel," "Wells Fargo," "The Buccaneer," "In Old Chicago," "That Certain Age," 'The Young in Heart," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," "You Can't Take It With You" and "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." The other 476 pictures, including 28 under the heading of "Unusual Films," are given thumb-nail plot delineations, a listing of their dramatic and technical personnel and their release dates.

Events of import in 1938, to Mr. Vreeland, were the decrease in the "cockeyed comedy" picture, the greater vogue of the family type picture with the rise in the importance of juvenile stars, the broader base afforded music in films, the revival of Westerns, the legislative and legal pressure on the industry emanating from Washington and elsewhere, and the increased interest of motion picture companies in television.

Briefly noted, also, are the retrenchment caused by the financial recession and the loss of certain European markets, the subsequent upturn in the industry later in the year; the emphasis on historical films; the roles played in English film-making by Alexander Korda, Alfred Hitchcock, Gabriel Pascal and Erich Pommer-Charles Laughton, and the extension of the activities of American producing companies in England.

Mr. Vreeland says that "with a few exceptions, ... Europe sent nothing notable abroad during the past year." Mentioned are "Mayerling," "The Pearls of the Crown," and "Grand Illusion"; as well as such foreign directors as Jean Renoir, Rene Clair, and Jean Duvivier, and players like Charles Boyer, Pierre Fresnay and Harry Bauer.

The increased interest of Latin American countries in film production is also pointed out.

Other sections of the book are devoted to listing the awards of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences for 1937, and other awards; to a listing of films reissued, and to a partial summary of Will Hays' annual report.

That there is a place in the growing bibliography of the industry for such a volume seems apparent; that Mr. Vreeland is qualified to present these findings is evident from the first of what should be a most interesting yearly feature.—W. S.

C. R. Corradini, manager of the Cincinnati branch of Ross Federal Service, has been transferred to a similar post at Boston. Hank Gleiss, of the Washington branch, has been placed in charge of the Cincinnati office.

$300,000 Expected From New York Censors

Governor Herbert H. Lehman and the New York State legislature have agreed upon the figure of $300,000 as the probable revenue from the 1939-40 operations of the state's censors in the Department of Education. The estimates for the present fiscal year, which ends June 1, are expected to be a bit higher than the 1937 figure of $306,000.

Last week the state censor board barred "Polygamy," a Continental Pictures, Inc., production from the state, because "it was immoral, sacrilegious, and tended to incite to crime." Syndicate Exchange, the New York distributor, filed an appeal with the New York Board of Regents.

Union Files Suit In Portland, Ore.

The Circle theatre, state and city officials have been made defendants in a new suit instituted in circuit court in Portland, Ore., which is intended to strengthen labor's attack on Oregon's new picketing regulation act. The suit is based on a claimed dispute between the motion picture operators and the theatre over a contract, the new suit being similar in content to the pending suits, although adding four allegations, involving wage scales.

Union operators base their claims for a right to picket the theatre on the fact a majority in the union favored picketing, despite the fact the operators do not number a majority among the employees of the theatre, it was said.

ALEXANDER PREVIEWS
RARIN' TO GO!

For years, Exhibitors have been demanding a new "coming attraction preview service" that is geared to the needs of modern, streamlined showmanship. This means shorter trailers, requiring fewer minutes of valuable screening time for showing; trailers that tell just enough to make an audience want to see a picture, yet do not reveal too much of the story; trailers that step up box office traffic and step down on cost to Exhibitors.

ALEXANDER PREVIEWS are the welcome answer to these demands. They combine fascinating title board animations; dramatic live action scenes (not from producers' negatives) especially filmed for the previews; the entire gamut of trick camera effects are used to put action into the still photos that are used to illustrate the pictures; every sound effect that helps to dramatize a picture is used in the preview. ALEXANDER PREVIEWS run 50 to 65 feet in length, yet they do a complete selling job for each picture.

ALEXANDER PREVIEW COMPANY will service Exhibitors with a nationwide salesforce, including some sales representatives now associated with the Alexander Film Company.

PRODUCERS AND DIRECTORS GUILD COME TO TERMS AFTER TWO YEARS

80 Per Cent. Guild Shop Provided, Minimum Pay for First and Second Assistant Directors and Unit Managers

Climaxing two years of negotiations, oftimes desultory but boiling over last February when the directors in Hollywood threatening a studio-wide strike, the agreement between the motion picture-producers and the Screen Directors Guild this week was completed and awaited signing.

It was in February that Frank Capra, as president of the Guild and head of its bargaining committee, threatened a strike of all directors and his resignation from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences; whereupon, the Associated Motion Picture Producers recognized the guild as a bargaining agent, and appointed a committee to meet with the guild. The results of these meetings are now announced.

80% Guild Shop

The Guild, in originally presenting its demands and pressing them at the beginning of this year, primarily was concerned with the salaries of assistant directors and the wages and hours of unit managers. The top figures in the Guild were, in effect, attempting to help their lesser known associates. In summary, the new agreements provide for:

Eighty per cent Guild shop for the duration of the nine-year contracts; minimum salaries for first and second assistant directors and unit managers; consultation by producers with directors, on the casting and editing; severance pay for others than directors; preparation time for directors, prior to shooting.

The contracts are with the Screen Directors Guild and the Unit Managers Guild, this newly formed for the purpose of operation of the new agreements. These contracts are liable to cancellation after four years, or, with the service of a year's notice, at the end of three years.

The unit manager terms were, apparently, the final obstacle to complete agreement between producers and directors. In the contract, such a manager is defined as one who, "in addition to the performance of other duties, acts as an assistant to the production manager of the studio and/or the producer, and is a channel through which the production office maintains contact with the shooting unit. . . ."

A section of the contract provides that the Guild "will accept as a member . . . any unit manager the producer wishes to employ."

Wage and Working Conditions

In detail, the wage and working hour conditions for unit managers are as follows:

A minimum salary of $150 a week, irrespective of the picture to which the manager is assigned, and whether or not he is a free-lance.

One-fifth of the weekly minimum for those employed by the day, or for a fraction of the day.

All unit managers receiving the minimum at the time of agreements, or in excess, to receive a ten per cent salary increase; those receiving below this minimum to have their salaries raised to it or above it.

All studios to recognize the contract's significance regarding salaries.

No limitations preventing the unit manager from accepting employment in other capacities.

GUILD REJECTS PACT; KIBRE SEEKS QUIZ

Directors of the Screen Writers Guild this week declared the producers' proposal for a basic agreement was but a company union contract and that "we cannot ask our members to surrender this freedom of action for seven years in return for such a contract." The rejection was contained in in a letter signed by Charles Brackett, president of the Guild.

The Guild, failing in its attempt to obtain a collective bargaining agreement, will now vote to affiliate with either the CIO or AFL.

Jeff Kibre, minority leader of Studio Technicians' Local 37, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, is demanding an investigation of his arrest last Saturday without a warrant. Members of the local paid his $50 fine on Monday and he was released from jail. Kibre was booked first for failure to pay a fine for contempt of court and later on suspicion of criminal syndicalism. The charges were dropped Tuesday.

Unit Managers' Contracts

Contracts with unit managers to be for a minimum of 46 weeks; to provide for two consecutive weeks of vacation with full pay.

Severance pay of one week's salary for those employed more than two weeks; or three days, if employed for less than that time.

Regardless of membership in the Guild, all unit managers to be paid at least the minimums provided by the contract.

No layoff for a contract unit manager for less than one week at a time.

No free lance unit manager to be "called" for less than one day's pay.

No "weather permitting" calls.

Contract with Assistant Directors

The contract with the directors, in detail, calls for the following:

For assistant directors: $125 per week minimum salary; a ten per cent raise for those getting over this minimum; a minimum contract time between producers and individuals, of 46 weeks; two weeks' vacation with full pay; severance pay for free lancers, of one week, for those working for more than two consecutive weeks, and three days' pay for those working less that this time; minimum salaries for non-members as well.

For second assistants: 90 cents per hour for the second year; one dollar per hour for the third year, and all following; over-time as provided in the Wages and Hours bill; a ten per cent raise in salary for those getting the minimum, and above; a minimum "call" of eight hours.

Directors' Working Conditions

For the directors themselves, the outstanding provisions are those dealing with working conditions. The agreement provides that for preparation prior to photography, each director be allowed the following time:

For pictures of over $200,000, two weeks.

For pictures of that amount or below, one week.

For westerns and serials, five days.

For shorts, two days.

Free-lance directors employed at $750 a week or less, are to have full salary during preparation time.

This week, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, president of the Associated Motion Picture Producers and head of the producers' labor committee, declared:

"Amicable solution of all issues between the Guilds and the producers gives us all great satisfaction. The agreement does more than dispose of pressing problems in the industry. It also serves to emphasize anew that a conference table with a democratic give-and-take is the best medium for solving and settling differences between employer and employee."

15,000 Members, Says Whitehead

The American Federation of Actors now has 15,000 members, half of whom are in good standing, and 1938 was "the greatest year" the organization ever had, Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary, told the annual meeting of the Federation, on Tuesday at the Hotel Edison, New York City.

Mr. Whitehead declared that 5,000 new members were received in the last year.

Four new members were elected to the Federation council of 32 members, and four were reelected. Eight of the council's members come up for election each year. The members reelected were Rudy Vallee, Jed Dooley, Walter Digges and Sally Rand. The new members are Joe Smith, Lou Taylor, Avis Andrews and Adye Alyn. These latter replace Ben Bernie, Harry Burns, Chick York, and Howard Dalton.

Harry Richman, chairman of the council, asked greater attendance at the meetings, and emphasized the importance of organization loyalty.

There were other reports by council members. About 200 attended.

Publish Study Guides

Educational guides to a number of new pictures have been published by Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc., under the general editorship of Max J. Herzberg, principal of Weequahic High School, Newark, N. J. These guides are in accordance with the objectives of the committee on motion pictures of the Department of Secondary Education in the National Education Association. They are on "Man of Conquest"; "Pygmalion"; "The Mikado"; "Le Sept Nains et le Blanche Neige" (French version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs"); "Union Pacific"; "Goodbye Mr. Chips"; "Young Mr. Lincoln."

Universal expects to get $100,000 on "The Mikado" from Canada. The biggest Universal take from the Dominion previously was $85,000. W. A. Scully, general sales manager, and W. J. Heineman, western sales manager, to determine the mass appeal of the picture, opened it at the Strand theatre in Iowa City. The opening day business was reported to be greater by nearly a third than that of any other Universal picture ever to play the house. Iowa State University is located at Iowa City.

BRITISH INDUSTRY MARSHALS FORCES IN OPPOSITION TO NEW TAX BURDEN

Trade Views Import and Excise Increases as "Violent Blow"; American Interests Hard Hit by Provisions of New Budget

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Suffering from the worst slump in its history, confused if not actually confounded by the 1938 Films Act, its trade aggravated by the general air of European crisis, the British film industry has, during the last week, received what is probably the most violent blow ever administered to it.

Hoping for at least one concession, a cut in Entertainment Tax, the industry has found itself, by Sir John Simon's budget, saddled with a tax on all film stock, whether manufactured in this country or outside, which has the net effect of raising film manufacture costs by a hundred per cent, and a virtual increase of duty on imported positives and negatives. From his new film duties the Chancellor estimates to add a million pounds to his revenue. A conservative trade estimate is that the industry will pay over to the exchequer at least £625,000 a year. Of this, American interests will be called upon to pay at least 85 per cent.

Tax in Two Directions

The new duties are two. The less onerous, because the more easily negotiable, is an adjustment of the import tax. Instead of paying one penny per linear foot for positives and fivepence per foot for negative, importers will pay sixpence per linear foot for the first copy brought in and twopence per foot for every copy afterwards. The device is an obvious thrust at the American custom of importing lavenders, from which dupes are made here.

Catastrophic, however, was the imposition of an entirely new excise duty of fourpence halfpenny per square foot on all film manufactured in this country. The immediate effect of this has been to raise the price of all film stock by a halfpenny a linear foot, an increase in cost of more than one hundred per cent.

Joint trade conferences were immediately called, with foreign distributors, British producers, exhibitors and newsreels forming a united front in the face of emergency, and appointing David E. Griffiths, president of the Kinematograph Renters Society, to lead a joint trade deputation to the Chancellor.

Newsreels, who would be most heavily hit by both taxes and who would be called upon to pay approximately £250,000 a year, faced with the obvious economic fact that to carry on would be to do so at an excessive loss, talked of ceasing operations altogether.

A press manifesto was issued by Mr. Griffiths pointing out the injustice and economic illogic of the new duties, affecting 90 per cent of all sections of the industry for whom he spoke.

For British producers the excise duty on film stock means an increased cost on each film of between £800 and £1,500. Captain Richard Norton expressed the independent producers' view, "We are simply out of business. . . . I regard this as the most devastating blow which the British film industry has ever had."

Exhibitors at once were alive to the dangers of the new tax, fearing not only increased rentals, but a shortage of product, a depreciation in the quality of films, a return to the shoddy quota picture, and the abolition of the newsreel.

GRIFFITHS KEYNOTES ATTACK ON BUDGET

At the annual meeting of the Kinematograph Renters' Society on Tuesday at which he was reelected president, D. E. Griffiths deplored the provisions of the new British budget which, he said, would impose new taxes of £750,000 on an industry providing material whence an annual entertainment tax of £6,000,000 is derived. He predicted that the new taxes would curtail production and importation of second features. The revenue derived from these, he said, does not permit any additional burden.

Later Mr. Griffiths said he would endeavor to gain exhibitor support to fight the taxes and that he would call a meeting of all trade sections to discuss methods.

Not least concerned were the English processing laboratories who foresaw an immediate decrease in business. The likelihood that the import tax would result in American companies making their own dupes, was at once obvious.

Labor, too, foresaw gloomy prospects, and petitioned the Chancellor to review the tax, burdening the independent producer and the laboratories, which they interpreted as meaning economies in the form of reduced staffs and reduced wages.

Heavy Burden for Americans

Upon the American shoulders, however, the new duties would seem to weigh most heavily, and it need not be surprising that they have not felt any channel unexplored, not even the diplomatic channels, to make their case clear. The 4,100,000 feet of film imported annually, both features and shorts, means, under the import tax, an increased expenditure of $125,000 dollars.

The excise duty, however, with its 100 per cent increase in the cost of film stock means they will pay out a minimum of $1,835,000 annually, against the $260,000 payable by British interests. The new quota act has compelled them to spend approximately $2,000,000 on production in this country which though, of course, there is a potential profit return on it, has meant increased circulation of money, and the keeping of some thousands in constant employment. The new duties impose a virtual tax upon them in return of $1,835,000 annually. This amounts to a dead loss.

The new tax is also an incentive not to import anything upon which profit is not forthcoming. From the exhibitor point of view then, the problem is likely to become more serious, in that it will mean the bringing in of films in the less ambitious category, the lessening of product and a depreciation technical quality.

The newsreel position is no less critical. The imposition of the new duties means that the newsreels would be called upon to pay duties far in excess of their combined profits. On an estimate that the five newsreel companies produce two copies a week with an average footage of 875 feet and an average total of 1,740 prints per week, an annual footage figure of 78,170,000 is arrived at. This means an increased production cost to the newsreels of £167,740.

Jack Alexander, chairman of the independents' committee of the London Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, has challenged the potential obstruction of the committee's functioning on the ground of alleged absence of a definition of the term independent. Mr. Alexander claims the constitutional appointment of the committee by the branch removes any further need for a definition. A dispute within the branch is foreshadowed.

The Films Council meets May 17 to consider and approve the report of the first year of the Films Act prior to its presentation to Parliament.

Production Loan Court Action Ends

The suit brought by the Westminster Bank against 15 British insurance companies in Kings Bench Division, London, over claims amounting to $5,000,000 arising from film production company loans in 1937 and 1938 was settled out of court unexpectedly on Monday. Terms were not disclosed. It was pointed out that the litigation would have gone through several courts and undoubtedly would have continued for several years.

As argument in the action began last week, Sir Stafford Cripps, acting for the bank, told the court the Capitol group of film companies to which a total of $7,500,000 was lent, was founded in 1935 to produce films under the direction of Max Schach, a German refugee. The chief companies concerned were Capitol Film Corporation, Cecil Films, Ltd., and Trafalgar Films, Ltd.

The bank was said to have made loans to the film companies, relying for security upon guarantee policies issued by marine underwriters for some share of the advance sought by the producers. The insurance companies named were Liverpool Marine and General, Century, Union Society of Canton, Northern, British General, British Oak, Indemnity Marine, London Assurance, General Accident Fire and Life, Switzerland General, Sea, Guildhall, Canton, Triton and Ralli Brothers. The bank's case was that the money was lent with the guarantees given for repayment by the insurance companies. The defendants said the policies were policies of insurance and the bank was obliged to tell them of all the facts relating to the film companies before they were issued.

Counsel for the bank explained that Glanvill Enthoven and Company, brokers who arranged the loan for the film companies, set up a trust company, of which the partners were directors in Glanvills, to take charge of all receipts from films for which advances had been made.

The insurance companies' refusal, at the beginning of 1938, to pay any more under the guarantee policies was based on the ground that the bank owed them a duty to supervise the accounts of the film companies and that it ought to have known of the various irregularities which took place and to have warned the underwriters of them.

The bank claimed that the underwriters were relying on themselves and that what the film companies did with the money advanced had nothing to do with the bank.

British Films in Canada

British features imported into Canada in 1938 totaled 35, approximately the same number as in 1937. The number of features from all countries was in excess of 400, with France second to the United States in the list of countries of origin.

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Here is a picture for any day of the week. Excellent with the baby stealing the entire show. It certainly wowed them in our house and we feel that it would have played the best days of the week for a short run. Excellent. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CITY STREETS: Edith Fellows, Leo Carrillo—Most folk seemed to enjoy sobbing through five and a half reels of this. Should be doubled with good comedy.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

LET US LIVE: Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Bellamy—Still wondering about this one. Went down at the box office. Nice weather, too. Saw a few women with handkerchiefs out. Should go good where they like sob stuff.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MAIN EVENT, THE: Robert Paige, Jacqueline Wells—Just a picture. Made for and played on double bill.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Margaret Lindsay—Came out a little short on this one due to rain. Entertaining but lacks the "zip" the first one of the series had. Enjoyed by those who saw it.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WEST OF SANTA FE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Played with "The Family Next Door." A double show to clean up the booking sheet. Both entertaining.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

First National

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, May Robson, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young—A clever little comedy but the print we had was cut a great deal from the one I had seen in a first run house the week before. Clever but nothing to rave about. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—A swell little comedy that drew quite a bit above average on an adults only showing. Nothing objectionable about the picture but the "no kids" angle will bring them in.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

Grand National

CIPHER BUREAU: Leon Ames, Joan Woodbury—A little involved but O.K. for double bill.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

LONG SHOT, THE: Gordon Jones, Marsha Hunt—One of the best we have ever had from this company. Not a big picture but plenty entertaining.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—This picture did not bring the patrons in and I am still searching for a reason it was such a flop. I have never seen Jeanette MacDonald better. She seems younger and still has a superb voice. The story was good. Frank Morgan as well as the whole supporting cast were excellent. Lew Ayres turned in a fine performance. Our patrons have always been enthusiastic about all Miss MacDonald's pictures and this one is her best to date. It is not the fault of the picture that we did not have the business but even with the business being slack at this time of year should not have made such a dent in our receipts. Maybe all the customers went fishing. It was such a nice spring day. I am mad that I didn't go, too. Running time, 113 minutes. Played April 23-24.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—MacDonald and Eddy together in their last color show was a flop, but this one holds the all time low house record. 43 people the opening day but only about 20 stuck it out. A long drawn out affair that will make you sore at yourself for playing it. Played April 27-28.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis Morgan, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey—Here is one that had mystery and plenty of thrills and had them sitting on the edge of their seats. Played this on a double bill but could have played it single. Played April 14-15.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Schildkraut, Charles Coburn—What an appropriate title, if you know what I mean, and if you played it you know what I mean. Couldn't even get them in on Bank Night. Why does Metro cast stars like this in such pictures with a non-saleable title. Glad it's over. Running time, 109 minutes. Played April 25-26.—E. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

KID FROM TEXAS, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice—We ran this picture on Saturday and had to turn on the cooling system to cool the theatre off. It is surefire entertainment on a Saturday date. It is not one of those impossible westerns and don't let the polo playing sequences fool you. It will please any day in the week to any audience classification. It is one continual laugh from start to finish. Play it and have that satisfied feeling. Dennis O'Keefe and Florence Rice make a swell team. Take our word for it. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 22.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Had them laughing one minute and the next they were in tears. They certainly liked Virginia Weidler.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Marian Martin, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—Beery in a cop and robber picture which failed to draw more than average business. Supporting cast very light. Played April 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Trown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day, Marian Martin—Beery, the man who never made a poor picture. Of course, he's good and the picture is good in any spot, large or small. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Walter Pidgeon, Alan Curtis—A very fine picture that failed to make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Virginia Bruce, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo—With all the stars supposedly under contract to Metro, there is no excuse for them turning out a picture like this. Migh be okay on the lower half of a double.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney—Here is a natural for a small town. A swell cast and everyone liked it. Played April 9-11.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer, Herman Bing—It's a pleasure to stand in the lobby after showing a picture like this. To me it's their best effort to date. Good color, beautiful music, and I believe our clients like this pair in a modern setting like this. Frank Morgan tops as usual, followed closely by Herman Bing. One of the finer pictures of the year. Running time, 108 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—After reading some of the reports on this one, I didn't look for much. While it didn't draw the younger ones, it sure did bring the older folks who hadn't been in a show for a long time. Beautifully done in color, and their singing was well received. Played April 19-20.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town patronage.

Paramount

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—If some of the pictures we have been getting lately have given you a headache, this good old fashioned tonic will cure it. Some of our patrons actually clapped when this was over. Bob Burns will drag them in, all sizes and ages, and you can easily guess this picture is made for small towns. I have seen Bob Burns with more wit, and the whole story is about mules, but even that don't dampen our ardor. Gladys George is excellent and somehow you can't help but be reminded of Will Rogers and Irene Rich. Don't be afraid of this on a weekend. Bob Burns has that rural technique that clicks and the battle to a finish between Bob's mule and his wife is entertainment plus. Hats off to Paramount for a square deal and a square meal on this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 20-21.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Don Ameche, Claudette Colbert, Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—Good farce which did average business. Played April 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—The first good show from Paramount in many weeks. Will do above average business and everyone was pleased. Okay for best days.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—The slogan is changing. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SUDDEN MONEY: Charlie Ruggles, Marjorie Rambeau, Billy Lee—Even if we are small town, our patrons have been around enough to know the score and you can't fool them very much. This picture is weak and so was our box office. The customers came out with neither a smile nor a frown. I guess they had to be speechless because we gave them this program on family night. The only smile I saw was from the preacher's daughter, and she didn't pay. Running time, 62 minutes. Played April 18-19.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

BILLY THE KID RETURNS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Smiley Burnette—Rogers fine. Business fair. Print poor.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

FEDERAL MAN HUNT: Robert Livingston, June Travis—Plot seemed obvious, unfolding itself ahead of each scene. Might do better in other locations.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING THOROUGHBREDS: Richard Byrd, Mary Carlisle, Robert Allen, George Hayes—Lost some sleep over this one. It was a shame, too, for "Windy" George Hayes did fine acting. Cast was weak for this section. Enjoyed by quite a few at that. Can't whine very loud, even though I did buy quite a few of the tickets.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

FORGED PASSPORT: Paul Kelly, Lyle Talbot, June Lang—Got the short end on this one. Criminal activities don't appeal here.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Very fine Autry production.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Business very good considering conditions. Picture not up to Autry standard but even the Reds don't win 'em all. Received a nice note from Autry regarding writeups in "What the Picture Did for Me," so at least one person is interested in what an exhibitor thinks of his product.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Noah Beery—This series is improving. Noah Beery helps the cast. Story and photography excellent. Direction improved.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Good picture; good business. Played April 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NIGHT HAWK, THE: Robert Livingston, June Travis, Robert Armstrong—Good action picture for double bill.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

RHYTHM OF THE SADDLE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Did above average Friday and Saturday business so am not complaining. Autry isn't so hot; it's "Frog" Millhouse they come to see. Besides, Rogers can sing, too.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

RIDERS OF THE BLACK HILLS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Ann Evers—Pleased as usual but had as poor a Friday and Saturday as when I played "Fighting Thoroughbreds."—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine—Another high priced box office flop. I've waited ever since "Snow White" for another hit picture from RKO but it looks like I am in for another long wait. There ought to be a law against it.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Played this very late but my audience, which was composed mostly of children, was well entertained. Thought that I would get more grownups out but they brought the children to the box office and left them to the staff. However, an outstanding entertainment. Played April 20.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

EVERYBODY'S BABY: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane—One or two more like this one and the Jones Family will be with the also rans. Too long to get going. A lot of walkouts on it. The poorest of the lot so far.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Wendy Barrie, Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce—Just a picture. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher, Sybil Jason—As with all the Temple pictures, this follows the set formula, the abused Shirley. Some addition was made, however, in the English dialect that was rife through the picture. Only normal business. The color was good. Little Sybil Jason shared the honors. In fact, she ran Shirley a very close second.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NEW REPORTERS ON FILMS SHOWN

New contributors this week to "What the Picture Did for Me" are Frank Slavik of the Alpine Theatre, Hundred, West Virginia, and E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Oklahoma.

Read the reports of these showmen in the department this issue.

MR. MOTO IN DANGER ISLAND: Peter Lorre, Jean Hersholt, Amanda Duff—We played this picture on cur family night to very favorable results. There is plenty of mystery and action and it moves along at a good pace. There is also enough comedy to spare the audience too gruesome an adventure. Ideal for midweek for those who like their mysteries in strong doses. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 11-12.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—We ran this very late and were agreeably surprised at the box office. So much has already been said about this picture but we found it very entertaining and the patrons were unanimous in their praises. The cast is very capable, the story different and the scenes constructing the canal, and subsequent storm, are magnificent. Running time, 104 minutes. Played April 13-14.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

GAIETY GIRLS, THE: Jack Hulbert, Patricia Ellis, Arthur Riscoe, Googie Withers—Save for the trade mark and a couple of stupid looking men this would have passed for one of the better Hollywood-made musicals.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray—Played this on Sunday-Monday with a neighboring town playing "Jesse James," and did a nice business on it. Would have had better gross had we played "Topper." Good draw and nicely done. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 23-24.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Universal

BACK STREET (reissue): John Boles, Irene Dunne—One of the finest pieces of acting we have had in some time.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer, Sandy Henville—A nice little programmer that was sold as a special and failed to do anything above average program business. "Paris Honeymoon" killed Crosby for me. The baby steals the show. Played April 30-May 1.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

FAMILY NEXT DOOR, THE: Hugh Herbert, Joy Hodges, Juanita Quigley, Eddie Quillan—Played with "West of Santa Fe." A double show to clean up the booking sheet. Both entertaining.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HIS EXCITING NIGHT: Charlie Ruggles, Ona Munson—Very fine comedy suitable for double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PIRATES OF THE SKIES: Kent Taylor, Rochelle Hudson—Paid its way by a small margin, which is doing pretty good around here just now. This is the off season in a cotton and wheat country. Dependent totally on agriculture here.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Josephine Hutchinson—Did pretty good at the box office. Pleased everybody except the ones who had seen "Frankenstein." Know of one girl that had a severe nightmare. Play it if you haven't run horror pictures.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING, SISTER, SWING: Ken Murray, Ernest Truex, Kathryn Kane, Johnny Downs, Ted Weems and His Orchestra—One for the swing fans. The jitterbug hounds will eat this up. Used it on a dual bill with "Hopalong Cassidy" and they liked it better than "Cassidy," who is always a favorite here. Ted Weems' Band a help in the billing.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Good in any spot. Not big but pleases all the way. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Constance Moore—Pleased everybody. Let's see more of "Mortimer," Bergen. Played second fiddle to "Son of Frankenstein" in attendance. Good enough for any house.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Tripled my advertising budget. People didn't come to the show for a week ahead of this picture nor a week after it. Did a land office business; gave them a Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and when I wound up I had exactly $23 profit. Just as soon I hadn't played this one. Played April 22-25.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Back to the old days of shoot 'em up westerns and how they eat up a really good one, and this has it. Cagney was right at home in this role. This house can not use the run of mill westerns but we welcome a picture such as this after some that stand still and get no place, all dialogue and then no tempo to carry them along. A relief to see a picture move along as this one.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—A picture we showed the best days of the week and made no mistake. It's Cagney all the way through, and what an actor this boy is. One of the best pictures he has made. We were afraid that the women would not go for it but were mistaken. Give Cagney a story and a camera and you will have a picture that pleases. Tops in any language. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ON TRIAL: John Litel, Margaret Lindsay—Good enough program picture which failed to draw. Played April 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Claude Rains, "Dead End Kids"—A very well done picture. Not a gangster as you would expect. "Dead End Kids" extra good. Better than many specials this year. Boost it and it will do business.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMEN IN THE WIND: Kay Francis, William Gargan, Victor Jory—This is an example of the old story. It is most times difficult to tell just what a picture will do. We were not so enthusiastic about booking this picture on weekend but it did an about face for us. We enjoyed above average business and our patrons had that look of satisfaction on their faces when they came out. The story is very ordinary and the cast is not outstanding but it has that certain something that pleases. This picture should please in any small town. Our patrons are still giving Kay Francis a break, even if Warner Brothers are not. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 16-17.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

CALLS WESTERN UNIT BENEFIT TO THEATRE

It may interest you to know that Tom Keene, in person, and his "Dude Ranch Jamboree," which has just finished an engagement here, broke all existing house records for attractions of this type. This performance is unusual due to the fact that the baseball season opened during his engagement, also there is a general drop in business in this section of the Carolinas at this particular time of the year.

Keene has a fast, entertaining show which to my estimation is the best western unit I have ever played and I have played several.

I am passing this information on to you for the express purpose of letting other exhibitors know what this show did for this theatre, which may be beneficial to them if they are playing this attraction or are contemplating playing it.

I have always thought that the exhibitors all over the United States would benefit at the boxoffice if they played definite proven hits. However, it is an impossibility for exhibitors to know about these shows unless the word is passed along by those who have played them..—JOHN YANDELL, Manager, Gem Theatre, Kannapolis, N. C.

SHOOTING FOR PAR: Ed Thorgersen—Entertaining sport reel on golf.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ETERNAL FIRE, THE: World Windows—Very fine. Appreciated by everyone.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PIXIE LAND: Oswald Cartoons—Fair.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SOUP TO MUTTS: Lantz Cartunes—Fair.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 57—Pleased.—E. A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 60—Very diversified, in fact, too much so, as there were too many subjects and it made the reel seem a trifle overdone. All in all very good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE LUCAS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Excellent with a capital "E." This and Ray Kinney have been the only two worth showing. Hope for some improvement in the balance. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MERLE KENDRICKS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—An excellent band act and outstanding.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY THE GOB: Looney Tunes—The best Looney Tune we have run this season. The music fitted nicely into the action and made a swell cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PROJECTION ROOM: Broadway Brevities—Average two-reel comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN COURTS

Blumenthal Wins Court Reversal

The appellate division of New York supreme court this week vacated an injunction which restrained Ben Blumenthal from prosecuting a suit for breach of contract against Paramount in England and upheld Mr. Blumenthal's right to start his action in an English court.

Mr. Blumenthal brought suit in England claiming breach of contract and sought remuneration for the sale of Paramount's British holdings. Paramount retaliated by a suit in New York supreme court to restrain the English suit and obtained an injunction on March 3rd.

Mr. Blumenthal claimed his witnesses resided in England and said he would call Oscar Deutsch, George Elcock and Major W. I. Anderson of Odeon Theatres; David Rose, Paramount's British chief; J. C. Graham, formerly with Paramount, and William Greve to testify in his behalf.

Reserve Pathe Decision In Stockholder's Suit

Samuel I. Rosenman, New York supreme court justice, has reserved decision on the application of Anna Bashlow, minority stockholder, for the right to inspect the books and records of Pathe Film Corporation. Named as respondents are the company, and its officers and directors.

Plaintiff contends that she is entitled to inspect the books to determine the value of her stock and to determine whether any acts of mismanagement have occurred. The defense pointed out that the same plaintiff brought suit to enjoin the 1938 plan for distribution of DuPont Film stock and that Justice Philip McCook denied the motion at that time. It was also claimed that full access to the books had been granted to the plaintiff.

"Lone Ranger" Suit Filed in Scranton

The Lone Ranger, Inc., of Detroit, has filed a $250,000 civil suit in federal court in Scranton, Pa., against Lee Powell, film actor; O. C. Cox, operating as Barnett Brothers Circus; the Macon Circus Equipment Company, and three individuals listed as "John Does." The circuses are listed as Georgia corporations.

The Lone Ranger company contends that it has spent more than a million dollars in promoting the copyrighted "Lone Ranger" title and has granted approximately 75 licenses for its use. It asks that the defendants be restrained from using the title "Lone Ranger" of the "Hi Yo, Silver!" call pending trial of the suit.

Columbia Gets Writ

Bernard L. Shientag, New York supreme court justice, has issued a temporary injunction, pending trial, which restrains International Road Shows, Inc., and "John" and Bert Goldberg from using the title "Escape from Devil's Island" for its picture previously called "Broken Melody." Columbia had filed suit, in which it applied for the injunction, claiming to have released a film of the same title in November, 1935, based on a story purchased from Fred DeGresac.

Zanuck Wins Ruling

Alfred Frankenthaler, New York supreme court justice, has denied the application of Stephen Tamas to examine Darryl Zanuck before trial in connection with a suit brought by him against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. The plaintiff claims he wrote a scenario, "Stowaway," at defendant's request which he claims was rejected, then plagiarized.

Order Sussman to Testify

Examination before trial of William Sussman, eastern division manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, which requires him to produce blueprints, plans, leases and inventory of films of the Twentieth Century-Fox film storage plant in Little Ferry, N. J., has been upheld by the appellate division of the New York supreme court. The order for the examination was issued by Justice Aaron J. Levy in connection with a $60,000 damage suit brought by Anna and George Greeves, individually and as administrators of the estate of John Greeves, charging the defendant with negligently causing a fire at the plant on July 9, 1937.

Dismiss Plagiarism Suit

Andreas F. Michael's $1,000,000 plagiarism suit against Twentieth Century-Fox, Eddie Cantor and other involving "Ali Baba Goes to Town" has been dismissed in superior court in Los Angeles. Judge Thomas Gould said he saw no similarity between the story Mr. Michael submitted and the film.

Edward J. Churchill, individually and as president of Donahue and Coe, Inc., has been ordered to testify before trial by Philip J. McCook, New York supreme court justice, on application of Edward J. Pfeiffer, who seeks $100,000 damage in a "Movie Quiz" suit.

OBITUARIES

Roy Seery Dies In Santa Monica

Roy C. Seery, 62, died May 6th at his home in Santa Monica, Cal., following an illness of two years. Mr. Seery was active in the film industry in Chicago beginning in 1918. He was among the principals in the formation of First National and manager for the company in Chicago and also was with the Mutual exchange in Chicago. MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

SO "THE TROUBLE IS", IS IT?

Bend an ear over a friendly bar, or look interested around the lunch table at the various spots where film men gather. Sooner or later, up pops some gent who broadcasts to the effect that the reason grosses are this way and that way has to do with the indifference of the man in the field to vital exploitation.

"The trouble is," opines the know-all guy, "there is no umph at the boxoffice. Instead of getting out and giving it that sockeroo, like the old days, today it's just going through the motions, and to hell with it."

So "the trouble is", is it? Well, this department is in no position to speak for every theatreman everywhere. Of course, there are situations where the boys yawn away the hours and do their thinking in a recumbent position. That cannot be avoided in any business and neither in this where every manager is not selected only for his ability. But your Chairman rears right up to answer for a sizeable number of theatremen who give every bit of their guts and heart to squeeze every last dime out of their attractions. And how well they do it is something for the industry to give thanks daily and twice on Sundays.

The only positive cross-section of nationwide showmanship is to be determined from the continuously flowing stream of exploitation reports, voluntary and uncolored, that come to this department—the clearing house of boxoffice ideas—from theatremen in every sector. Thus, as a direct answer to the know-alls, let's look at the morning's mail which can be said to be representative of that directed to this desk most any day of the working week.

For instance, from Charles H. Ryan, assistant zone manager, Warner Chicago Theatres, on behalf of Manager Ben Cohn, of the Frolic, on "Honolulu". Cohn arranged for some thousands of copies of the Honolulu Advertiser, leading Hawaiian Islands daily; had the papers shipped via Clipper plane, overprinted the front page and a few days ahead had Chicago newsboys hawking the papers near and far.

Another Chicagoan, Manager Benny Friedman, of the downtown United Artists, for "Wuthering Heights" promoted the evening American to replate page one, after the regular run, the entire page with banner heads and art given over to the Midwest premiere and distributed throughout the Loop section coincident with the opening of the picture. Friedman reports this is the first time in local history that a metropolitan paper had gone for any such promotion.

In Rochester, Loew-man Les Pollock tied in with the American Legion for a broadcast from the stage, over WSAY as an added attraction, of a dramatization based on the life of a local musician who gave his life for the cause. It was Legion Day at the theatre and latecomers hung from every light fixture.

In a much smaller spot—Sycamore, Ill.—Manager Stuart Tomber, of the Fargo, read in a neighboring town paper, not overfriendly to publicity, that nothing had been planned locally to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the inauguration of the country's first President. So Tomber booked the short, "Inside the White House", advised the critical columnist of the booking, and received a full-column writeup immediately ahead of the date that brought a harvest of extra admissions.

Other exploitations as striking will be detailed in due course in these pages, but the reports here outlined—the first picked off the top of the pile, incidentally—will serve as potent examples of the day-in-and-day-out activities of theatremen who stand on their feet and think with their heads.

The trouble is with the showman? Not so from this seat in the grandstand, nor from any other industry location where the situation is to be studied with non-jaundiced eye. The trouble lies, as always, in the laps of those who refuse to concede the crying need of showmanship to plug the hole of boxoffice indifference through which millions of dollars in grosses are callously allowed to escape.

Round Table In Pictures

Shown at right is one of the many windows secured by Warner Bros. in advance of the world premiere of "Juarez" at the New York Hollywood. In this display were copies of jewelry used in the film and the original gown worn by Bette Davis. Numerous other windows were planted, including book tie-ups, saddlery, silverware, etc., etc.

In keeping with the unusual type of operation announced by the new Telepix Cinema, Boston's latest newsreel theatre, is the different lobby poster here reproduced reported by Sid Solomon, who is handling the theatre publicity for Irving Isaacs, owner.

An American miracle of achievement.

To stress the evolution of the telephone, Bob Ungerfeld at RKO Proctor's in Newark, N. J., for "Alexander Graham Bell" built the giant setpiece above consisting of actual reproductions of the original photographs taken at the time telephonic history was being made, dating from 1876 to the present. . . . A 14-foot pylon with an automatic neon beacon flasher was mounted atop the marquee of the Regent Theatre, in Rochester, recently, by Art Krolich to sell "Tailspin." Display could be seen from either direction at a distance of 500 feet.

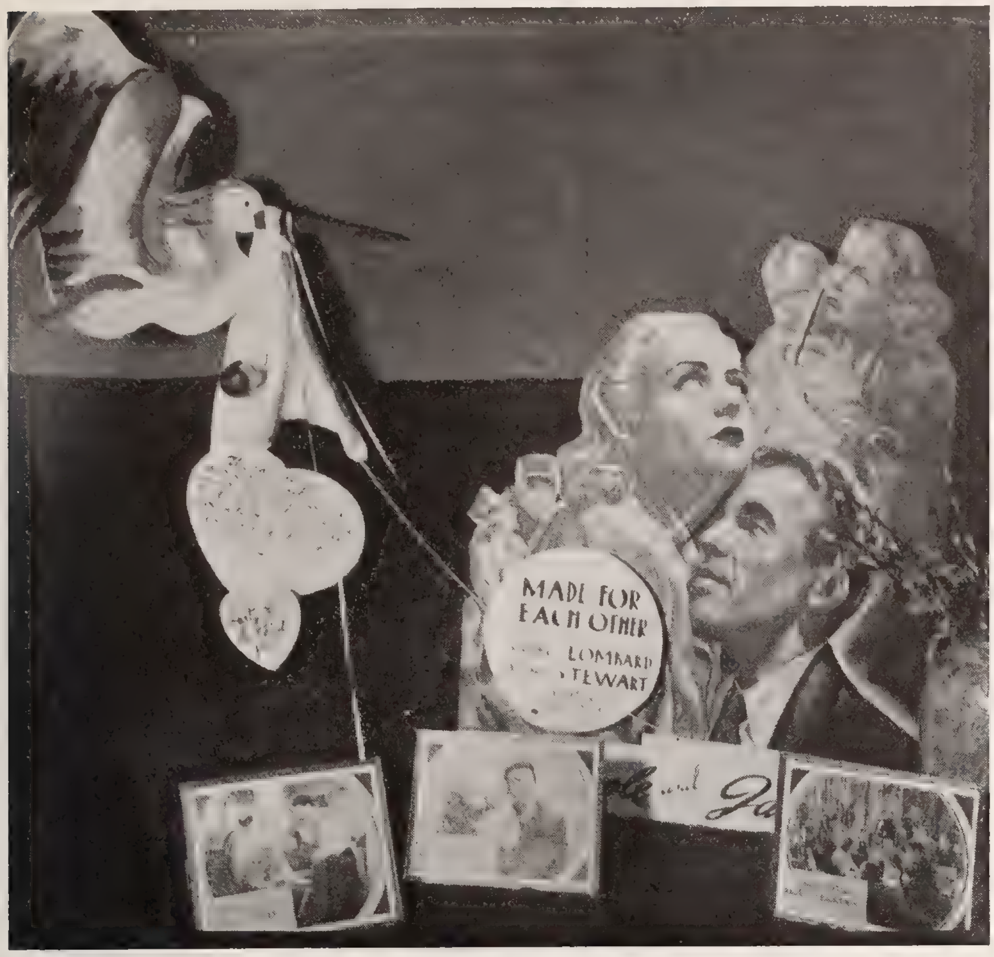
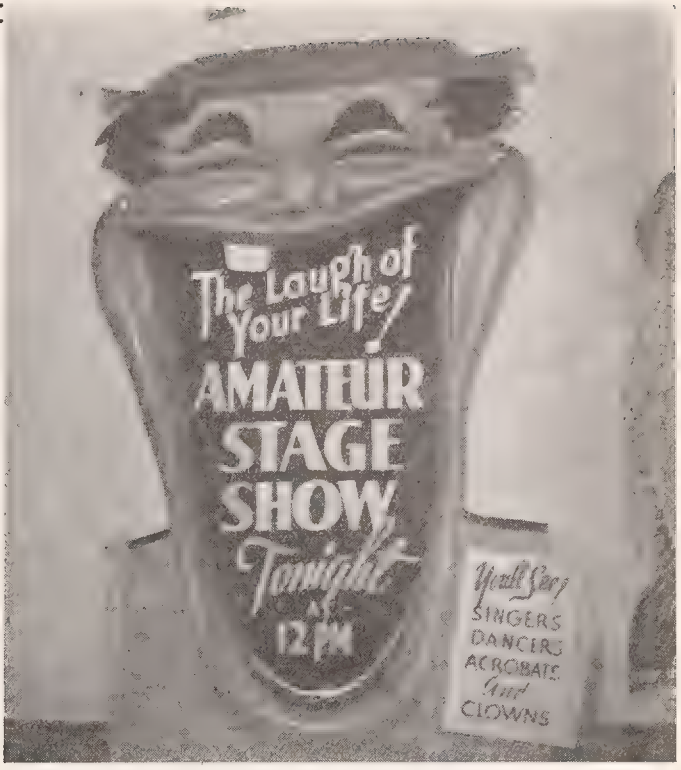
also "TORCHY in CHINATOWN"





Lobby setpiece conceived by B. V. Samuels, advertising manager of the Midwest Theatres in Detroit, is reproduced above. While the display in this instance was used to sell an amateur stage show, copy is changed from time to time to sell pictures with a comedy angle.

At a total cost of 75 cents the above "Made For Each Other" display was constructed by Harold Cohen, Embassy Theatre, in Lewiston, Pa. The figures depicted in the background were cut out from a three-sheet and mounted on beaverboard. Stork was cut out of board painted in whites and grays, diaper with doll was purchased in five and ten, and copy in heart form plugged the cast, title, playdates, etc. Scene stills were stationed at base of display.

Large star head cutouts were planted in front of the Civic Theatre, in Wellston, Ohio, by Manager John Brown in advance of "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." Also standing out front are two sets of the "three smart girls," children of local prominent families, who were entrants in the exploitation contest run in local newspaper in connection with the engagement.

Promoted from the local Vocational School was use of their Officers' Cadet uniforms in which J. J. La Fave dressed his ushers for the opening of "Gunga Din" at the F-P Tivoli Theatre, in Walkerville, Ontario. The African hats were purchased from five and ten, house artist painting title across the front. Promoted also for the occasion were boots worn by the boys, which were secured from a nearby riding academy. Further publicity was gained by the contingent parading streets opening day.

Round Tabler, Glenn Franke, of Cheviot, Ohio, introduces a few of his characters in the new strip having to do with the activities of the fictitious Drofilm Theatre in the non-existent town of Beelerville. At the desk is OSCAR OLIVER, the demon operator, and in the door MARQUEE MIKE, the manager. Other characters will be introduced by Franke in succeeding issues. (Characters portrayed in this series are fictional. Any similarity to actual persons living or dead is purely co-incidental.)

University Co-Eds Aid On "Girls in White"

Through the cooperation rendered by four co-eds of the University of Georgia and a local ambulance company, Moon Corker, at the Georgia Theatre, in Athens dressed the girls in white nurse's uniform, each carrying a portable weekend bag with "Four Girls in White" imprint and had them drive about town.

As ambulance with siren sounding stopped at all street corners and large department stores, girls alighted and distributed calling cards engraved with appropriate copy bearing the names of the four girls in the picture. Stunt was also pulled twice on the University campus at break of classes. Girls were given passes for their cooperation. Corker credits P. E. McCoy, theatre publicist, who aided on the campaign.

"COME AND SEE US"

Special Breakfast Matinee Staged for 'Prison Without Bars'

Tying in with leading hotel next door to Loew's Stillman, in Cleveland, Manager Jack Lykes promoted coffee and doughnuts to be served to the early birds in de luxe fashion at no cost to theatre for "Prison Without Bars." Hotel in exchange received mention in the ads and stories, all three local papers running special accounts of the stunt.

Other activities in connection with this picture were an orchid display in lobby through arrangement effected with leading florists week in advance, tiein copy reading, "Orchids to Corinne Luchaire on her sensational American debut," etc., etc. Another tieup made with nearby beauty parlor brought imprinted fans used by manicurists to dry liquid nail polish on customers. Letters were mailed to heads of social and welfare organizations and 5,000 large sensational heralds distributed house-to-house and in downtown office buildings.

"COME AND SEE US"

Giant Cake Sale Promoted by Moyer

A tieup which ran for five weeks and brought him daily advertising was arranged by Charlie Moyer, Warner's State, Hanover, Pa., with local five and ten. Giant cake sale was arranged by the store which plugged the fact that a certain number of packages of cakes each day would contain passes to the theatre. Coupons stressing the sale were handed out to each customer by every employee, window displays were given over to the stunt and advertised in local dailies.

Having but three days advance notice of a spot booking of Adrienne, well-known mind-reader, Moyer personally promoted a full co-op ad page with banner across top tying in clairvoyant's predictions on spring styles.

Conner Supervises First Community Style, Model Show

For the two-day, Friday and Saturday, style and modeling contest, the first of its kind put on in his community by Marlowe Conner at Warners' Rhodes in the 79th Street section of Chicago, cooperation of 12 local merchants was secured. These included two local department stores, two dress shops, two milliners, two shoe stores, a furrier, a florist, a beauty shop and a jeweler, merchants contributing all necessary apparel and advertising the show heavily in exchange for which they were given lobby and screen mention.

Girls were recruited from the neighborhood via screen and local paper. About 50 girls were registered, from which a committee selected the final 10 girls to do the modeling and compete for the cash prizes. Girls were also given free training for a week by a modeling school instructor.

Conner Announces Commercials

Noted beautician and stylist on local radio program was hired by the merchants to do the commentating; this brought daily plugs on the program for a week in advance. A runway was built from stage down center aisle, girls made four appearances each time in different costume with stylist giving description of the gowns and Conner doing the commercial announcements. In between appearances of girls, local singers, paid off in passes, were presented. To build further interest, door prizes were given to the audience on each night, via the drawing method.

The modeling contest was held on the last night, girls judged by popular applause and winners presented with cash prizes put up by the merchants.

"Baby Dumpling" Contest

Capital district fathers and mothers responded eagerly to the "Baby Dumpling" contest conducted by Larry Cowan, manager of Fabian's Grand, in Albany, N. Y., in connection with "Blondie Meets the Boss." Parents were requested to send a picture of their male children under five years to the theatre. Cash prize was awarded to winner, with local "name" officials acting as judges. Newspaper tiein with the Times-Union, which carried the "Blondie" comic strip, cooperated with abundant publicity on the stunt.

Distributes "Missouri" Pipes

Week ahead of opening of "I'm From Missouri," Joe Hewitt, Lincoln Theatre, in Robinson, Ill., dressed two young girls in hillbilly outfits, overalls, straw hats, and title imprinted bandannas and set them to work covering main streets contacting all male patrons asking them if they smoked a pipe. Those who did, received a genuine Missouri Meerschaum (corncob), each containing label with star name, title, playdates, etc.

Ohio School Bands Compete for Baton Offered by Bannan

Since school bands in the rural schools, around Van Wert, Ohio, are very popular, George Bannan used this angle recently for a novel stage presentation at Schine's Van Wert, in the form of a competition for the drum majors of the various musical organizations. The competition devised to draw entrants from all schools favoring this activity brought a strong list of contestants.

Bannan started off by writing heads of the music departments of all the schools and followed it up with a personal visit to further explain the idea in detail and how the contest was to be handled. Announcements were made at the schools and heralds distributed in all situations. Local and county papers built up further interest with publicity on the event. First prize was an expensive baton donated by local music company which was further advertised by an eight-foot lobby cutout of a drum major holding the prize.

Concert Held Out Front

Each contestant worked four-minute periods on the stage facing the audience. The local high school band served for all entrants in the orchestra pit, parading to the theatre before the competition to give a half-hour concert before entering the house.

Judges included the heads of the music departments of the county schools and rated individual entrants as follows: 1. Start band playing. 2. Beating time while strutting. 3. Stop band playing. 4. Salute. 5. Voluntary exhibition.

The contest proved to be highly successful, the entire cost to Bannan being total of $6.50 for the heralds.

Lamm Promotes Music Lessons

Cooperation of the local Wurlitzer Company was secured by Julius Lamm, of Warners' Uptown Theatre, Cleveland, for his opening of "Honolulu." Store built a lobby setpiece and printed tickets used in connection with a giveaway of a steel guitar and 20 lessons through the medium of a lucky number contest. For lobby, Hawaiian music was played by students of the Wurlitzer School of Music at the break of each show. Stunt was advertised widely throughout store and in their advertising in addition to breaks in the theatre's programs, ads and trailer.

"COME AND SEE US"

Wide Coverage Secured on "Adventures of Jane Arden"

Local Ward's Bread distributed cooperated with Andy Roy, Strand, Albany, N. Y., by bannering complete fleet of trucks with picture tiein copy on "The Adventures of Jane Arden." In addition, 10,000 heralds were distributed by the Ward salesmen for wrapping with various products and special announcements were made over radio broadcast. Numerous displays were planted on counters and in windows of stores which included scene stills from the picture.

Elaborate Entertainment Program Arranged for "Grand Awards" Week

Arrangements are now completed for the welcome and entertainment of the 1938 Quigley Grand Awards winners, John Burhorn and George Limerick, due in New York on Monday for a week's stay as guests of Motion Picture Herald. Acceptances to the luncheon to be given by Martin Quigley at the Hotel Astor on May 16 in honor of the visiting theatremen indicate a record turnout of industry heads to witness the presentation of the Silver "Grand" and the Bronze "Grand" by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Invitations have also been extended to Governors Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma, Henry Horner of Illinois, United States Senators from Oklahoma Josh Lee and Elmer Thomas, and from Illinois Senators Scott W. Lucas and James M. Slattery. Among the speakers will be Spyros P. Skouras, president of National Theatres.

Other events in honor of the winners include a special meeting of the A.M.P.A. at the Astor, on Thursday, May 18. In addition, those who will entertain the visitors at theatre and night club parties, private luncheons, ball games and sightseeing trips, visits to the World's Fair, are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO Radio, Universal, Altec Service Co., United Artists, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, Republic, National Screen Service, among others. Also listed is a backstage tour of the Radio City Music Hall, as guests of W. G. Van Schmus, managing director.

"Sweetheart" Folders

Ingenious three by four folder was distributed by Russ Bovim, Loew's Ohio, Columbus, in advance of "Sweethearts." Cover bore copy to the effect that the following pages would show how sweethearts through the ages made love. Inside spreads carried caricatured cartoons of Adam and Eve; the caveman era; Launcelot and Elaine; Romeo and Juliet; John Smith and Pocahontas and winding up with Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy as they appeared in the picture. Under each cartoon was gag copy.

"Oklahoma Kid" Hunt Staged by Harwell

Canton, Ohio, was the scene of a merry chase recently when Bill Harwell, manager of Warners' Ohio, announced that he would have a man on the streets resembling James Cagney who would distribute guest tickets to "Oklahoma Kid." To the first 25 sleuths recognizing the cowboy the tickets were awarded. Stories ran in papers giving description of the man and informing readers what he would wear. Only requirements was that winners approach the Cagney double and ask him if he was the "Oklahoma Kid."

On "Wings of the Navy," theatreman dressed his entire staff in imprinted aviation caps, and through cooperation of Naval Recruiting officer, two one-sheet boards were stationed in post office week in advance and during run of picture with appropriate tiein copy.

Penn Celebrates Boy Scout Week

By wholeheartedly getting behind the recent Boy Scout Week, in Santa Barbara, Ed Penn, at the Fox Arlington, turned the event into a goodwill campaign for the theatre. 14 troops were given the forecourt of the theatre, where they erected very attractive displays showing Scout-craft. All local Scouts paraded to the theatre on Saturday morning, held a rally and attended the matinee, boys also furnished a cowboy orchestra which played for two hours in front of theatre each night.

For week ahead of "Stagecoach" opening, entire staff was attired in costumes of that era, old stage coach was promoted for display in theatre forecourt where it attracted considerable attention and numerous windows carried picture copy. "Thanks for Everything" brought a co-op ad page, guest tickets going to the 10 best entries on what each thought the average man would say about each merchant's merchandise.

MORE AWARDS ENTRIES

In addition to the entries detailed in last week's issue of theatremen who were awarded Fortnighter Appointments in the first premliminary of the Second Quarter, the following are further accounts of what other Fortnighters did to catch the eyes of the judges.

"Story of The Empty Window" As Presented by Burhorn

With his eye on an empty department store window located in a busy shopping district, John Burhorn, Gayety Theatre, in South Chicago, persuaded the landlord to allow him to "look after" the empty building in exchange for permanent and active window displays. In advance of his showing of "The Spider's Web," theatremen promoted 1,000 copies of the Spider Magazine and planted these in the window with tiein copy to pep up interest in the serial.

For "I Was a Convict," with some paint and at little expense, Burhorn converted the window into a powerful and effective seat-selling medium through use of cell scene with lad dressed in convict's uniform supplying the animation. It is the theatreman's contention that an empty store window can be used to good advantage week after week and that the landlord would rather have his empty store attract attention than have it appear neglected and forgotten.

Unique Syracuse Newspaper Contest Planted by Lampe for "Castles"

Readers who could locate copies of sheet music of pre-war tunes danced to by the Castles during the hey-day of the team's popularity were given an opportunity to win cash and tickets to the date at Keith's Syracuse, on a tiein with the local Journal, engineered by Gus Lampe, Schine's city manager, and Manager Harry Unterfort. Contest ran four days and the prizes went to entrants who brought to the theatre the greatest number of these old songs, entire list of which was run by the paper for the benefit of contestants. Publicity was widespread and heightened with scene cuts from the picture.

For outside bally, a 1909 Hupmobile, bannered with picture copy, was run around town and parked at busy intersections. In addition the car followed behind the runners in a popular annual Marathon which attracted crowds lined up to see the race. Second bally, was a girl costumed as the "Yama Yama Girl," in the picture, carrying back-banner around the downtown streets, in stores, etc.

Loewmen Tie Bowie Racetrack To Opening of "Wuthering Heights"

Learning that Billy Saxton had arranged a "Wuthering Heights" handicap at nearby Bowie race track for the Baltimore showing of that film, Ray Bell ahead of the opening at Loew's Capitol in Washington, tied in by taking local newspapermen and sports editors to the track to interview Lawrence Olivier, who came over from Baltimore, where he was appearing with Katherine Cornell in a show. Interview netted the showman four page one breaks.

Also reported by Bell, is stunt arranged by his assistant, Ed Gidley, as advance building for Fred Waring's personal appearance at Loew's Capitol. Contacting local merchant, Gidley sold him on the idea of numerous plugs for the band leader on the store's weekly radio quiz program. In addition, Ed promoted nine cooperative ad pages, four excellent window displays in leading merchant's windows and three radio plugs.

Real Airplane Assembled at Garage To Exploit "Wings of the Navy"

Stunt which created plenty of excitement in Gallup, New Mexico, was arranged by Johnny Sanders for "Wings of the Navy" at the Chief when the theatreman arranged to have a real airplane assembled at a garage about six blocks distant from the theatre and then towed through the streets for display in front of house. Owner of plane supervised placing of the craft which was planted nose down with tail sticking over top of marquee.

With no airport in Gallup, this was a rare treat for the townsfolk, who followed the towing of the ship to theatre and stayed to watch the doings. Newspapers were generous with stories and art.

First-Time Club Endorsement Given Martin for "Pygmalion"

Counted as a distinct accomplishment for his "Pygmalion" date at the Colfax, South Bend, Ind., was a personal endorsement on the picture secured by Guy Martin, from the president of leading women's club. It was a first-time, Martin reports, that such endorsement has been obtained locally and to make it stronger, the president was prevailed upon to address signed letters to the membership on the club letterhead, in support of the date.

Featured in Guy's newspaper campaign was a one-column type ad, headed "Getting Personal," and signed by the theatreman. Copy led off with "pull up a chair, movie fans, and we'll tell you about that picture," etc. Rest of the display gave the low-down on the picture, all done in a casual, adjective-less manner, which proved highly effective.

Lamoureux Sells Theatre Personnel With Series in Local Column

Keeping in mind the value of the institutional publicity as concerns the operation of his theatre, Ed Lamoureux recently promoted leading local columnist to run a series of stories on the modus operandi of the personnel of the Empire Theatre, in Windsor, Ontario. Series proved to be widely read, since the stories appeared in the city's most popular newspaper column. The idea was thought well of by the Famous Players' home office to adopt the feature for recent publication in McLeans, Canadian national magazine.

(1) Since the second day of his "Oklahoma Kid" date was up against strong local opposition, the National Orange Show, Manager John Robinson, Warners' Ritz, San Bernardino, Cal., elected to employ this novel 85 lines on two columns, instead of the usual small after-opening display. Result at the box-office far surpassed expectations, he reports.

(2) To get away from the usual hold-over copy, the showmanship backfield of Shuttee-Patchen-Harold, Standard Theatres, Oklahoma City, used this approach for the second week of "Honolulu" at the Tower. Ad held up since the endorsement was the "mccoy" with letter containing plug for the hold-over on the date.

(3) The Fort Wayne, Ind., Journal-Gazette found occasion editorially to praise the industry, which pat-on-the back was seized upon immediately by Harvey Cocks, general manager, Quimby Theatres, for this smart 125 lines on three columns, in the following Sunday's issue. Ad tied in the editorial to the attractions at the four local theatres of the circuit.

(4-7) The four small one-columns here reproduced are some of those used for the extended run of "Lady Vanishes" at the Little, Baltimore, by Manager Maxwell Weinberg, and offered as an example of what can be done when a small ad budget demands compact copy that pulls. To be noted is that none of the displays in the entire campaign ran over 45 lines on one column.

(8) Realizing that "Pygmalion" was the type of attraction best sold by telling the folks all about it, Guy Martin executed this effective version of a "fireside chat" in which readers were invited to pull up a chair and give ear. The 160 lines on one column said all there was to say about the date at the Colfax, South Bend, Ind.

(9) Whether or not St. Paulites were familiar with the term "cafe society," they were well informed as a result of this 135 lines on five columns, by Don Alexander, ad manager of the Paramount, in the Minnesota metropolis. Patron comment cards from the audience at the preview were reproduced for the foundation of the display for good returns.

(10) Another spectacular from Charlie Pincus to introduce his date on "Union Pacific" at the Centre, Salt Lake, carried hand-drawn art in the wood-cut technic found effective by the Utah Round Tabler. Reverses were used liberally to sell both story and spectacle in this 140 lines on four columns.

PYGMALION

OPENING AT THE COLFAX THEATER ON SATURDAY

● PYGMALION is a strictly down-to-earth, modern romantic comedy, yet it is as different from the average picture of its type as day is from night. Bernard Shaw, who wrote the original play, also adapted it for the screen. He watched it; he supervised it; he nursed it; he O. K.'d it and when he had finished he knew it was good. In fact, when he was notified that it had been awarded the Motion picture Academy Award for the best written picture of the year he became very indignant and retorted that they didn't have to tell him that—he already knew it.

● YOU'LL LAUGH at its wit — you'll work up emotion over the way Shaw's hero manhandles Shaw's heroine You'll agree with the millions who have already seen it in New York, Los Angeles and in Chicago where it just completed an 8-week run at the Apollo theater, that it is smart stuff.

● Leslie Howard stars as Henry Higgins who knows all about languages and nothing about women (he hates them, he thinks). Wendy Hiller, a newcomer and a sensational discovery, plays Eliza Doolittle, the guttersnipe who is molded into a duchess under the guidance of Howard. The rest of the cast is equally distinguished.

● We feel confident that you will acclaim PYGMALION, as did 8 out of 9 New York Critics, "one of the year's ten best pictures."

"AND IN ADDITION"

Spencer and Bishop Score With Advance on "Pygmalion"

To secure the general public's interest in "Pygmalion" at the Capitol, in Hamilton, Ontario, Manager C. T. Spencer concentrated on the comedy angle of the picture in all ads and theatre displays, in addition to prominent mention of Shaw and the stars to secure interest of the intelligentsia. First newspaper announcement was made two weeks ahead with special stories planted in both local papers on the socially prominent persons making up parties to attend the formal opening. Ad campaign opened with teaser cartoons, on Shaw, switching on opening day from Shaw to the glamour girl angle.

While, in Winnipeg, Hal Bishop at the Capitol, for the same picture highlighted his campaign with a lobby broadcast immediately following the reserved seat preview. Patrons were interviewed as they left the theatre. Spot announcements were carried over both radio stations to stimulate advance boxoffice sale and a scene from the picture was enacted by local amateur dramatic club over CJRC with mention also on CKY's Dr. Query program.

Robot Promoted by Charninsky Sells "Peck's Bad Boy at the Circus"

Secured by Louie Charninsky, of the Capitol, Dallas, Texas, in advance of opening of "Peck's Bad Boy at the Circus" was a radio-controlled robot from a local engineering school which the theatreman reports to be the best crowd-stopper ever used at that house. In fact, it was so good that the theatreman was able only to use the man for a few minutes at a time to avoid street congestion. Man who was tagged "Clanko" gave a spiel on the picture.

Entire lobby was transformed into a circus with entire staff dressed in costume and doorman seated on stool from which he ballyhooed. Elephant secured from nearby circus was properly bannered and paraded through main streets, while front of house was gaily decorated with colored pennants, circus posters, etc.

Small Ads on Different Pages Used by Wise for Ben Blue Date

Since Ben Blue has acquired added draw through his roles in pictures, for the comic's personal appearance at the RKO Colonial, in Dayton, Ohio, a series of two-inch reverse ads were planted on different pages tied to his film background. Small face cut in the three local papers to call attention to the comic was used in each of the displays immediately below a different line of copy referring to the pictures played in.

The ads all appeared on one day, two days ahead of opening, reports Nathan Wise, Dayton RKO publicity director, who handled the assignment. Sixteen were placed in each of the two afternoon dailies and eight in the morning paper, so that the date was sold to readers, no matter what page they were reading.

"Princess for a Day" Contest Promoted by Wright in Syracuse

All the angles of the "Princess for a Day" search put on in connection with the Shirley Temple picture were covered by Erle Wright at the Paramount, in Syracuse in a tiein with the local Herald, which cooperated generally for a week ahead. Department store outfitted girl from head to foot, hotel suite was promoted with a luncheon for the winner with six of her playmates. Children were driven about town in an open bannered car and then taken to the theatre to witness the film. Dramatic, managing and city editors of the local papers were each mailed "Little Princess" birthday cakes with cards enclosed signed by the starlet and Wright. This stunt brought additional publicity for the date with each of the papers playing up the engagement.

Shaffer Sells "Pygmalion" to Patrons Through Novel Newspaper Contest

To familiarize the folks of Staunton, Va., with the title "Pygmalion," to open at Warners' Dixie, Manager Frank Shaffer planted a contest in the News-Leader nine days ahead. Teaser box was run daily instructing readers to turn to the society page where at top of page a single letter would be found. Entrants were then requested to save the nine issues and correctly assemble initials until they spelled the title and forward set to Contest Editor. Guest tickets were awarded to winners.

Mechanical Man in Window Used By Harwell on "Blackwell's"

Executed on behalf of "Blackwell's Island" at the Ohio, Canton, Ohio, was action display created by Manager Bill Harwell in advance of opening. Stationed in vacant store window on the main street was typical cell block designed from strips of black crepe paper in which was seated a mechanical man. Bill further arranged for the robot while performing his gyrations to exhibit numerous 11 by 14 cards made up with selling copy on the picture. Gag proved to be one of the best attention-getters used by the theatreman in some time and comment from the innocent bystanders confirmed his opinion.

Johnson's "Banner Week" Drive Holds Grosses During Mid-Lent

Having booked a strong list of pictures to contend with the mid-Lent period, Bill Johnson sold his attractions at the Opera House, Millinocket, Maine, as a "Banner Week," plugged widely with a series of heralds and street stunts. With no newspaper published within a radius of 90 miles, Bill endeavored to reach all families with a flyer of some kind on each change of show. Local grocers stuffed outgoing packages with door cards for the convenience of patrons who wished to leave a note on their doors stating they had gone to the movies. Entire lobby was decorated with banners featuring the week's attraction.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

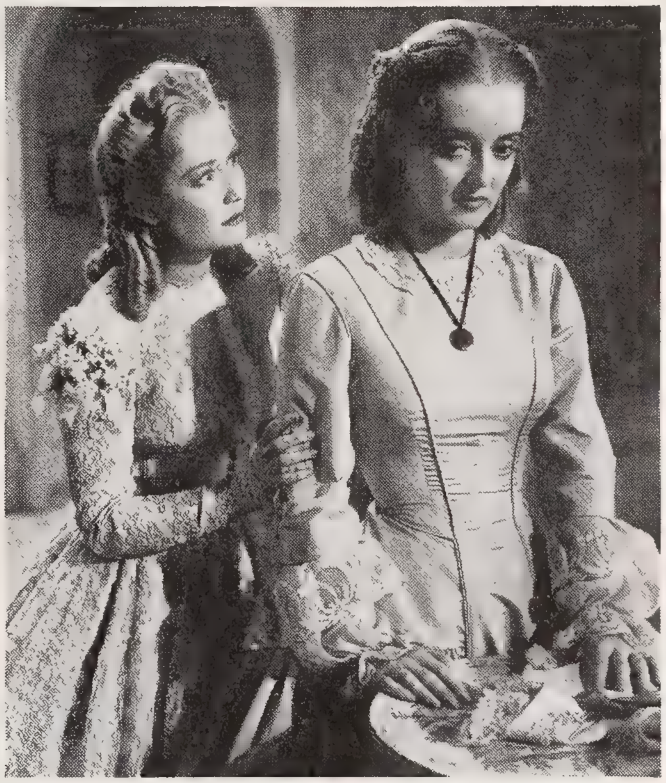
DECORATION DAY DEBUT of Paul Muni and Bette Davis in 'Juarez' will be accompanied by year's top magazine and newspaper advertising coverage!*



PULITZER PRIZE PLAY becomes next Warner vehicle for Bette Davis. Also far-famed as a novel, 'The Old Maid' brilliantly co-stars Miriam Hopkins.

THE KISS FROM 'KOKOMO'. Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell and May Robson discreetly disappear while 'Brother Rat' Wayne Morris goes amorous and Jane Wyman goes glamorous (both below) in 'The Kid From Kokomo', new Warner comedy sensation.

DIRECTION BY MICHAEL CURTIZ, elaborate filming by Warner studio and sincere performances of Claude Rains, Gale Sondergaard, Donald Crisp, Montagu Love result in trade press hailing Vitaphone's 'Sons of Liberty' (in Technicolor) 'finest of all short films.' (left)

"We seldom commit ourselves, but..."

"VOLUNTARY CHAIN"

THE project which seeks the auspices of the Allied States Association for the formation of a buying-and-booking combination representing some 2,500 theatres may be either a political or a commercial fact, or both. In any event it contributes a dash of action and excitement to the recently rather tedious aspect of the issues between the majors and the independents.

Twenty-five hundred is a lot of theatres, showing that the independents can be colossal too if they want to, and can get together.

One is to be reminded that booking combines have often in the past been a way to power—and commonly to ultimate mergers or other form of benevolent assimilation. The news pages of the Herald last week mentioned the rise of Mr. Stephen Lynch and his theatre combine which went ultimately into Paramount's structure. And there was, and is, the Stanley circuit, drawn at long last into Warner Brothers. Mr. Sam Katz rose to power and dominion by a Chicago booking combine, acquiring the strength of competitors and neighbors, and that went into Paramount, too.

The Stanley circuit was, if you have a moment for history, born of the nucleus of the Lubin theatres, of which Mr. Sigmund Lubin was required to divest himself when he became a producer member of the Patents Company group. It was the notion of the late Jeremiah J. Kennedy that the picture makers should not, at that time, compete with the exhibitor customers. It is true enough incidentally, that he did have, not only an idea about distribution—which became the General Film Company—but also one about exhibition. And that never came to flower because of government suits, among other things.

The pattern of development is familiar, too, in other fields. In the retail grocery trade there has for some years been visible the rise of buying coalitions to give competition to the chain stores with "voluntary chains."

The final problem involved in these inevitable trends toward consolidations is the maintaining of the local institutionality of the theatre, the showmanship of the local administration—the continuance always of that part of the show that can not be shipped, either in the film can or the press book. In the case of Paramount, the movement has been seen in full cycle, with the semi-disintegration of the Publix chain into the array of Paramount partnerships, each of which is in turn in no small degree made up of what amounts to sub-partnerships in the autonomous nature of the more successful theatre managements.

RELEASE from CARE

IN the wake of the high wave of shouted contentions, mostly external, that the motion picture must get acutely socially conscious and excited over causes, comes now a marked flow of expression in behalf of what the motion picture is about—entertainment.

Over in London the other day, writing in the Observer, Miss C. A. Lejeune, assuredly no die-hard conservative or reactionary, says: ". . . any widespread attempt to combine pictures with politics would be exceedingly unpopular in this country, and both dangerous and unprofitable in the long run. . . ."

Miss Lejeune speaks for: ". . . more honest comedy and even a reversion to romance and sentiment. Ronald Colman, for instance, in 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' Deanna Durbin and Basil Rathbone in 'Trilby,' and either a revival or a remake of 'Smilin' Thru.' "

And from Columbia Pictures Corporation's Chicago convention speaks Mr. Jack Cohn, saying: "The world looks today, as never before, for release from care and for entertainment. Where one person may go to the theatre hoping for the strong meat of controversy, hundreds go for lighter but no less important fare."

COMPETITION for the screen, as has been remarked often enough on this page, has been steadily, continuously increasing ever since Mr. Henry Ford brought out a car to take the customers past the scenery, which previously was taken past the customers on the screen—as exemplified by Hales Tours and Scenes of the World. Since have come cabaret, roadhouse, public dancing, rotogravure, better cheap magazines, golf, bridge, radio, the cocktail custom, organized and syndicated gossip, motor trailers, lotteries, cruises by land and sea, penny-ante stock speculation, installment selling of luxury gadgets, cultured-pearls, merry-go-round economics, and a Federal Theatre. All in all, it is a miracle that the industry of the motion picture has done so well as it has in maintaining call upon mass attention. It was born as almost the only important mass entertainment and has come into a period where it is but one of many appeals for the customer entertainment dollar.

Now important is the fact that something like an equilibrium of status has been reached by the motion picture among the media of emotional satisfaction, and that from this time on the job is giving the audience, no longer miracle or wonderment, but rather its competitive money's worth of emotional reaction—entertainment.

The ill-fated experiment of the campaign entitled "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" punctuated the end of the movie "institutional" era. The possession of the medium of the screen assures nothing. The decision is on the entertainment value of the individual picture and its merchandising. Once every motion picture was a show, always entertainment, now it depends on what motion picture it is. It may be the most entertaining thing in town, or it might be more fun to do a lot of other things.

BECAUSE men outlive their periods and carry over memories of success patterns of other days, the motion picture industry is still beset on its margins by hopes and promises of miracle. Miracles are not to come again on the screen. It has had its share. We have now seen enough of color to know that no perfection of color to come would make a vast, or any, difference at the box office. The stereoscopic picture has long been a fact, using several systems, and it is a trifling gadget of occasional novelty exploitation. We saw the amus-

Showmanship Honored

The tools of selling evolved and developed as a by-product of the motion picture have been adopted by general business with notable success and with efficiency which might well be emulated today by the industry which fathered the art of showmanship. Such was the theme developed by Spyros Skouras in the principal address at the presentation of the annual Quigley Grand Awards to John Burhorn of Chicago and George Limerick, of Enid, Okla. The silver and bronze plaques were presented by William F. Rodgers for Martin Quigley and the MOTION PICTURE HERALD at a luncheon attended by ranking executives of advertising and publicity departments of the major companies on Tuesday at the Astor Hotel.

The presentation is reported in the story on page 15 and is pictured on pages 12, 13 and 14.

Favorable

Financial statements were forthcoming this week from RKO, through its trustee, the Irving Trust Company, and from Monogram, Universal, and Technicolor. In each case the company showed a profit.

Details of this and other financial news are on page 40.

ing but incidentally expensive folly of wide films under such names as "Grandeur."

The motion picture in the home has hit its stride, with amateur picture-making, the while progressing, developing still, revealed as no revolution. Additionally the cinema has been taken into industry and advertising on terms that indicate how big and how little that is to be.

The potentialities of the screen theatre have been well explored from the "shooting gallery" to the vast Music Hall than which no bigger screen theatre is likely ever to be built. Also we have seen the coming of the once promised revolution of the chromium plated version of the nickelodeon in the Trans-Lux idea, with some success, but also no revolution.

In other words, the placer mining days are over. The motion picture is just a business, which needs to be attended to every hour on the hour. "The Million Dollar Mystery," terrific serial success, in 1914 paid 700 per cent. If on the average motion pictures can make a final net of 5 per cent today they are doing well.

TERRY RAMSAYE

Mayer Honored

Louis B. Mayer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president in charge of production, was to receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws Thursday afternoon from the University of New Brunswick, in Frederickston, New Brunswick. The award was made for "achievements in combining visual education and uplift with pictorial entertainment, and stabilizing a new element in the routine life of the world which threatened at one time to become unruly."

Mr. Mayer's early education was in the public schools of St. John, N. B., although his first film venture was in Haverhill, Mass., where he gradually acquired control of all five theatres. As his theatre interests extended through New England, he also turned to the exchange end of the business, and to production; and in 1923 became head of operations of the merger which produced Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Mayer is to arrive in New York from New Brunswick over the week end.

Another honorary degree will be awarded a member of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in June; this being the honorary degree of Bachelor of Laws to be awarded John J. Maloney, district sales manager, by his alma mater, St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pennsylvania.

Wants Rights

Gerald Cock, television director of British Broadcasting Company, of London, talked this week with various of the major distributors' executives to obtain from them permission to use some of their features and shorts in BBC's British telecasts, and to arrange for availability of prints. He had sought arrangements through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America which referred him to individual executives of member companies. Progress, if any, was not disclosed.

The novelty appeal of newly launched television is being capitalized by New York theatres, four houses in the midtown area having installed sets in their lobbies for the incidental entertainment of their patrons. They are the Paramount, Carnegie, Plaza and New Amsterdam.

Optimistic reports of popular acceptance of the medium continue to come from England, talent guild disputes over control of television actors remained unsettled, and American radio and electrical companies rushed plans for increasing production of sets.

Developments are on page 46.

ASCAP Acts

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will amend the pending action attacking the constitutionality of the Florida law penalizing the operations of the Society in that state, to cover any changes which may be enacted in the law. The amendments would be with reference to the proposed changes in the new Florida law now before the Florida legislature, including a provision for a three per cent tax on the Society's gross receipts in Florida; the appointment of a receiver for ASCAP's Florida business in the event the tax is not paid; minimized penalties of the existing law, and repeal of the provision prohibiting infringement suits.

Defense of Methods

Present day motion picture advertising methods, accused of unscientific approach, old-fashioned style, and failure to attract the customers by a psychologist and authority on film and radio research, were defended as being practical and effective although necessarily pragmatic by Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Harry Goldberg, Warner theatre exploitation director, at a luncheon meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

Story Purchases

Buying a total of 66 story properties, the highest purchased in any month since August, 1938, 16 producers added 47 originals, nine novels, seven plays and three magazine stories to their literary holdings last month. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was the largest buyer; while such plays as "The American Way," "The Road to Rome" and "The Blue Bird," and novels such as "The Mortal Storm" and "Grapes of Wrath" were among the works acquired.

An account of the month's purchases will be found on page 25.

Copyright Change

Working now on the language of a first draft of the proposed change in the Federal Copyright Act of 1909, representatives and attorneys of various interests, including films and radio, are continuing the discussions which have been under way for more than a year, in an attempt to introduce a bill which would modernize the law before the present session of Congress adjourns. The first draft was drawn up by Dr. Edith Ware, executive secretary of the committee for the study of copyright of the committee for international intellectual cooperation of the League of Nations.

Tax Cost to Americans

Distributors in England say that the newly proposed import and excise duties will mean a payment of at least $3,821,925 annually by American interests, a minimum cost to them of 10 to 15 per cent on their operations. Producers declare the total assessment would mean the difference between profit and loss. Exhibitors see the likelihood of a marked product shortage and increased rental costs. Labor is fearsome of less employment and lower wages.

Details are in Aubrey Flanagan's article on page 55.

War Clouds

Truman Talley, director of Fox Movietone News, on Monday set up the first American newsreel office at The Hague, in Holland, to care for any footage arriving from any conflict in Central Europe. It was the first time that any American newsreel has had any direct representation in The Hague, which heretofore was covered on assignment from Paris.

Mr. Talley arrived in Paris on Wednesday and after the weekend will proceed to Spain to reestablish the newsreel there. It was not known at what point Spanish newsreel headquarters will be placed.

Royalty and Reels

A plane carrying the newsreels of the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth, the first monarchs of Great Britain ever to set foot in North America, took off from Quebec early Wednesday afternoon, carrying the combined coverage of the five American newsreel companies to New York for printing and thence to the screens. As the "Empress of Australia," serving as a royal yacht, landed at Wolfe's Cove Wednesday morning, with its convoy of two Canadian destroyers and two British cruisers, the guns in the fortress boomed out a 21-gun royal salute, all caught by the cameras.

The King and Queen, walking down the gangplank to the maroon and gold marquee on the dock, were met by the officials.

All Montreal theatres were closed from 4 to 4:30 p. m. so that staffs and patrons could see the King and Queen. "Intermission passes" good until 6 p. m. were issued.

The first reels will be included in this week's makeup by the newsreel companies where possible, this footage being taken under the conditions agreed upon by the American companies and the Canadian Government, under which the companies received a special permit for their men and equipment to pass through to Canada and back, without customs inspection. Each company has one crew (consisting of three men, of whom one is a contact man) in adition to the coverage afforded by the Associated Screen News, the Canadian agency.

The newsreel men are under the direct supervision of the Canadian Royal Mounted Police.

German Bund Sues

A $5,000,000 libel action against Warner Brothers, Milton Krims, John Wexley and Leon G. Turrou, and a petition for an injunction to restrain further showing of Warners' "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" were filed in New York federal court last Friday by Fritz J. Kuhn, on behalf of himself and the German-American Bund, of which he is president.

Mr. Kuhn contended that the Bund is "a patriotic, loyal American organization, upholding the Constitution and laws of the U. S."

Vahan H. Kalenderian is counsel for Kuhn; Joseph Karp of Warners' legal department is handling the suit for the company.

The arrest of Mr. Kuhn and several of his lieutenants in the Bund was ordered Wednesday by New York officials, on perjury charges.

Nazi Films

The attention of the Government at Ottawa has been drawn to a series of lectures and film exhibitions being conducted in British Columbia by an Austrian Nazi. The Honorable Grote Stirling made the complaint, charging that the film was comprised chiefly of "Heil Hitler" and the singing of "Deutschland Uber Alles." He urged it was "time for action" when public opinion was so aroused. Prime Minister Mackenzie King assured Mr. Stirling that the incidents referred to had already come to the Government's attention and that the authorities were taking steps. In Vancouver, a member of the British Columbia board of motion picture censors said he understood police were searching for the German film propagandist and hoped to catch him at the next showing.

Merger

Associated Film Audiences and Films for Democracy, the organization from which Walter Wanger recently resigned because of its refusal to take a stand against Communism, have merged.

Bootlegging

A number of arrests in Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky this week signaled a drive by the industry to stamp out the bootlegging of stolen or illegally duplicated prints, a practice which has plagued film producers and distributors since the birth of the industry but which within the last year, it is indicated, has grown to large scale operation.

The tangled trail of the bootleggers and the extent of their operations are reported on page 16.

Quigley Awards Mark Honors for Showmanship

SHOWMANSHIP in the theatre was honored this week at the presentation of the annual Silver and Bronze Quigley Grand Awards Plaques to John Burhorn of Chicago and George Limerick of Enid, Okla. The need for emphasis on the development of ingenuity in selling was emphasized by Spyros Skouras, principal speaker at the Awards luncheon on Tuesday in New York, and by William F. Rodgers, who made the presentations on behalf of Martin Quigley and Motion Picture Herald.

INDUSTRY LEADERS HONOR QUIGLEY AWARD WINNERS

Skouras and Rodgers, Speakers at Presentation to John Burhorn and George Limerick, Praise Goal of Competition

The importance of continuous, ingenious and imaginative showmanship at the motion picture industry's point of contact with the public, the theatre, was the theme stressed by speakers at the presentation this week of the annual Quigley Awards. The silver and bronze plaques, symbolic of outstanding honors in the competition conducted by the Managers' Round Table were presented on Tuesday to John Burhorn of Chicago and George Limerick of Enid, Okla., at a luncheon at the Astor Hotel, New York, attended by circuit and home office advertising executives.

Spyros Skouras, National Theatres head who gave the principal address and William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales manager who made the presentation on behalf of Martin Quigley and the Motion Picture Herald, both spoke with emphasis on the need for improved showmanship today in presenting the product to the public and maintaining sound good will.

Use in Other Industries Cited

Pointing out that other industries, notably the automotive field, have adopted the tools of showmanship developed by motion picture pioneers and used them well to build sound public relations and easy product acceptance, Mr. Skouras accused the film industry of neglecting to make full use of the materials at hand for proper presentation of its product to the consumer.

"The films of importance, of value, which are being produced by the industry today," he said, "are not receiving the box office response which should be expected as a reasonable return for the care and money expended in their production. That they do not so respond can be blamed only on lack of proper exploitation and showmanship. It is up to the theatremen, the exploitation men in the field to direct their efforts so that these pictures receive their due response from the public."

Asks Higher Standards

The National Theatres executive prefaced his plea for more and better showmanship by praising the Quigley Awards competition for raising standards and encouraging new efforts.

"I have known Martin Quigley for 24 years and for that long have admired and respected his influence in furthering the interests of the motion picture industry," he said. "I have watched particularly the Quigley Awards and the work they are doing in encouraging showmanship.

"Showmen are made, not born.

"The motion picture today is a temple of entertainment for all peoples. It is a great cultural force, powerful in raising the mentality of its vast audience. Exploitation's part in this influence should be strongly encouraged and it is through such means as these Awards that it will be fostered and brought to efficient functioning."

> "Other industries—the motor car field is a case in point—have adopted the tools of showmanship developed by the motion picture industry and used them to their own interest with great success. We should take advantage of the means at our hand to build public good will for our industry as they have done for theirs." — SPYROS SKOURAS, National Theatres executive, at the presentation of the Quigley Awards.

Leading from his observation that general business has turned to good advantage the showmanship in which the motion picture industry pioneered, Mr. Skouras pointed out that the first steps toward concerted good will or promotional advertising were made in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year drive and urged a continuation of that effort.

"We should all combine our thoughts and energies to bring about a movement to make the public conscious of the important pictures being made today," he continued. "I believe that the industry drive last year was a great success in bringing the attention of the public to bear on motion pictures. The newspaper attention we received is worthy of note. Headlines, stories and editorials in 895 newspapers presented our story to the public. I would like to see a similar effort made this year by the combined industry.

"In congratulating these winners of the Quigley Awards I ask all of you to join in an effort to bring the industry the rewards it deserves."

Mr. Quigley, presiding at the presentation luncheon, expressed appreciation for the interest shown by the guests and speakers and pointed out that because of the nature of the duties and responsibilities of most of those present no emphasis was needed on the part played by showmanship in the industry.

"The Awards to be presented today," he added, "are only a reasonable recognition of works of merit in showmanship in the field."

Encouragement First Purpose

A-Mike Vogel, chairman of the Managers' Round Table, said that the first and most important function of the Awards competition was the encouragement extended to the men in the field to exert extra showmanship effort by setting up a goal for which to strive.

"Our industry today," he continued, "must compete on equal terms with other forms of entertainment for a share of the amusement dollar. Success in that competition is only possible if we use to the fullest advantage every device of showmanship at hand and every device our ingenuity can invent."

He exemplified the material value of the Awards to exhibitors with the statistics that among the more than 100 winners of monthly plaques named since the competition began in 1934 more than one-third have received definite promotion. Of the ten Grand Award winners at least half have been given better positions and a majority of all other winners have received salary increases or bonuses as a direct result of the Awards.

The actual presentation of the plaques to Mr. Burhorn and Mr. Limerick was made by Mr. Rodgers, introduced by Mr. Quigley as a "genuine veteran and pioneer of the industry, although he is youthful by the calendar." The MGM general sales manager alluded first to his activities in the formulation of the trade practice code, adding that he hoped at the luncheon "to make at least two new converts to it."

Turning to the winners, he said, "Distribution and sales departments have always had great respect and admiration for the exploitation end of the business, for the men who can accomplish the unusual through imagination and ingenuity. This respect should be and is heightened for these two men who have succeeded in competition with others in their field from all over the world.

"Example for Others"

"In the past these presentations have been made by esteemed representatives of the industry, usually in the department of production. That they are being made now by a representative of the sales department does not lessen the sincerity of the respect and congratulations we offer you.

"I believe I speak on behalf of the entire industry in congratulating you. We all hope that you will continue the work you have begun. You have set an example for others to compete for these Awards and you are a credit to this competition."

A blue ribbon jury of advertising and publicity executives voted the silver plaque to Mr. Burhorn and the bronze to Mr. Limerick last February after judging the campaigns which had the highest standings in each classification in the quarterly awards for 1938. The Silver Award winner is manager of the Gayety theatre, a South Chicago last run unit of the Indiana-Illinois circuit. The bronze winner is city manager for the Griffith Amusement Company in Enid, Okla.

Entertained in New York

The winners were the guests of Quigley Publications in New York for the entire week, the film companies joining in preparing a full program of entertainment for them.

Arriving Monday, they attended a screening of "The Mikado" and a luncheon given by Nate Blumberg, president of Universal. After a Warner Brothers cocktail party at the Rainbow Room they were dinner guests of Herman Robbins and George Dembow, of National Screen Service.

Following the presentation luncheon Tuesday Altec Service Company was host at a Plaza Hotel cocktail party and at dinner in the Diamond Horse Shoe.

On Wednesday RKO Radio gave them a luncheon at the New York Athletic Club and, following a backstage tour of the Music Hall, a theatre party at a performance of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

A special Associated Motion Picture Advertisers luncheon Thursday at which they were speakers was followed by a visit to the Eastern Service Studios in Astoria. Universal was host at a dinner party and at a performance of "Hellzapoppin."

On Friday Twentieth Century-Fox was to be host at a luncheon at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. After a baseball game they were to see "Leave It to Me" as guests of United Artists.

The weekend was to be spent at the World's Fair, on Saturday as guests of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and on Sunday as guests of Republic.

MAJORS AND FBI TRAIL "BOOTLEG" FILM TRAFFICKERS; ARREST ONE

Sequences from a Dozen Pictures, Even Including "Rushes" from Studio Floors, Cemented Together Into "Feature"

The organized industry and Federal Bureau of Investigation started this week to explode the "bootleg print racket" which has been known for a year to have flourished in New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Virginia, Iowa, New Mexico, West Virginia and Indiana.

Pleads Guilty

The first sizeable "leak" in distributors' normal income channels was believed to have been stopped with the FBI's apprehension of one R. E. Gregg, operating through the Pan-American Laboratory, a distribution company, in Chicago. He pleaded guilty last Wednesday, before Judge Philip L. Sullivan, following an indictment handed up by the federal grand jury there.

Gregg pleaded guilty to four counts, specifically for copying, reprinting and vending, for profit, an RKO short film, "The Cat's Canary," without authority of the copyright owner. Under Section No. 28 of the United States Copyright Law, covering willful infringements for profit, Gregg faces imprisonment up to one year, or a maximum fine of $1,000, or both.

Information obtained Tuesday disclosed that the distributors and the authorities are on the trail of others.

100 Prints Recovered

Already 100 prints of features and shorts, possessed illegally, have been recovered.

The organized industry for years has been conducting investigations into "bootleg" and illegal trafficking in duped and stolen prints, and on occasion has succeeded in rounding up the culprits and prosecuting them. Through its Copyright Protection Bureau, however, the majors for a year have been concentrating on a nationwide hunt in the present situation, working with local and state authorities, and finally bringing in John Edgar Hoover and his FBI men from Washington.

Jack H. Levin, director of the Copyright Protection Bureau, of which Gabriel L. Hess, of the Hays organization, is counsel, said this week that a principal factor were the complaints made directly to the Bureau and to distributors by owners of regular theatres and their exhibitor organizations against itinerant exhibitions in the neighborhoods. A number of theatre owners complained that product of the major distributors was being shown in unfair competition to them, and on investigation the distributors discovered they had no record of any such rentings or exhibitions. The itinerants obtained their films from "bootleg" print traffickers, and in many instances the itinerants themselves engaged in the "bootleg" business after obtaining possession of prints.

The Copyright Protection Bureau made it clear that the itinerants and not regular theatre owners are for the most part the participants in the present schemes.

State and Local Authorities

As a result of the exhibitor complaints, Harold L. Groves of the Protection Bureau was assigned to this investigation and during the early months the trail led to tracking down exhibitions through New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Virginia, Iowa, New Mexico, West Virginia, and Indiana.

Mr. Groves worked with the local and state authorities, obtaining the necessary evidence. This evidence indicated a violation under the criminal statute of the federal copyright laws, which evidence was turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which assigned special agents, resulting in the matter being referred to Martin Ward, Assistant United States Attorney in Chicago.

NEW CONTRACTS SEEN AS AUSTRALIAN HOPE

The film industry in Australia is hopeful that most of its difficulties, trade and legislative, will be solved by the new standard contract now being drafted, Harry Hunter, Australian manager for Paramount, said this week on his arrival in New York. Success of the contract, he said, may prevent the spread of adverse legislation among the Australian states.

Mr. Hunter is visiting John W. Hicks, vice-president and foreign manager of Paramount, at the home office. He will go to Los Angeles early in June to attend the company's national sales convention and will sail June 21st for Australia from there.

As the investigation dug deeper, it showed not only 35 mm. but also 16 mm. duped prints were being distributed throughout the country.

Acting further on exhibitors' complaints of outdoor merchant shows in competition with regular theatres, the trail continued through Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and finally led to the source of supply in Traverse City, Michigan.

Operated Own Exchange

In that city, an itinerant exhibitor, who also operated his own "distributing exchange" for other itinerant exhibitors, surrendered to Mr. Groves 15 reels of 35 mm. film belonging to major distributors, after M. Fifarek, chief of the Traverse City fire department, found the prints stored in a garage. The exhibitor admitted that all of these prints, which were the property of the major distributors, had been purchased by him for theatre exhibitions in Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin, and that, in turn, his source of supply was a "bootleg" distributor in Cincinnati, Ohio. The Copyright Protection Bureau refused to identify the titles of the prints seized or disclose the name of the itinerant at this time.

In Cincinnati the Bureau uncovered the bootleg exchange, also unnamed at this time, and found films which were stored in a hideout in Covington, Kentucky. Inspection of 51 reels so recovered revealed that the title leaders were stripped. These are being held at present in New York for identification pending further prosecutions.

According to further information obtained in Cincinnati, this exchange also was leasing film to small theatres in West Virginia and Illinois. When these "prints" were seized, although they bore the title, copyright notice and imprint of a major distributor, they really were cut-outs of many various subjects that were re-edited and sold as major product.

Exhibitors soon realized that the films they rented were "hot" and contained choppy sequences perhaps from a dozen pictures—the feature they "rented" maybe containing part of a comedy, parts of cartoons, dramas and whatnot, all cemented together to make up the length of a feature, without any continuity or entertainment value. Their own private pre-exhibition screening, of course, showed that they could not present the picture to their public. One "feature" even contained "rushes" from studio floors, containing the unit number identifying plate.

Dummy Titles Used

Contrasting this method of sale and exhibition, another group of pictures being exhibited were found to be major product with dummy titles. The original titles were removed and dummy ones inserted to reduce the possibility of detection.

In those states where censorship seals were necessary, spurious seals were affixed. One establishment in Cincinnati had a whole can of censor seal leaders ready to affix to all illegal film they were using.

In Cleveland, cooperating with Emmet Potts, superintendent of criminal investigations, it was revealed that independent distributors new in the business had purchased unwittingly several subjects from a bootlegger in Maryland, and were openly advertising such subjects on a rental basis. Upon being questioned they disclosed their source of supply and turned over the prints.

Old Film Thought Destroyed

Much of the film being trafficked is film which the distributor owners thought had been "junked." Old film, ordered by distribution executives to be destroyed—chopped in half as is customary, on its way to being treated to regain the silver—sometimes is never destroyed, according to the Copyright Protection Bureau, whose Mr. Levine points out "leaks" even exist in the organized industry. Other films trafficked are dupes of prints that have been stolen, principally from film delivery trucks, from around exchanges in the field and elsewhere. Others are prints supposedly sold legitimately for use abroad, but, in line with the system, eventually finding their way back to this country for bootlegging.

The Bureau could give no actual estimate of the amount of rentals involved in the bootlegging, other than to say it runs into many thousands of dollars a year. In the old days of film bicycling, said Mr. Levine, rental losses ran as high as $10,000,000 annually.

Product of all of the larger distributors has been bootlegged. Where a feature or short was used in its original form, the titles were changed so as not to have any similarity whatever with the original, the bootleggers thus hoping to avoid detection. In the cases where the picture is merely a collection of shots and sequences from many pictures, as already explained, the title, of course, means nothing.

The "bootleggers," however, did come quite close to the originals in their use of 'Crazy Newsreel" for "Goofytone Newsreel," "Wild Man" for "Going Wild," "The Gang" for "Our Gang" comedies, and so on.

Others under Investigation

Both the FBI and the majors and their Protection Bureau are in possession of information on the methods and tricks by which some of the sharper "bootleggers" operate, although it is said that fully 90 per cent of the operators are not "sharpsters" and run their business crudely.

The Bureau refused to disclose the names of the itinerants and theatres renting the films, because publication of such information now would jeopardize the cases and also "tip off" those still being investigated.

INDUSTRY TO TAKE PROGRAM FOR SELF-REGULATION OUT FOR AIRING

Majors Line Up with Exhibitors for "Open Forums"; Executives in New York Reopen Conferences on Arbitration

The industry's trade practice program for self-regulation, in formulation now for nine months, is about to be brought into the open for discussion and dissection by all concerned.

(Signs late Wednesday, as given by a leader of the majors' trade practice committee, indicated that the program might be in final form by the weekend. Similar "signs" have appeared, however, for weeks on end, for months.)

Although the document itself has not yet emerged from the latest of its many revisions at the hands of the distributors' lawyers, and from the hands of the distributors' executives who still are trying to arrive at a workable form of arbitration, the attention of both exhibitors and distributors will be given to the program for the first time jointly in "open forum," first, on Thursday, at a meeting in New York's Astor, called by Allied States of New York, and, secondly, at the already widely publicized national convention of the parent Allied, June 13th to 15th, in Minneapolis.

Large Groups from Both Sides

With large delegations from both sides on record to attend both meetings, the program now faces a thorough inspection in public. During the long period of construction, it has had only the attention of comparatively small committees representing the various organized exhibitor groups, meeting in private negotiation with committees of the distributors.

Just what is to come, "codewise," out of the two approaching "open forums," remains to be seen; for one thing, the exhibitors want to know what the majors intend to do about some of the additional concessions they had asked for, and just what the majors propose by way of arbitration machinery.

That arbitration stands as a very vital point was conceded by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, chief of the majors' negotiation committee.

Elsewhere there has been mention of actual enactment around August, retroactive to all 1939-40 contracts.

New York Forum May Draw 1,000

Taking advantage of the scheduled convention of the six eastern regional Allied organizations, Max A. Cohen, president of the comparatively new Allied of New York, has received acceptances from many of the majors' executives, to hold open discussion with independent exhibitor delegates on the trade program and other industry matters, at the Hotel Astor, New York, starting Tuesday morning.

Attendance of 1,000 Expected

Mr. Cohen announced that independents participating will come from Maine to Ohio, and Washington, D. C., delegations from the six eastern Allied units holding the convention: Allied of New York, New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Washington, and the Motion Picture Theatre Operators of Maryland and Independent Exhibitors of Boston. One thousand is the anticipated attendance.

PROGRAM OF ALLIED NEW YORK SESSIONS

The three-day meeting in New York of six regional Allied organizations, starting Tuesday, will highlight an "open forum" on the pending trade practice program, in which both owners and distributors will participate. The full schedule of the convention in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor follows:

Colonel H. A. Cole, president of national Allied, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel and board chairman, will lead the independents in the trade program forum, with distributors represented by William F. Rodgers, MGM; Neil F. Agnew, Paramount, and Ned Depinet, RKO. Other distribution executives will be on hand.

Col. Cole left his headquarters at Dallas Sunday on an eastern organization trip that will take him to Allied affiliates in Indianapolis, Detroit, Columbus, Baltimore, and, finally, to New York.

Open Forum Highlighted

With sessions open to all, the steering committee is aiming to highlight the open forum on Thursday afternoon, the final day of the meeting.

Allied is understood to have requested the attendance of United Artists at the forum, but the company declined, it is said, on the grounds that the form of its operations preclude its participating in the self-regulation plan, as previously noted.

The distributors have agreed to entertain the delegates Tuesday evening at a reception, their committee comprising H. M. Richey, RKO; Jack Bellman, Republic; Al Herman, Universal; Milton Kusell, Paramount; Ed McAvoy, RKO; E. K. Shea, MGM; Ed Schnitzer, Warners; Charles Stern, U. A.; William Sussman, Twentieth Century-Fox; George Weeks, Monogram, and Lou Weinberg, Columbia.

Code A Highlight At National Meet

Attention to the self-regulation program will be of even greater scope when Allied members from all over the country converge upon Minneapolis and the Hotel Nicollet, June 13th to 15th, to decide, also in open forum, whether independent exhibitors will "go along" with the program as presently constituted.

There, too, the majors will participate in open discussions, besides representatives of the MPTOA and other exhibitor organizations, and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

The keynote, as set down by Allied's President Cole, will be a "once and for all" settlement of trade practice controversies, so far as independents are concerned.

"Each theatre owner," he said, "will be given opportunity to hear, and to answer the other side, and from there on he is on his own," continuing: "If the majority of theatre owners of the U. S. want to accept the trade practice reforms as submitted by the producers, they may rest assured that Allied will find no fault, and we are positive that the producer-distrubtors feel likewise." Allied previously had rejected the program.

Colonel Cole, and others in Allied have said that they feel some solution will be reached at Minneapolis, and that solutions will also be reached on the controversial issues of the Neely anti-block selling and blind booking bill.

Leaving the floor open to all groups, as promised both by Col. Cole and Al Steffes, Allied chieftain of the Northwest who is directing the convention, a secret ballot by individuals attending is likely to follow, both on the trade program and on block booking regulation.

Mr. Steffes, Wednesday, said that action by independents on the trade practice program and other controversial questions "will likely make it necessary to extend the convention two days."

Last week, MOTION PICTURE HERALD (page 13), disclosed that petitions from representatives of hundreds of theatres had been filed with Mr. Steffes for permission to present a plan for a national buying-and-booking combine, which Mr. Steffes granted.

Last week, acceptances to the Minneapolis sessions were reported from E. L. Kuykendall, of the competitive MPTOA, from C. C. Pettijohn and David Palfreyman, of the Hays organization, and from Jack Cohn, Neil Agnew, Ned Depinet, William F. Rodgers, James R. Grainger, W. Ray Johnston, Tom Conners, Al Schlaifer, Joseph I. Breen, H. M. Richey, Harry Buxbaum, Sam Dembow, Edward A. Golden, Abe Montague, William Scully, Edward M. Saunders, Mort Singer, George Skouras, Max Roth, Gradwell Sears, Jules Levy and Harry Brandt.

Among acceptances this week were those of Herman Robbins, Morgan Ames, Henri Elman, Jack Flynn, W. C. Gehring, Harold B. Franklin, R. R. Biechele.

Committee Deep In Arbitration

With the majors' lawyers believed to have finally reached or approached the end of the revisions they have been making for weeks in the trade practice program, the distributors' sales managers on Monday in New York turned to "the stumbling block," arbitration, which they had promised in the original draft, but which had not been fully developed.

Taking in hand a system for arbitrating disputes under the trade code as devised by their lawyers, the sales managers labored through most of Monday and stood ready for another session before the weekend, with the "hope," as expressed by one committee member, that the complete document would be ready by the time Allied and other independents open their forum on the program in New York on Thursday, or, at least, by the time of national Allied's open meeting in Minneapolis June 12th.

ARBITRATION STILL CHIEF PROBLEM

The chief problem has been the establishment of an arbitration system that will be both legal and workable and acceptable by all participating distributors and the exhibitors who will be asked to ratify the entire program. Other points, such as reallocations, designations, clearance and cancellation, are also under discussion by the committee. "Definite progress" was reported Wednesday.

In addition to William F. Rodgers, as chairman, executives participating in the week's conferences included Richard Dwight, of counsel to Twentieth Century-Fox; E. W. Aaron and Irving Greenfield at M-G-M; I. Howard Levinson, Warners; Ned E. Depinet and William Mallard, RKO; William Scully and Adolph Schimel, Universal; Neil F. Agnew and Lou Phillips, Paramount; Eugene Picker, Columbia.

Executives Undecided

Mr. Rodgers said that the method of adoption of the plan by the industry is contingent upon the outcome of the current efforts to agree on arbitration procedure.

A canvass of distribution companies revealed considerable indecision among sales executives as to whether they would be willing to put the other phases of the trade program into effect by incorporating them in exhibition contracts in the event the arbitration efforts failed to produce results.

Current indications are that only three major distributors, as of this date, are prepared to grant cancellation, score charge elimination and other contractual concessions of the trade program without obtaining an acceptable arbitration procedure subscribed to by a majority of their exhibitor accounts.

There was no denial that any inability of Allied States to approve the plan or to commit its membership to arbitration, should an acceptable procedure be evolved, might lead to the withdrawal of several distributors. Moreover, some distribution companies still have not decided whether they will put the program into effect in the event the Government persists in its refusal to approve it.

Failure to achieve an acceptable arbitration procedure, failure of a sufficiently representative number of exhibitors to approve the program or failure of the Government to express itself on the subject could make the participation of at least four distributors extremely doubtful, it now appears.

Floyd St. John Retires

James R. Grainger, president of Republic and Floyd St. John, of San Francisco, announced Wednesday that Mr. St. John had disposed of his interests in the distribution in California of Republic pictures to Republic Pictures of New York, effective Friday. Mr. St. John will retire.

Francis Bateman, manager of the Los Angeles office, and Sid Weisbaum, San Francisco manager, and the personnel of both offices will continue. Mr. Grainger said that arrangements will be made with others to operate these exchanges as franchise owners.

Majors Seek More Particulars; U. S. Would Avoid Naming Names

The bill of particulars which the Department of Justice gave distributors two weeks ago, in the Government's anti-trust suit in New York, is far from satisfactory to the defendant companies and application to federal court in New York to compel the Department to provide additional details was to be made late this week.

The Government last Saturday filed an affidavit and letter with Federal Judge William Bondy, in reply to the majors' affidavit submitted in opposition to the Government's application for an order dispensing with the naming of witnesses under item eight of the bill.

The Government's affidavit disputed the applicability of Federal Judge John C. Knox's decision in the suit brought by Vocafilm Corp. of America against American Telephone and Telegraph Co., Western Electric Co. and Erpi, cited by the majors.

The Government on Monday is to resume the questioning of United Artists executives before trial of the New York suit.

Austin C. Keough, general counsel of Paramount, in an affidavit filed Wednesday with Judge Bondy, denied that Paramount had retaliated against witnesses and participants in the anti-trust suit.

Trust Situation in the Field

Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, will go to the West Coast shortly, "to make some speeches," and is expected to discuss the California film situation.

Department officials at Washington, however, said Mr. Murphy is not going west to try any suits. They said the contemplated series of trust suits against circuits, similar to the Oklahoma case, probably would not materialize before July 1st.

New Suit Filed, Action on Others

Following the recent U. S. supreme court decision against the Interstate Circuit of Texas, B. R. McLendon, operating theatres in Atlanta, Texas, on Monday filed suit in Judge W. H. Atwell's federal court at Dallas, for an injunction to restrain the eight major distributors from withholding product from his theatres until 30 days after they are shown at Texarkana, 25 miles away. Judge Atwell set May 27th for a hearing. Also named are the Paramount-Richards theatres.

The 12 distributors and four circuits (Griffith companies) named by the U. S. in its trust suit filed May 1st in Oklahoma, joined Tuesday in asking extension of time to answer the federal complaint.

The hearing before Edgar Eldredge, master in chancery, in Chicago, in the suit of the Government against Balaban and Katz and the major companies, began on Tuesday, with the admittance into court of the documents subpoenaed by the Government.

Because attorneys for the independents in their suit against Balaban and Katz and the eight majors were busy elsewhere, there was a postponement of this case for 30 days.

Ohio Court Exempts Candy And Popcorn from Tax

Ohio exhibitors are concerned over a decision just rendered by the state supreme court which held that candy and popcorn come within the classification of food, and as such are exempt from the three per cent retail sales tax. Food for consumption off the premises is not taxable. The decision affirms one rendered by the lower courts after a confectioner challenged the tax issue. The State Tax Commissioner estimates an annual loss of $500,000 by the exemption, and this, many exhibitors feel, will offer the legislative solons another excuse for reinstating the previous 10 per cent admission tax, which was rescinded in favor of the current three per cent impost.

Says Hollywood Share in Latin America Is Growing

American distributors have not lost ground in Central America and Mexico despite the recent Department of Commerce report that Hollywood product in that territory now accounts for 70 per cent of the total used as compared with 95 percent previously, according to A. L. Pratchett, Paramount manager for Central America and Mexico, who arrived in New York Wednesday. He said the markets there have grown greatly and Hollywood's share is larger than ever.

Connie (Jumbo) Dreher, Monogram West Texas representative, has changed his headquarters from Dallas to Lubbock, Texas.

Writers Delay On Affiliation

The Screen Writers Guild on Tuesday voted to present the question of the unit's affiliation with a national labor organization to the council of the Authors' League of America of which it is a part.

Negotiations Dropped

In Hollywood, the negotiations between the Screen Writers Guild and the producers were broken off. The producers claimed their recognition of the Guild as a bargaining agent and the "refusal" of the Guild to be "reasonable" would prevent that organization from pressing its claims against the producers before the National Labor Relations Board. The Guild claimed that the producers tried to "foist a company union" contract upon them. They pointed out the refusal of the producers to allow any contract shorter than seven years. The NLRB had a request from the Guild to resume its hearings.

Communism Charges Aired

Charges of communism in the studio locals—leveled at IATSE dissidents by the International officers with whom Jeff Kibre, minority leader of Local 37, and other Local 37 officers have been waging an internal fight—faced an airing as the result of a decision by American Federation of Labor officials in the Central Labor Council to investigate the "Los Angeles Citizen," organ of the AF of L. John Gatelee, international officer of the IATSE, was expected to present to Congressman Martin Dies of the Congressional un-Americanism investigating committee, and Attorney General Frank Murphy, evidence of radicalism and "sabotage."

In the fight between Local 37 and the IATSE international officers, an agreement may be reached if the IATSE offer of restoration of autonomy to the Local 37 is accepted. The IATSE wants the "subversive" officials to be discarded. Jeff Kibre—leader of the fight against the national leaders if the IATSE, who was arrested twice last week, first for contempt of court and then on suspicion of criminal syndicalism, and each time released—offered to resign if international officers Harold V. Smith and Lew Blix also resigned. The offer was declined.

Other Activities

In New York City, Warner Brothers' warehouse workers, claiming anti-union discrimination, struck against the Vitagraph, Inc., First National, and the Globe Importing Company. At midweek, the strikers, members of the American Federation of Bookkeepers, Stenographers, and Accountants Union, had placed picket lines in front of Warner home offices and theatres, and announced that they would extend the lines to all theatres showing Warner product.

Other labor developments were:

A call issued by the board of the Screen Actors Guild, asking extras to vote on retention of their membership in the guild, and a mail election for a new council;

Effective operation of the nine year contracts of the producers with the Screen Directors Guild and the Unit Managers Guild;

Renewal of negotiations between the Screen Publicists Guild and the studio managers;

Approval by the producers of the new working agreement with the American Society of Cinematographers;

Approval by the Society of Motion Picture Editors of their new working contract with the producers;

A strike against the Moe Rosenberg circuit houses in the Bronx, New York City, by the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers Union, three theatres affected;

Reelection of Ribert Ansetett as president of Local 1, New York stagehands union.

COLUMBIA, FOX, MGM DIVISIONAL MEETINGS

Paramount and RKO Conventions in June Will Wind Up Sales Gatherings

With their main 1939-40 sales meetings long since out of the way, Columbia Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week turned to divisional meetings to bring details to their staffs in the field, here and abroad, of product and policy for the new season.

Paramount and RKO in June

Columbia this week held the second of three regional conventions, starting Sunday, at the Hotel Drake, Chicago, where the announcement was repeated concerning 42 features, 16 westerns, four serials and 14 series of shorts, made previously at the first convention, in New York. The third meeting opens Saturday at the Hotel Ambassador, running through Monday.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Saturday and Sunday conducted its fourth regional meeting, in San Francisco.

In London, Twentieth Century-Fox's British sales convention was held, and plans were made for a convention in France.

All but Paramount and RKO have held 1939-40 sales conventions, Paramount scheduling its meeting for June 8th to 10th, in Los Angeles, and RKO setting June 19th to 22nd, at Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y.

At the RKO convention, the delegates will hear of the company's plans for Gene Towne, producer and former writer, who will make four a year, and of Graham Baker's new association with Mr. Towne; also, of plans for three Richard Dix features for 1939-40, of a new contract with Jean Hersholt for three features a year, continuing the "Dr. Christian" stories, to be made by Stephens-Lang Productions, and of the project for RKO's new association with the new producing firm of Boris Morros, who will produce eight remakes of French pictures, some with Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

Twentieth Century-Fox Convention

The British sales convention of Twentieth Century-Fox was held in London last Thursday through Saturday, with Herman Wobber, sales director; Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign sales manager, and Truman H. Talley, Movietonews producer, from New York, in attendance. Francis L. Harley, British managing director, presided with R. Sutton Dawes, sales director, assisting.

Mr. Hutchinson took to the convention a new-season message from S. R. Kent, president, in New York, and gave details of the 52 features already made known for 1939-40.

Mr. Wobber sailed for the United States, and Mr. Hutchinson for Rio de Janeiro, to hold the company's first South American convention.

A convention for France, scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, in Paris, was postponed because Mr. Talley, who was to preside, was in Holland.

Twentieth Century-Fox in Hollywood this week added to its 1939-40 program with plans for a "Hollywood Cavalcade," history of the business, to cost an estimated $2,000,000.

New season's sales effort will be concentrated at the start in a seventh annual sales drive, to be dedicated to Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman, starting August 20th.

Metro-Goldwyn's Meeting

The fourth in a series of regional meetings for MGM office managers, bookers and checking supervisors was held last weekend in San Francisco, with a fifth meeting to follow in Chicago this weekend, all sessions hearing of the company's plans for 44 to 52 features for 1939-40.

The Columbia Convention

Columbia held its second regional convention last Sunday at the Hotel Drake in Chicago, attended by 70 delegates, including New York home office executives and managers and salesmen of nine midwest and Canadian branches. The next meeting, concluding the series, will be in Los Angeles.

Mr. Cohn said that the question of social and political problems in motion pictures can best be answered by his conviction that "the world looks today, as never before, for release from care and for entertainment."

"The problem of entertainment versus the presentation of current problems does not exist," he continued. "Where one person may go to the film theatre hoping for the strong meat of controversy, hundreds go for lighter but no less important fare. This doesn't mean that we must provide the public with immature entertainment; it means that when we have a social message to offer, we must provide it with interest and excitement."

Stressing showmanship in selling as vital to "a business built on showmanship," Mr. Montague told the delegates that the exhibitor today wants to know everything possible about the product he is expected to bring to his patrons.

"The 'tricks' of selling film," he continued, "have been replaced by the 'business' of selling, and I think that Columbia has made much progress along those lines," due, he said, to the close association between home office and the salesman, through decentralization of authority and the development of manpower.

Besides the announcement of 42 features, 16 westerns and four serials for the new year, the convention was told that with 30 of its 40 features for the present season already completed, Columbia will offer one prduction a month for release the remainder of the year.

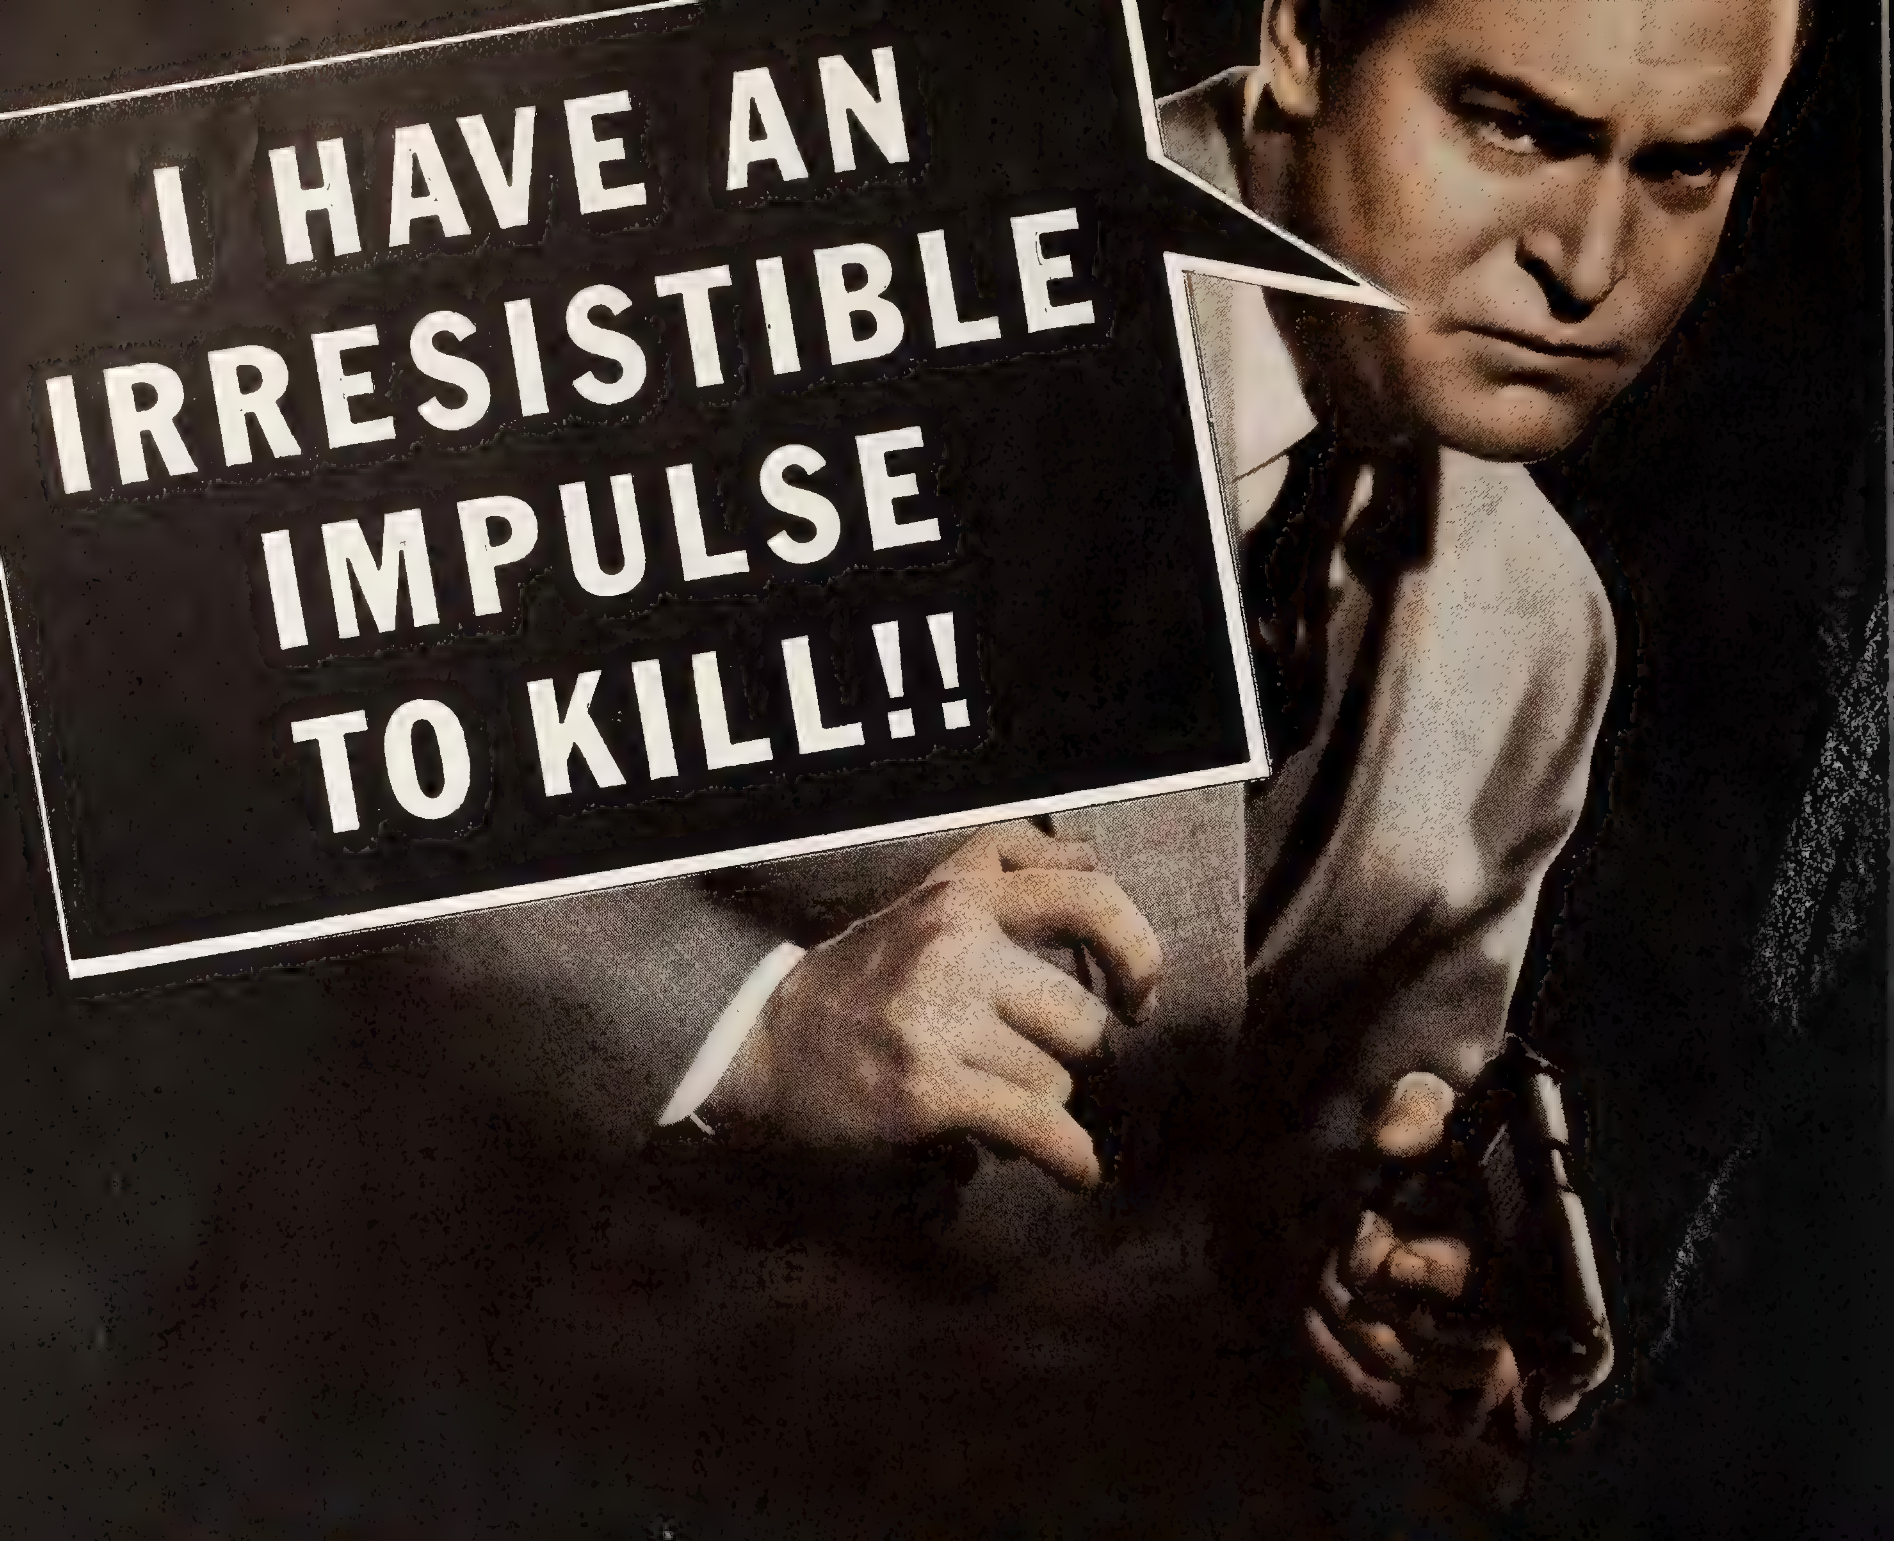
With "quality to be the basis of short subject sales under the planned industry code of fair practices, Columbia will set its short subject budget at almost $2,000,000, a substantial increase," Max Weisfeldt, short subject sales supervisor, announced.

The convention also was told that "Lost Horizon" and "The Awful Truth" will be made available for return bookings, on a special contract basis, with new prints, new "paper" and new advertising campaigns.

Mr. Jackter, assistant sales manager, discussed "manpower" within the company's ranks, and announced the promotion of Joe Jacobs from salesman in Minneapolis, to manager in Omaha.

Forming Propaganda Bureau

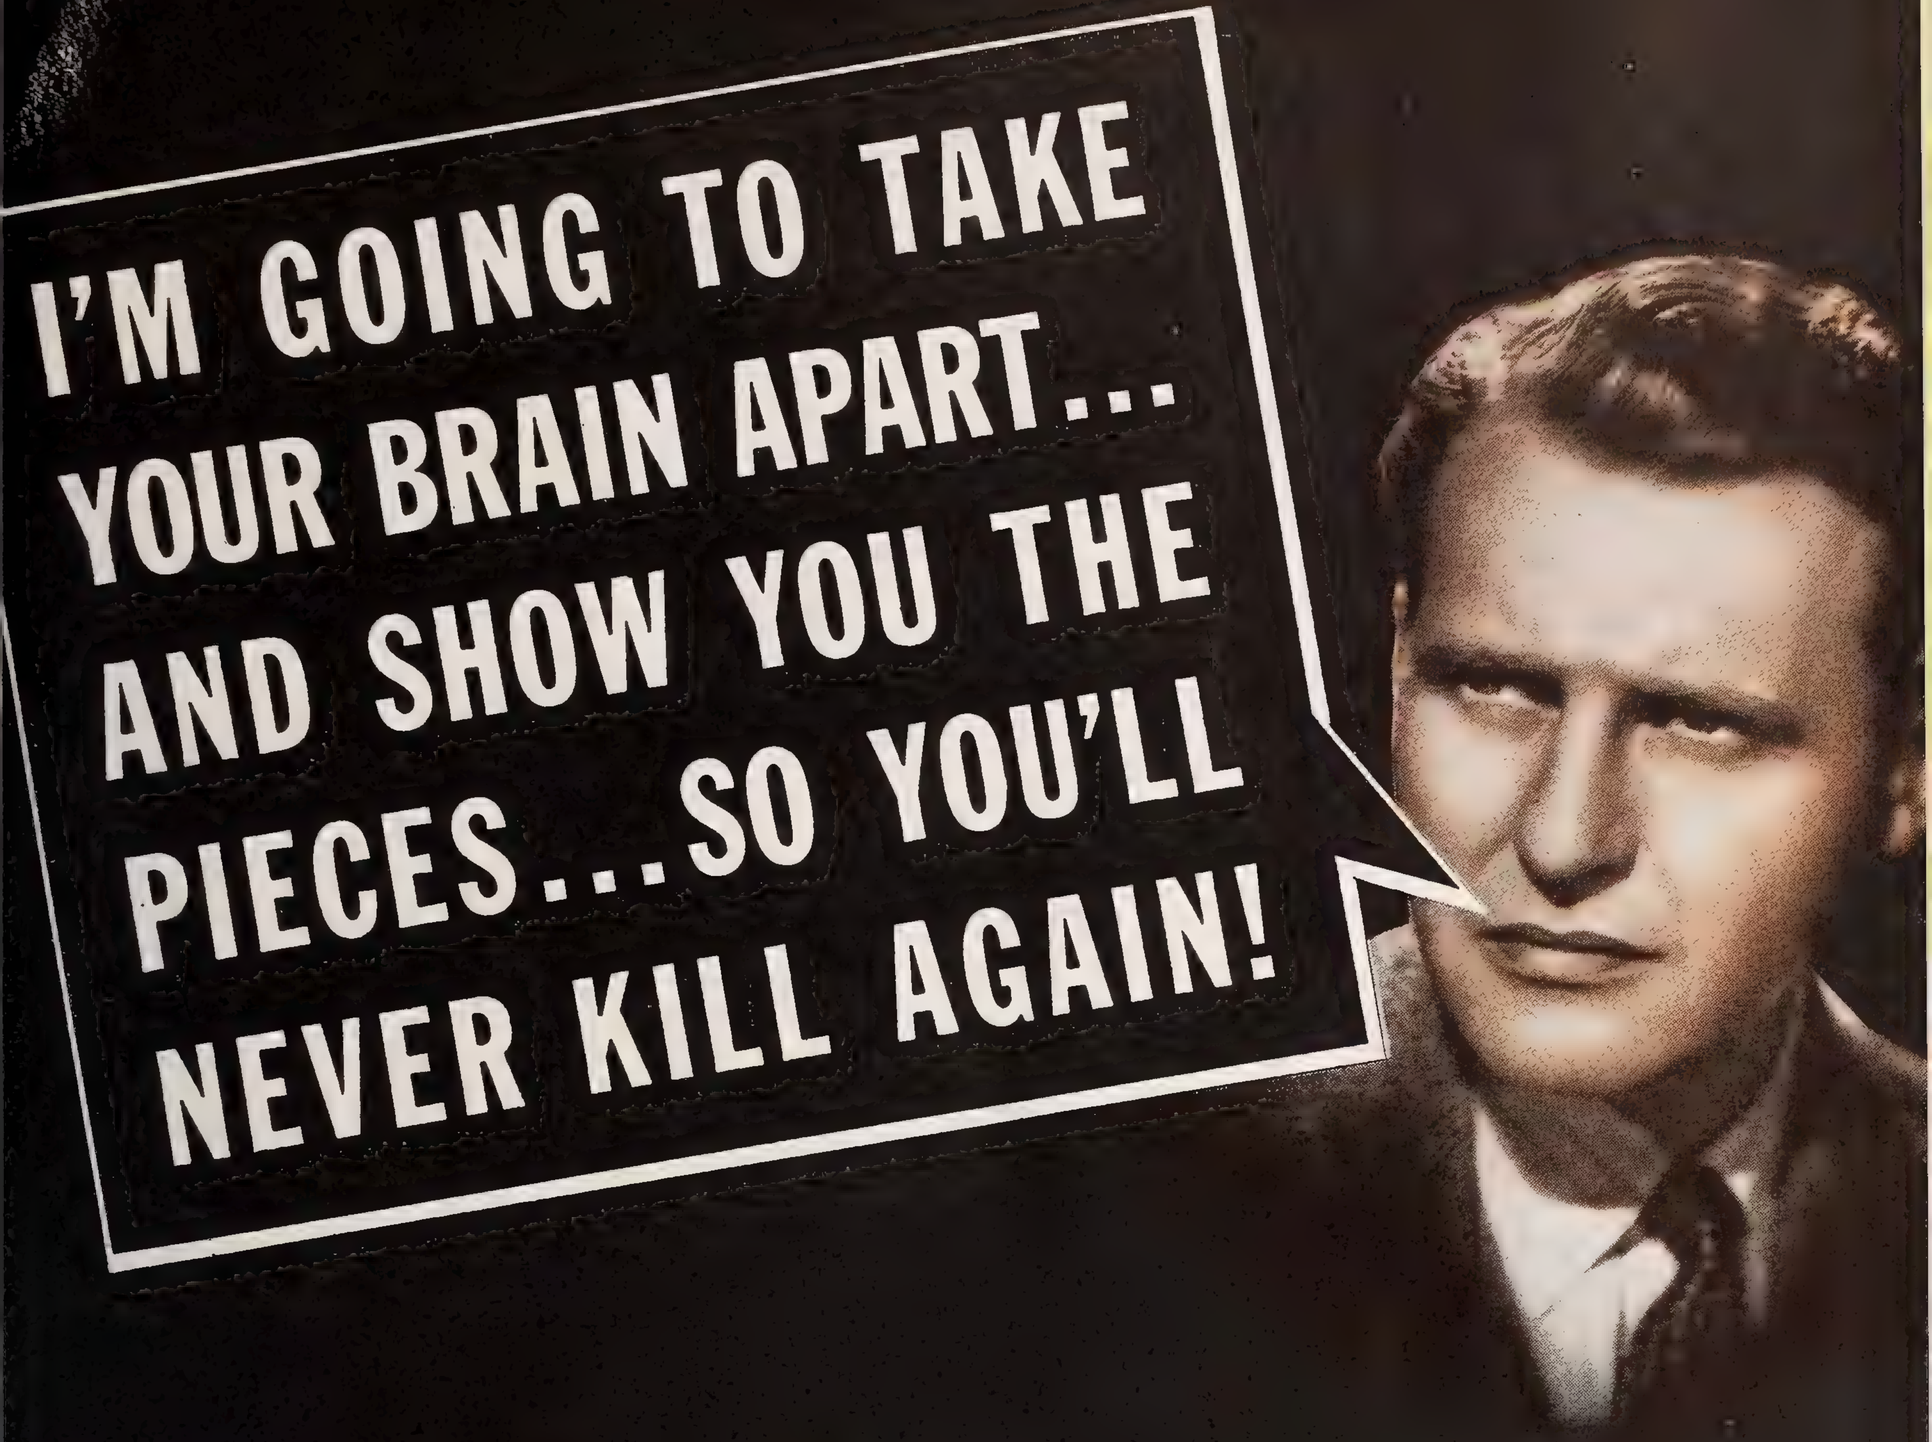
Edmund Goulding, motion picture director, is expected in New York from Hollywood soon to form the "American Propaganda Bureau." Mr. Goulding in Hollywood this week said: "I hope we can get a leading newspaper publisher, a radio chieftain, a magazine owner, a ranking churchman, a movie producer and a book publisher, all to sit on the same committee, talk over national problems and give their opinions to the public."



I HAVE AN IRRESISTIBLE IMPULSE TO KILL!!

Daringly Different!

No wonder Motion Picture Daily said BLIND ALLEY is "two pictures in one" and that "it may be offered to practically any type of patronage with confidence." Imagine, if you can, a drama in which psychiatry becomes a thrilling, living, thing...reconstructing a murderer's mind...bit by bit...to reveal what makes him kill! Realism...stark



I'M GOING TO TAKE YOUR BRAIN APART... AND SHOW YOU THE PIECES...SO YOU'LL NEVER KILL AGAIN!

CHARGES OF "STALE" FILM ADS ANSWERED

Attendance the Best Test of Methods, Dietz Tells Psychologist at AMPA Luncheon

Charges by a psychologist that current styles of advertising motion pictures are "old-fashioned," haven't changed in 25 years and are failing to attract customers to the theatres, were answered in detail Thursday, at a luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, in the Hotel Astor, New York City, by Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for MGM, and Harry Goldberg, director of exploitation for Warner Brothers Theatres. Dr. J. S. List, psychologist and authority in radio and film research, and associated with the National Broadcasting Company and the National Board of Review, had made the charges at an AMPA luncheon three weeks ago.

Repeats Charges

Dr. List sat on the dais during the three-cornered debate Thursday and heard the pragmatism of the motion picture industry praised above the exactitude of pre-examined campaigns and heard the value of psychology as a science questioned. In rebuttal Dr. List repeated his assertions that the advertising of motion pictures was "stale" and that unless the advertisers "woke up," the industry would "die." Mr. Dietz ridiculed Dr. List's suggestion that a "survey" be made from house to house to determine public tastes. The job, said Mr. Dietz, was not to give the public what it wants, but "what it imagines it wants."

The Crosley and other radio public preference surveys were then cited by Mr. Dietz, thus:

"I feel somehow that the man who conducts such a survey is accompanied by the ghost of Joe Miller. We in this industry could not survive on that basis."

While radio had been in its prime for the last ten years, the motion picture industry also had experienced a 100 per cent increase in theatre attendance, Mr. Dietz said, answering the intimations of Dr. List that radio was more successful through better advertising methods.

"If the people do come out from their homes to pay money in the theatres, one draws the conclusion that while it is true that they do stay at home to listen to the radio, it is also true that they only listen to the radio because they stay at home."

Mr. Dietz noted that radio does not charge admission to home listeners.

Calls Attendance Best Proof

The best proof of the success of present motion picture advertising methods is boxoffice attendance, Mr. Dietz said. Audiences, he asserted, would "long ago have rejected any entertainment" that did not come up to their expectations, "and they would not have come in such increasing numbers to the theatres, in these past years."

Mr. Dietz admitted motion picture ads used cliches, but the language, the pictures, the space, the types of stories enforced limitations, he pointed out.

"The most important thing in an advertisement," he said, "is to tell where the picture plays, when, and how much it costs."

Opening the debate, Mr. Goldberg made the points that radio programs attendances are not affected by the weather as are motion pictures, that a campaign for a radio program may extend over weeks and months, but motion picture advertisers must plan anew for a new picture every week, and that "radio gives away free what we sell; so our success is even more remarkable."

Mr. Goldberg said "little or nothing" could be learned from radio marketing, that the motion picture business was "a pragmatic" business, where "everything is tried."

Decries "Scientific Approach"

Mr. Goldberg declared the "scientific approach" does not apply in motion pictures because "you are practically in a new business every time you have a new picture to sell."

In reply, Dr. List said that neither radio nor psychology needed defense, but that "when the fourth industry in the world has to depend upon a few carloads of stars for its success, there's something wrong with that industry."

He asserted that the advertisements for the Motion Picture's Greatest Year campaign last year were an example of "stale" thinking.

"I say to you, as a psychologist," he added, "that unless you use the clean cut of a surgeon, the motion picture industry will bleed to death. You have fallen into a type of advertising that repeats itself a thousand times over and over."

Grand National Has Four Ready for Distribution

Grand National has two features and two westerns ready for distribution. The features are "Exile Express," starring Anna Sten and Alan Marshal, and "Panama Patrol," second of the Cipher Bureau pictures, which features Leon Ames, Charlotte Wynters and Adrienne Ames. The westerns are "The Singing Cowgirl," third of the series starring Dorothy Page, and "Six-Gun Rhythm," starring Tex Fletcher.

Sol Edwards, eastern division sales manager, has announced the following appointments of branch managers: Marcel Mekelberg, Boston; Bert Freese, Buffalo; Max Stahl, Cleveland; William Minder, New Orleans; Herbert Given, Philadelphia; Joe Hartman, St. Louis; Joe Kaliski, Washington; Paul Richrath, Albany; William Benjamin, Chicago, and Ralph Peckham, Detroit, and acting branch managers, Douglas Desch, Kansas City, and Max Shulgold, Pittsburgh.

Set Actor Refugee Unit

Actors' Equity has granted permission for the formation of Refugee Artists' Group in response to a request signed by Sam H. Harris, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart. The group will function as a cooperative unit under the direction of Beatrice Kaufman, the playwright's wife.

Aaron S. Rosenthal, formerly controller for Republic and Grand National, has opened an office in the Union Bank Building in Los Angeles as an accountant and tax consultant. He was for many years with the Internal Revenue department.

"Crisis," the Herbert Kline documentary film based on the recent Czechoslovakian situation, has been booked by Loew's for its entire metropolitan New York circuit. Mayer and Burstyn, New York, own the American distributing rights.

Twentieth-Fox Set for "Young Lincoln" Opening

Twentieth Century-Fox on Wednesday completed plans for the first public showing of its "Young Mr. Lincoln," to be held at the Fox-Lincoln theatre in Springfield, Ill., on the night of Memorial Day. The company says the State of Illinois and the City of Springfield are cooperating.

Newspaper critics from 22 cities, syndicate writers, photographers and trade press representatives in addition to governors of nearby states and educators and historians will make the pilgrimage to Lincoln's home city for the first showing of Darryl F. Zanuck's second Cosmopolitan production, as guests of the company. A special train will carry the easterners from New York to Springfield and special railroad accommodations have been arranged for those going from middle western cities. A special car will take Hollywood celebrities.

The Hollywood stars will participate in a nation-wide radio broadcast from the scene. Lowell Thomas will act as master of ceremonies for the radio part of the festivities and will introduce Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, who will sing a group of songs.

The broadcast will be staged before the audience in the theatre as a prologue to the picture. It will be relayed to station WGN, Chicago, and will be carried by 72 stations on the coast-to-coast network of Mutual Broadcasting, from 8:00 to 8:30 P. M., Central Time, and from 10:00 to 10:30 EDST.

In Springfield, headquarters for the visitors will be established in the Abraham Lincoln Hotel and the Leland Hotel. Special wire facilities for the working press will be provided and through arrangements with the Illinois State Journal the visiting newspapermen will have access to the equipment of the newspaper's editorial rooms.

The visitors will arrive in Springfield on the morning of May 30. They will be guests at a luncheon given by the civic organizations of the city. Lowell Thomas will respond to the speech of welcome by Mayor John W. Kapp and will introduce the motion picture celebrities. After luncheon the guests will be taken on a tour of the historical spots of the city, including the Lincoln Memorial and Lincoln's home.

Following the screening that night the guests will be entertained at a buffet supper at the Abraham Lincoln hotel. Entertainers will be taken from New York.

This week the Illinois State Legislature passed a resolution introduced by Representative Streeper, calling for the appointment of a committee of seven senators and seven representatives to represent the state at the premiere.

The program has been arranged by Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for Twentieth Century-Fox, and his home office staff, who will be hosts to the visitors on the trip to and from New York.

Fan Magazine Enlists Papers in Duals Survey

With the cooperation of local newspapers throughout the country, Screen Book, a Fawcett Publication, will launch, during the week of June 12, a "public preference" survey on the dual bill situation.

Ralph Daigh, managing editor of Screen Book, this week, said he had received indorsement of the idea, and a wish that the industry return to single features, from a majority of the studio executives.

Cinematone Corporation of Hollywood has announced the production of a newly perfected phonograph, "Penny Phono," which will play musical selections for one cent each. The "Penny Phono' will have 20 musical numbers on one record, 10 to each side and Cinematone will build the machines as well as make the recordings.

In a poll conducted at Mount St. Vincent, a Catholic college for women at Riverdale, N. Y., the students favored a voluntary censorship of motion pictures, stage and radio.

Junior Programs Will Expand to Pacific Coast

Expansion of the non-commercial theatrical organization known as Junior Programs, Inc., will be made to serve the entire country next season, with touring companies of adult professional opera, ballet, drama and other performers playing before audiences of children at movie admission prices averaging 10 cents to 25, going as far west as the Pacific Coast for the first time. The performers, equipment and scenery travel in mobile units, playing in school and municipal auditoriums and in film theatres, in arrangements with the local exhibitor, who usually sets morning matinees.

The Junior Programs report for 1938-39, made by Mrs. Dorothy L. McFadden, founder-director, to its directors at a meeting in New York, this week, showed a decrease to $13,305 from the 1937-38 deficit of $23,772.

Employment at Equity rates or better was given during 1938-39 to more than 50 adult professional performers, including opera singers, ballet dancers, players, musicians, lecturers, pupeteers, and other artists, the report revealed. Performances totalled 323, an increase of 33 per cent over 1937-38, and number of different communities served 130, an increase of 16 per cent over 1937-38.

A new opera and a new play will be added during 1939-40 to the organization's existing repertoire of two operas, three ballets and a play. And a small number of new individual artists have been approved by the organization's advisory committees of educators, child psychologists, and drama leaders for booking under Junior Programs banner.

For the coming season Junior Programs is now set to provide service to 31 states and Canada, with negotiations pending for six additional states.

Saul Lancourt, general manager in 1938-39, scheduled 59 performances by the ballet company in 63 days out and 49 performances by the opera company in 48 days out.

New advisory committee chairmen for Junior Programs, Inc., were announced as follows: Community relations—Dr. Garry C. Myers, honorary chairman; John W. Faust, chairman. Educational guidance—Dr. W. Carson Ryan, Jr., honorary chairman; Dr. Hugh B. Wood, chairman. Music—Eugene Goossens, honorary chairman; Lee Pattison, chairman. Drama—Jane Cowl, honorary chairman; Margaret Anglin, chairman. Radio—Mrs. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, honorary chairman; Margaret Harrison, chairman.

New quarters of Junior Programs have been set up at 37 West 57th Street. The organization was incorporated in 1936.

Joseph M. Koehler, who has been handling the promotion of the Sponsored Program Service for Muzak Corporation, a Warner affiliate, has resigned to devote his entire time to Radio Events, Inc., of which he is president.

Herman Bernie has resigned as head of the New York office of Myron Selznick agency.

Music Paces Action as Screen Widens Scope of 'The Mikado'

Film Liberates Characters from Stage Limitations and Unshackles Music, Too

by JOSEPH O'SULLIVAN

Gilbert and Sullivan addicts who have had the jitters at the thought of what might happen to the works of their idols when brought to the screen—who have envisioned the Savoyards butchered to make a musical-movie holiday—can rest easy. Likewise those practical showmen who have been puzzled by the delay in film production of the world's greatest comic operas, can stop wondering and chirp a few cheers.

For "The Mikado," the most popular of all Gilbert and Sullivan pieces, is finally exposed to view virtually in its entirety, and in gorgeous color. This is the Geoffrey Toye production, directed by Victor Schertzinger, enlisting most of the principals and all the chorus from the D'Oyly Carte company with the London Symphony Orchestra playing the score, released through Universal Pictures.

They're All There

It is important first to record that the cast measures up to the best ever assembled for this opus. Schooled in the authentic Savoyard traditions, they sing and act with authority; and there is nothing in the production that is not Gilbert and Sullivan. The lyrics, the dialogue, the music, the familiar "business" that has become a hallowed tradition of the Savoyards—they're all there. As Pooh-Bah says, "I counted them myself."

They're all there, although the satiric Gilbert might shudder at the ad lib expansion of his static stage business to fit the scope and movement of the screen. On the other hand, the great librettist might emit a sepulchral chuckle at the Gilbertian spirit that went him one better.

Sullivan Would Approve

But no matter how the old gaffer took it, certainly his collaborator, Arthur Seymour Sullivan, would approve, as the musical half of the opera team got all the better of the decision so far as the literal transcription of of his work is concerned. By getting the better of the decision, we mean that, while the Gilbert action is subjected to what might be termed "swing," the Sullivan score is retained in its pristine purity.

Understanding, Pace, Color

On the stage, the music is concerned almost solely with emphasizing the barbed shafts of the Gilbert satire and giving tonal wings to the librettist's flights. On the screen, the music interprets the fantasy of the lyrics and gives pace and color to the constantly shifting scene.

The most striking instance of this moving-musical treatment is Nanki-Poo's singing of "A Wand'ring Minstrel, I." The vagabond son of the Mikado, seeking Yum-Yum, renders this famous ballad while sauntering through the streets of Titipu, and every scene described in his song is shown in natural, unforced action. "Are you in sentimental mood? I'll sigh with you," he sings to two lovers discovered on a balcony. When the song swings into the allegro marziale of "If patriotic sentiment is wanted," a company of the Mikado's soldiers come marching by. A song of the sea "with a yeo heave ho, for the wind is free," brings him to a group of sailors on a corner, who join lustily in the chorus.

Allegretto con grazia.
NANKI.
A wan-d'ring min-strel
I A thing of shreds and patch-es, Of bal-lads songs and

The moving-musical treatment of the Gilbert and Sullivan light opera, "The Mikado," is evidenced in the singing of "A Wand'ring Minstrel" by Kenny Baker as Nanki-Poo in the Universal screen production.

Life and Movement

This is a most vividly effective demonstration of screen technic giving life and movement to the stage interpretation of descriptive song. And just as natural and effective is the scene following, where Pish-Tush strolls along with Nanki-Poo and tells him (in song) all about the great Mikado's "decree in words succinct, that all who jested, leered or winked (unless connubially linked), should forthwith be beheaded." The tempo of the music, in synchrony with the constant motion, keeps the action flowing throughout this sequence.

Breaking Gilbertian Bonds

Now, all this perpetual motion is not at all as Gilbert conceived these scenes, as the author of the Bab Ballads worked within the limitations of the stage, and within those limitations was an autocrat. He created his own world of topsy-turvydom and enacted arbitrary laws governing his subjects—how they were to talk, to walk, to react to every situation—every word and movement being geared to the gait conceived by their creator. There is no doubt that, were he living today, he would not be found wanting in the realm of the audible screen and would be the first to break his own traditions.

But Sullivan's music is not bound by any such limitations, and it actually seems to have become unshackled by the greater freedom of the screen and to take on new and richer meanings when merged with the other sound screen elements. The "Three Little Maids" is revealed as a scherzando of pattering feet and youthful insouciance. The enchanting madrigal, "Brightly Dawns Our Wedding Day," with golden-tongued bells seen swaying in Oriental towers, is a symphonette in color, action and sound. "The Moon and I" becomes a nocturnal reverie, and "Tit-Willow" a romantic bucolic burlesque. "The Lord High Executioner" follows more closely the stage pattern, as does the duet, "Were You Not To Ko-Ko Plighted," one of the loviest things in the opera.

The dramatic and the maestoso of the musical score are illustrated and emphasized by the pictured action and the pacing of the scenes. Katisha's first entrance, announced by a motif of impending doom for the luckless Ko-Ko, is a case in point. The music is cut down to the essential action, Katisha's big solo, "Ye Torrents Roar," being omitted.

No Counterpart on Stage

The most impressive coalition of action and music, one that could have no counterpart in any stage presentation, is the entrance of the Mikado and Katisha. To the accompaniment of the traditional Japanese "Miya Sama" and the cheers of the citizens of Titipu, the Mikado and his daughter-in-law-elect, while borne aloft by slaves on sumptuous palanquins, sing their well-known hymns of praise to themselves to the rhythmic tramp of their loyal legions who lift up their voices in chorus of assent and adulation.

Something to Ponder Over

At certain points in the picture, underscored music is used to dramatize the dialogue. Notably effective is that used in the scene of the first meeting of Nanki-Poo and Yum-Yum, a romance theme; and in the scene where Ko-Ko reads the message from the Mikado decreeing that there must be an execution within a year—or else. Here the "Miya Sama" is underscored, a threat in musical terms if Ko-Ko doesn't carry out the execution.

How Victor Schertzinger, who was recruited from Hollywood by producer Toye to direct "The Mikado," and Toye, himself, who directly supervised the music and conducted the London Symphony Orchestra in the production of the film, succeeded in preserving the sacred traditions, while expanding these lyric pictures within their own frames to the broader dimensions of the sound screen, without throwing the subjects out of perspective and inducing a Lord Chancellor's nightmare in the Old Guard of the Gilbert and Sullivan fans, is an achievement that will give the Savoyards something to ponder over.

ECKHARDT'S 25 YEARS IN INDUSTRY HONORED

Chicago Exchange of 20th Century-Fox Film Get Set for Silver Jubilee Drive in July

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Chicago's film industry will pay tribute throughout July to one of its outstanding leaders, Clyde W. Eckhardt, manager of the 20th Century-Fox Film exchange. The occasion is Mr. Eckhardt's 25th anniversary in the film business, during which time he has been with the Fox company almost exclusively.

Silver Jubilee Campaign

Clyde W. Eckhardt's Silver Jubilee is the title given a sales drive now being prepared for the month of July by the Chicago Fox staff. The local exchange is leading in the company's annual sales drive, which ends next month. This standing of his exchange in the company is pointed to as typical of Mr. Eckhardt's performance over the many years.

One goes back to 1899 to learn that it was then, as treasurer and advance representative of the Lincoln J. Carter Theatrical Attractions, Inc., that Mr. Eckhardt made his debut in the show business. He remained with the Carter company until 1907 when he became manager of three W. P. Shaver "legitimate" theatres. From 1909 until 1914, Mr. Eckhardt was traveling business manager of various attraction producing companies. During this time he augmented his business duties with acting assignments, and played varying roles when emergencies prevented a member of the cast from appearing.

Into Films in 1914

In the early summer of 1914 Mr. Eckhardt entered the motion picture industry as assistant to the manager of the A. W. Cross Independent Film Company. The following year, on September 13, 1915, he entered the employ of the Fox Film Company as an assistant manager of the Pittsburgh exchange. It was three months later, on November 15, that he was made branch manager, holding that position until June 4, 1917, when he was promoted to an executive position at the home office of Fox. On September 25, 1917, he took over the managership of the Chicago exchange.

Mr. Eckhardt remained in charge of the Chicago branch until April 21, 1923, when he was brought back to the home office to serve as assistant to Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the company. In April, 1926, he returned to Chicago and has been here ever since as branch manager. In the last seven years the Chicago exchange under his guidance, has shown a remarkable increase in earning power, according to company executives. The Dynamo, the company's house organ, said, "No branch of the organization, here or abroad, has this season effected the over-quota record that Clyde Eckhardt's Chicago can boast." The local exchange exceeded its quota 29 out of the first 38 weeks of the season.

First Head of Board of Trade

No history of the film industry in Chicago would be complete without innumerable references to Mr. Eckhardt and his efforts on behalf of the industry as a whole. He was the first president of the late Film Board of Trade and was its president when it was disbanded some months ago. He helped organize the board.

One of the important jobs that confronts the film industry in Chicago every year is participation in charity drives. As head of the Community Chest fund, Will Rogers and NVA drives in the amusement industry here at various times Mr. Eckhardt has been noted for his over-quota accomplishments.

CLYDE W. ECKHARDT

New Exchange Building

One of the outstanding features of the Clyde W. Eckhardt Silver Jubilee will be the opening of the new 20th Century-Fox exchange building on the northwest corner of 13th street and Wabash avenue. The opening is scheduled for the middle of July and the $150,000 two-story building will take its place as one of the finest exchange structures in the country. Air-conditioned, fireproof in every detail, the building will be a fitting tribute to the man whose expert leadership in a large way made it possible.

Throughout Chicagoland and the surrounding territory some 565 exhibitors and other film distribution executives will join in helping Eckhardt celebrate his Silver Jubilee at an event now in preparation.

The idea of the Silver Jubilee celebration started with the employees of the local exchange, who plan to make the month of July one of record-breaking business.

Mr. Eckhardt is known throughout the industry for his business ability. His word is law when it comes to a film deal and although they say he drives many a hard bargain he has the respect of all who deal with him.

Loew's, Inc., has filed an appeal in the infringement suit of Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, authors, who won a judgment of $532,153 against Loew's on a charge of plagiarism of their play "Dishonored Lady" in the MGM picture, "Letty Lynton." The appeal argues the computation of damages.

Edwin Bergman, of Twentieth Century-Fox, recently promoted from the road to Cleveland salesman, was a dinner guest Thursday at the Mahoning Country Club, Girard, Ohio. The occasion also marked Mr. Bergman's 14th anniversary with Fox.

Bank Night Legal In South Carolina

Promotion plans akin to Bank Night are not violations of the lottery laws and are therefore legal in South Carolina, the state supreme court ruled this week. The ruling affirmed a lower court order restraining the late Sheriff J. H. Coker of Darlington County from interferring with the operation of such a plan by the Darlington Theatres, Inc., and H. R. Berry, theatre operator.

The case was selected for appeal as a test of the anti-lottery laws, although the involved theatres abandoned Bank Night before the suit was heard by the court.

Connecticut Bingo Bill

In Connecticut a Bingo bill, which has been revised to include any licensed operator, instead of "charitable" organizations only, has passed the Senate and is expected to pass the House as well, once more legalizing chance games in Connecticut. Restrictions imposed as to limitation of prizes to $250 in merchandise, local option, one-a-week operation, and others, are, however, intended to eliminate promoters.

Elsewhere chance games fared less favorably. In New Hampshire, the attorney general's office ruled that Bank Night is in violation of the law against lotteries and constitute a gambling practice.

In North Dakota, Charles Verett, assistant attorney general, and John Grey, chief of the regulatory department, are making a statewide tour, ordering discontinuance of gambling devices of all kinds. Proceedings for revocation of licenses will be instituted against all deatres which continue chance drawings, Mr. Grey said.

In New York City another effort on the part of circuits is being fostered to eliminate games.

To Pennsylvania Supreme Court

Another move was made this week to determine the exact status of Bank Night in Pennsylvania. James A. Mook, Meadville district attorney, appealed to the state supreme court a recent county court decision granting a permanent injunction against interference with the game at the Park theatre in Meadville. Mr. Mook said the question had never been carried to the state's appellate court.

The Cincinnati police department reports a falling off of 26 per cent in the number of Bingo games in that city as compared with the March figures.

Mr. Einfeld Recommends "Family Affair"

Motion Picture Herald has from S. Charles Einfeld of Warner Brothers a radiogram from Hollywood in which he enthusiastically says:

"Just about this time last year I wired you about 'Four Daughters' and predicted its success. I am now happy to tell you that last night we sneaked 'Family Affair,' which is a follow up to 'Four Daughters' with the same cast but with a totally new and different kind of story. I am willing to go on record with more enthusiasm about this picture than 'Four Daughters' from every standpoint.

"Here we have portrayed the life of a typical American family with its joys and human frailties; it is the type of picture we believe the public wants more and more of from this industry. As in the case of 'Four Daughters', 'Family Affair' is one of the greatest screen advertisements for the business, and is the kind of picture that makes going to the movies a habit."

THEATRES AFFECTED BY CHANGES IN FILM HANDLING UNDER FIRE RULES

Larger Projection Rooms Required for New and Remodeled Theatres; Exchanges, Laboratories, Vaults Affected

Substantial changes in the regulations governing film buildings and in the general handling, storage and exhibition of regular motion picture (nitrocellulose) film have been made by the National Fire Protection Association, as proposed by its "special committee on hazardous chemicals and explosives," and duly approved last Thursday by the association at its annual meeting in Chicago.

New Buildings Affected

As the full body was voting changes further to protect the motion picture industry in its own campaign to avoid conflagrations, the City of Chicago itself was battling one of the worst fires in its history, a $4,000,000 grain elevator fire that took nine lives, almost within the shadow of the organization's meeting in the Stevens Hotel.

The new regulations for the motion picture industry will principally affect new construction of theatres—some 400 new structures are put up annually. Hereafter they must provide for larger projection rooms. The rules similarly affect all theatre remodeling jobs where the present booth does not conform to the new sizes: eight feet wide by ten feet deep and eight feet high, for one projectionist and 14 feet wide, 10 feet deep and eight feet high for two operators. Standing theatres which are not remodeling are not compelled to enlarge their booths.

Apply to Exchanges Also

In one way or another the changes apply to the 256 film exchanges of the eight major companies and the 157 independent exchanges, also to the numerous laboratories handling nitrocellulose film, and to the storage vaults of the companies in Hollywood and New York, besides the theatres.

In some places local fire or building ordinances require adherence to rules and regulations promulgated by the National Fire Protection Association. In others, exhibitors, distributors and businessmen in other fields usually find it advisable to comply in order to avoid increased fire insurance rates which follow noncompliance. In any case, it was pointed out, the major companies, in exhibition, distribution, laboratories and elsewhere in production, strictly comply with Fire Protection Association's rules and regulations, as recommended by the majors' own film fire-and-safety department, an adjunct of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and in charge of Arthur S. Dickinson.

Committee Members

Some indication of the nationwide authority behind the National Fire Protection Association's committee in charge of regulating the handling, shipping and exhibition of motion picture films, can be gleaned from its membership: L. F. Adams, National Electrical Manufacturers Association; A. L. Armstrong, Eastman Kodak Company's department on fire film hazards; C. P. Beistle, Bureau of Explosives, Association of American Railroads; George W. Booth, National Board of Fire Underwriters; L. K. Davis, Factory Insurance Association; Lawrence Daw, New York Fire Insurance Rating Organization; Arthur S. Dickinson, MPPDA; E. E. Elm, Chicago Board of Underwriters; Cecil H. Fisher, Institute of Makers of Explosives; Bernard Flood; T. Z. Franklin, Conference of Special Risk Underwriters.

Also, A. B. Guise, Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Companies; William G. Hayne, New York Board of Fire Underwriters; Charles P. Holmes, Western Actuarial Bureau; Garrett B. James, Western Factory Insurance Association; Harold A. Knapp, Mutual Fire Inspection Bureau; R. C. Loughead, Michigan Inspection Bureau; H. L. Miner, Manufacturing Chemists' Association; L. B. Newell, New York Fire Insurance Rating Organization; Marshall Rouse, Pacific Board of Fire Underwriters; H. S. Smith, Compressed Gas Manufacturers Association, and C. B. White, Chemical Fire Extinguisher Association.

SH! IT'S CASE OF HIDDEN IDENTITIES

Paramount recently announced "without comment" plans for a picture to be titled "Heil America". Paramount last week further announced that no further announcements would be made about the picture. Said this announcement ending all announcements about the picture:

"Identity of the writers who are working on the story was withheld. An effort will be made as well to shield the identity of the director, and members of the cast."

Rule Extended

The aforementioned membership enacted the new rules and regulations governing motion picture film, voting to extend the rule for approving of plans for buildings to be used for motion picture film occupancy, to include the approval also of plans for installing any projection or screening room, which heretofore was not necessary, previous approval only being necessary for an actual building or remodeling of a building.

Projection rooms and other rooms in which film is handled, either in theatres, exchanges or elsewhere, hereafter shall be provided with aisle space not less than 30 inches clear where walking is necessary.

Fire appliances, and not the old-style water pails, are to be provided for rooms in which film is stored or handled, except film vaults.

Considerable changes are made in the rules and regulations of structures or rooms housing projection machines (projection booths and such).

Provisions are made for the processing, cleaning, polishing and buffing of film, including such processes done in theatres, where they must be confined to a rewind room.

Splicing of film in theatres must be made on mechanical cutting and splicing machines.

The revisions made last week by the Fire Protection Association are the first since 1936, when amendments were made to the original regulations of 1931. The regulations now stand as follows. Revisions are indicated by italics.

INTRODUCTION.

4. Approval of Plans. Before constructing any building for use as a motion picture film occupancy, or remodeling any building for such occupancy, or building any film vault, or installing any enclosure for motion picture projection, or installing any screening room, complete plans of such proposed construction or installation should be submitted to the inspection department having jurisdiction for approval. These plans shall show in detail all proposed construction and structural changes and the means of protection to be provided, the heating system with the protection for it, the electrical equipment, and the character and location of exposures.

PART I. GENERAL PROVISIONS REGARDING THE STORAGE AND HANDLING OF MOTION PICTURE FILM.

SECTION II.—CONSTRUCTION AND ARRANGEMENT OF BUILDINGS.

112. Partitions. (a) All rooms in which motion picture film is stored or handled, except motion picture projection rooms and film vaults, shall be separated from each other and from all other parts of the building by partitions of suitable stability and having a fire retardant classification of not less than 1 hour as determined by the Standard Fire Test. Partitions constructed as follows shall be deemed to have the required fire retardant classification:

114. Exits. It is essential that all rooms in which film is handled be provided with adequate aisle space and safe means of egress. Aisle space should not be less than 30 inches clear wherever walking is necessary. Rooms in which film is handled and in which more than two persons work shall have two or more exits, remote from each other. Every exit shall be marked "Exit" in letters not less than 6 inches high, or by an illuminated sign with letters of the same height.

115. Vents. All new buildings erected to be used for film occupancy, and all existing buildings remodelled for, such occupancy, except projection rooms (subsection 191), rewind rooms (paragraph 212) and rooms associated therewith (paragraph 213(a)4), shall be provided in every room where film is stored or handled, with vents that will open automatically in case of fire. These should be of ample size; they may be in the form of automatic skylights or automatic-opening window sash. All rooms in which film is stored or handled in existing buildings shall be provided with such vents wherever practicable.

SECTION 12.—ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT

122. All electrical wiring and equipment shall conform to the National Electrical Code. The wiring method shall be rigid metal conduit or other approved type of metal raceway. Fuses shall be enclosed.

123. Light fixtures shall be firmly fixed in place, and lights shall be protected by vapor-tight globes. All lights shall be equipped with keyless sockets and operated by wall switches.

125. Portable electric lights on extension cords shall not be used in any room in which film is handled or stored, other than the stage of motion picture studios, except that in emergency such portable lamps may be used if equipped with approved keyless sockets and metal protective lamp guards, and having rubber-covered cords of the Hard Surface (type S) or Junior Hard Surface (type SJ) varieties, with suitable locking plugs.

127. Motion picture projectors and other associated electrical equipment shall be of approved type and safeguarded in accordance with the requirements of the National Electrical Code.

SECTION 13.—HEATING EQUIPMENT.

133. Air conditioning, warm air heating, air cooling and ventilating systems employing ducts shall be installed in accordance with the "Regulations on Air Conditioning, Warm Air Heating, Air Cooling and Ventilating Systems." In addition to the fire dampers required by said regulations, approved automatic fire dampers shall also be located at such points as may be necessary so that, as far as the duct system is concerned, each room in which film is handled is cut off by dampers from every other room, including those where film is handled as well as those where film is not handled. (See Par. 191(g) regarding ventilation of projection rooms.) Any system used for air conditioning a film vault shall be extremely independent, with no duct connecting to any other vault or room.

SECTION 14.—SPRINKLERS AND OTHER FIRE PROTECTION APPLIANCES.

144. Omit the words "water pails" from the Note so that the paragraph reads:

144. Every room in which film is stored or handled, except film vaults, shall be provided with first aid fire appliances of types using water or water solutions.

NOTE.—Small hose equipment is recommended, and the following types of extinguishers are considered suitable: Soda acid, calcium chloride, pump tank, and loaded stream.

See regulations on First Aid Fire Appliances, and Standpipe and Hose Systems.

SECTION 19.—MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION AND SPECIAL PROCESSES.

be operated or set up for operation only within an approved enclosure, not less than 48 square feet in size and 7 feet high. If more than one machine is to be operated an additional 24 square feet shall be provided for each additional machine.

For new construction, a size not less than 8 feet wide, 10 feet deep and 8 feet high is recommended for one projection machine, and not less than 14 feet wide, 10 feet deep and 8 feet high for two machines.

(b) The walls and ceiling of the enclosure shall be built of brick, tile, or plaster blocks, plastered on both sides, or of concrete, or of a rigid metal frame, properly braced, and sheathed and roofed with sheet iron of not less than No. 20 U.S. gauge metal, or with ¼-inch hard asbestos board, securely riveted or bolted to the frame, or 2 inches of solid metal lath and cement or gypsum plaster. All joints shall be sufficiently tight to prevent the discharge of smoke. Non-combustible acoustical material may be used on ceiling and walls, on top of the plaster.

For new construction, it is recommended that the walls of the enclosure be constructed in accordance with the requirements of subsection 112, paragraphs (1), (2), or (3), for partitions, with floor and ceiling of equivalent fire resistance. Modern heavy equipment may require special attention to floor strength and support. In some cases it may be necessary to support the projection room independently of the structure.

(c) The entrance door into the enclosure shall be at least 2 feet by 5 feet, of construction equivalent to the sheathing permitted above for rigid frame construction, and shall be self closing, swinging out, and shall be kept closed at all times when not used for egress or ingress.

For new construction it is recommended that at least two doors be provided, each not less than 30 inches wide and 6 feet high. Doors should be approved fire doors of a type suitable for use in corridor and room partitions (Class C openings as defined in the Regulations on Protection of Openings in Walls and Partitions). Exits should be in accordance with requirements of authorities having jurisdiction, particularly as to size and location. At least one should be of the conventional stairway type, having a suitable landing at the top or should open directly onto a corridor.

(d) Two openings for each motion picture projector shall be provided; one for the projectionist's view (observation port) shall be not larger than 200 square inches, and the other through which the picture is projected (projection port) shall be not larger than 120 square inches. Where separate stereopticon, spot or flood light machines are installed in the same enclosure with picture machines, not more than one opening for each such machine shall be provided for both the operator's view and for the projection of the light, but two or more machines may be operated through the same opening; such openings shall be as small as practicable and shall be capable of being protected by approved automatic shutters.

(e) Each opening shall be provided with an approved gravity shutter set into guides not less than one inch at sides and bottom, and overlapping the top of the opening by not less than one inch when closed. Shutters shall be of not less than 10-gauge iron or its equivalent, or of ¼-inch hard asbestos board. Guides shall be of not less than 10-gauge iron or its equivalent. Shutters shall be suspended, arranged and interconnected so that all openings will close upon the operating of some suitable fusible or mechanical releasing device, designed to operate automatically in case of fire or other contingency requiring the immediate and complete isolation of the contents of the enclosure from other portions of the building. Each shutter shall have a fusible link above it, and there shall also be one located over each upper projector magazine which, upon operating, will close all the shutters. There shall also be provided suitable means for manually closing all shutters simultaneously from any projector head and from a point within the projection room near each exit door. Shutters on openings not in use shall be kept closed.

(f) All shelves, furniture and fixtures within the enclosure shall be constructed of incombustible material. Tables shall conform to paragraph 117. No combustible material of any sort whatever shall be permitted or allowed to be within such enclosure, except the films used in the operation of the machine, and film cement. See Section 214.

(g) Ventilation shall be provided by one or more mechanical exhaust systems which shall draw air from each arc lamp housing and from one or more points near the ceiling. Systems shall exhaust to outdoors either directly or through a non-combustible flue used for no other purpose. Exhaust capacity shall be not less than 15 nor more than 50 cubic feet per minute for each arc lamp plus 200 *cubic feet per minute for the room itself. Systems shall be controlled from within the enclosure and have pilot lights to indicate operation. IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Susannah of the Mounties

(20th Century-Fox)

Action Adventure

In keeping with the studio's policy of providing Shirley Temple with roles of increasing dramatic importance, she will be seen in her most mature role in "Susannah of the Mounties." She will be seen as an orphan girl, parents massacred by Indians. Her cheerful disposition, courage and diplomacy bring peace between whites and Blackfeet warriors during the roaring Northwest Canadian era of the early 1880's. Adopted by the historic Mounted Police, Shirley, entrusted with the responsibilities of a grownup, rides horseback, shares the perils of the wilderness, becomes jealous of a city beauty who wins the heart of her favorite Mounty, is initiated into Indian tribal customs, and finally brings about the end of savage warfare in a series of thrill packed sequences.

While Shirley and her new type of production (the only one approaching similarity was "Wee Willie Winkie") naturally will come first in showmanship, there are other worthy items, particularly the supporting cast. Randolph Scott, who was with Shirley in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," will be the Mounty. The city girl is Margaret Lockwood, now featured in "The Lady Vanishes" and soon to be seen in "Ruler of the Seas." A second lead is a full-blooded Blackfeet Indian boy, 13-year-old Martin Goodrider. Among others who have important roles are J. Farrell MacDonald, who appeared with Shirley in one of her early features, "Our Little Girl," Victor Jory, one of the foremost of the industry's Indian character delineators, who played "Injun Joe" in "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," Maurice Moscovitch, Moroni Olsen, Lester Matthews, Leyland Hodgson and Jack Luden. There will be a full tribe of Blackfeet Indians and thousands of other extras.

William A. Seiter, associated with scores of big pictures, is the director. The story is out of a book by Muriel Denison, from which material selected by Fidel LaBarba and Walter Ferris was completed in screen play form by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan.

Release date: July 28, 1939.

Disputed Passage

(Paramount)

Human Interest Melodrama

To exhibitors and patrons who are fed up on the present routine of entertainment offerings, diverse and varied as they may be, Paramount's picturization of Louis Bromfield's best selling novel, "Disputed Passage," should be of more than usual significance. Picture theatre patrons remember his "The Magnificent Obsession," "White Banners" and "Green Light."

"Disputed Passage" is the story of two doctors and a girl. The picture will not be just another "doctor-hospital" show; rather, it will be a seriously premised human interest melodrama given fictional treatment but having a basis in fact. It concerns a doctor whose god is science, another and younger physician who is experiencing his first adventures in ministering to mankind's needs, and a girl who must make a vital decision.

Akim Tamiroff, now in "Union Pacific," will be seen in a powerful role as the doctor who is guided by science, and John Howard will be the youthful practitioner to whom life and the problems of life are almost unfathomable mysteries. Dorothy Lamour will be called upon to play a strongly emotional part, radically different from anything she has essayed. The featured supporting players are headed by Gordon Jones, Judith Barrett, Oscar O'Shea and Elisabeth Risdon.

Frank Borzage, the director, was in charge of "Green Light," "The Shining Hour" and "Three Comrades."

Release date: to be determined.

Inside Information

(Universal)

Crime Melodrama

"Inside Information" will be a "cops and robbers" picture. The basic elements contained in the original story by Martin Mooney and Burnet Hershey, as well as those in Alex Gottleib's screen play, are similar to those used many times before. New twists, however, have been incorporated into the production, which is an Irving Starr picture. His record includes the "Crime Club" series and "Gambling Ship." The director, Charles Lamont, has specialized lately in melodramatic material, and has about 20 crime stories to his credit.

While the familiar situations and reactions again will be developed, the chief difference from formula will be the manner in which a rookie policeman uses modern scientific crime detection methods, very much of the Sherlock Holmes standard. En route he wins the girl, daughter of an old line police captain who had no time for anything but "third degree" methods.

For name values, "Inside Information" will offer Dick Foran, presently in Monogram's Jackie Cooper picture, "Streets of New York"; Harry Carey, June Lang, now in "Captain Fury;" Mary Carlisle, Joseph Sawyer, Addison Richards and Grant Richards, lately in "Under the Big Top" and "Risky Business."

Release date: June 2, 1939.

Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation

(20th Century-Fox)

Crime Melodrama

The eighth number in the series dealing with the amazing escapades of J. P. Marquand's Oriental detective character has as locales an Arabian desert, a transoceanic liner and a museum in San Francisco. The plot has to do with the discovery of the crown of the Queen of Sheba, the risks encountered during its transportation to America and Mr. Moto's skill in preventing its theft by rival gangs of international crooks. Melodrama, mystery, comedy, excitement, action are emphasized.

Norman Foster, director of all but one of the "Moto" series, is again in charge. The story used is an original screen play which he and Philip MacDonald concocted.

As usual Peter Lorre will be featured. His supporting cast includes Joseph Schildkraut, Lionel Atwill, Virginia Field, John King, Iva Stewart, George P. Huntley, Jr., Victor Varconi, John Bleifer, Honorable Wu, Morgan Wallace, Anthony Warde, Harry Strang and John Davidson.

Release date: July 7, 1939.

What a Life

(Paramount)

Comedy

The entertainment substance of "What a Life" will be material that has not claimed much screen attention of late. It's about the everyday troubles of a school boy. The lad who is the hero couldn't turn around without getting himself into some sort of scrape. The blundering, bewildered boy finally finds himself in a real jam, all because he wants to take a certain girl to the school Prom.

The basis of the production is a play by Clifford Goldsmith which during its New York run received favorable comment. It was transcribed to the screen by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder. The director, Theodore Reed, numbers among his credits "I'm from Missouri" and "Tropic Holiday."

The leading name value is Jackie Cooper, who, through a series of exceptional productions culminating with "Streets of New York," has regained popularity. Others who will be seen are Betty Field, John Howard, Janice Logan, Lionel Stander, James Corner, Dorothy Stickney, Lucien Littlefield, Kathleen Lockhart and Hedda Hopper.

Release date: to be determined.

Memory of Love

(RKO-Radio)

Problem Play

Two items of more than casual showmanship importance in "Memory of Love" recommend themselves to exhibitors. One is cast strength. For names the picture will make available Carole Lombard and Cary Grant (co-featured some years ago in "Sinners in the Sun" and "The Eagle and the Hawk") and Kay Francis in the principal roles. Miss Lombard's recent pictures are "Made for Each Other," "Fools for Scandal" and "Nothing Sacred"; Grant's are "Gunga Din" and "Only Angels Have Wings." "Memory of Love" is first of eight productions which Miss Francis, long with Warner Bros., will do for RKO-Radio. Secondary name values are Charles Coburn, featured in "Alexander Graham Bell," "Made for Each Other," "Idiot's Delight," Jonathan Hale, Helen Vinson, last in "Live, Love and Learn" and "Vogues of 1938," Nella Walker, Katherine Alexander and little Peggy Ann Garner.

The story is essentially seriously premised mature entertainment, a study of the modern divorce problem. The right to happiness of a man who is married in name only and of a woman who loves him but would sacrifice that love rather than break up his home, forms the theme of the up-to-date production. Grant, married to Miss Francis, who admits she wed him for money and social position, falls in love with Miss Lombard. Miss Francis refuses to get or give a divorce. The problem is resolved in a daring manner.

A novel of the same title by Bessie Breuer is the story basis. Although screen play writing credits have not as yet been determined, the film, a George Haight production, is being directed by John Cromwell, who made "Algiers" and "Made for Each Other."

Release date: To be determined.

W. E. Shows Sound System For Theatres

A new sound system to be handled by distributors of Western Electric theatre equipment abroad was introduced to the industry in New York Monday at a sales exhibition held by the Electrical Research Products, Inc., at the Hotel Astor. Simultaneously, exhibitions were given in New York, Havana, Mexico City, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Santiago, Lima, Manila, London, Montreal, Singapore, Sydney and Wellington.

In Toronto, Dominion Sound Equipments Ltd., distributors of Northern Electric theatre equipment, demonstrated the equipment at the Royal York Hotel.

The new system is adaptable to theatres of any size and the design anticipates such future advances in recording as indicated in the high volume prints being experimented on in Hollywood.

Among the refinements made in the new system is the use of a special liquid in place of a regular oil in the rotary stabilizer mechanism. The liquid, the chemical composition of which is not disclosed, is declared to be unaffected by extreme variations in temperature encountered in some parts of the world. Power has been increased to more than double the minimum recommended by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

All of the soundhead shafts turn on ball bearings, and single sprocket threading is employed, effecting a minimum.

Another departure from the previous design is a device for supporting the motor, with location of the constant speed drive motor in a central position on one side of the reproducer set where, regardless of the projection angle, the motor-armature and its associated drive shaft operate horizontally. This mounting also permits direct coupling through helical gears between the motor and its load. A silent link-chain of hardened steel couples the reproducer and the projector mechanism. The link-chain enables projectionists to interchange mechanisms between reels.

The reproducer set is designed to operate with all standard makes of projector mechanisms.

Protection against excessive motor current occasioned by subnormal line voltage, or other contingency, is afforded by an "overload sentry" which automatically functions as an instantaneous circuit breaker when needed.

Concentric feed lines carry the sound in a protecting metal sheath during transit from the photoelectric cells to the individual preamplifiers, shielding it from exterior electrical influence. Acoustic compensators are built into the electrical circuits. All vacuum tubes are "cascaded" through pure resistance elements, and the operation of every tube may be checked by means of a built-in test set.

ERPI officials attending the exhibition were: T. K. Stevenson, president; Fred Foster, controller; E. S. Gregg, general foreign manager; Miles Goldrick, assistant general foreign manager; Clifford W. Smith, west coast vice-president; Dr. Donald MacKenzie, director of engineering; E. W. McLellan, foreign department; Herbert Forster, Western Electric information manager, and C. L. Stong.

At the Toronto exhibition the speakers included A. B. Hunt, manager of the Special Products Division, Northern Electric Company, and S. T. Fisher, assistant development engineer of the same division.

Warners Announce Series Of "Good Neighbor" Films

"Juarez" is the first of a series of what Warner Brothers consider to be "good neighbor" pictures, with a tendency to knit together the Americas, according to Sam E. Morris, vice-president of Warner Pictures. "Our company is planning other films dealing with the struggle for independence and democracy in the Western Hemisphere; the next having as its central figure General Simon Bolivar, the 'George Washington' of South America," he added.

"Warners are planning to release 'Juarez' simultaneously in Buenos Aires, Santiago, Lima, Medellin, Caracas, Colon, Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Havana and San Juan early in July. In each country the premiere will be sponsored by the resident minister of Mexico," said Mr. Morris.

Says Sound Will Shape Buildings

Buildings shaped by sound, rather than by geometry alone, may add a strange new beauty to the architecture of tomorrow, J. P. Maxfield and C. C. Potwin of Electrical Research Products, said Monday at the 10th anniversary meeting of the Acoustical Society of America, in session at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. The acoustic factor has grown so important in the eyes of architects that today the requirements of good listening are beginning to exert a profound influence on the appearance of new structures, they added.

The demands of proper acoustics are now taken into account when the plans for a building are drawn, in contrast with the former practice of waiting until it was finished and then applying corrective treatment. Surprisingly, modern architects have found that, by following the acoustic requirements closely, in design, new shapes and contours of added beauty often resulted.

One method described involves coordinating the shape of the room with the placement of sound absorbing material in such manner that undesirable sound reflections and echoes are dispersed and blended to produce a more pleasing acoustic effort. It also calls for a more scattered arrangement of the sound absorbing materials or "padding," and makes it possible to create good listening conditions even in spaces of most unconventional basic design.

New Red Cross Reel

A one reel picture entitled "Footsteps," which portrays the training of the Red Cross nurse and the work she performs has been completed by the American Red Cross. The film's purpose is to acquaint the public with the scope and nature of the organization's activities. Class-room lectures, laboratory research, bedside practice and operating room procedure are introduced, and the three different paths a graduate nurse can take to serve are shown: First, as a reserve nurse to be called on only in emergencies; second, as a home hygiene nurse, and finally as a Public Health Nurse among the needy in regions where doctors, nurses and hospitals are few. The film was produced by the William J. Ganz Company, with Milton J. Cross as narrator.

De Vry Says It's Now Ready for 16mm Newsreels

Local newsreels on 16 mm. film appear to have taken another step forward—this time with the introduction, last Friday, of a 16 mm. sound projector designed for theatre use, and developed by the De Vry Corporation, whose president, Herman De Vry, had conceived the idea of local newsreels some 10 years ago.

Demonstrated before metropolitan circuit heads and newsreel theatre operators, the new De Vry projector is designed for heavy duty service uses, having carbon arc lighting, and is provided with magazines for 4,000 feet of 16 mm. film, the equivalent of 10,000 feet in 5 mm. film. A separate ventilation system and a sound system connecting in with the existing amplification.

Mr. De Vry's plan is to rent the projectors on a month to month basis, with branch offices established for the developing, printing and editing of the footage taken by a local newspaper photographer. At these branch offices, which will be operated on a franchise basis, the newspaper, which is the real producer of the film, may also purchase scenarios.

The first move in a competitive direction made in the newsreel field since Universal re-entered the field with the advent of sound in 1927, the local reels, on safety film, will have no advertising matter in them. The idea of "five and dime" movies has been abandoned, according to Hugh Elsasser, New York newsreel director for the De Vry company, with efforts now being concentrated on placing the local reels into theatres as a special attraction. Contracts are now held with 37 houses in the Illinois area, Mr. Elsasser said.

Difficulties experienced in the working out of the De Vry plan in previous years are now believed to be ironed out, with the introduction of the new projector. Theatres in Illinois, Colorado, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Minnesota, as well as the 190 in Iowa subscribing to the Burton Jerrel "News Flashes," have been using local newsreels.

The Cinecolor Company has announced a method of processing 16 mm. films in color. The film is single coated. A. L. McCormick, president of the company, claims many advantages for the new film. It is said that the single-coated film will require no change of focus on the part of the projectionist, handling will be easy, as will splicing of the new film, the danger of scratching will be minimized and a sharp image will be yielded.

Myer P. Beck, formerly publicity manager for United Artists, has been appointed eastern representatives for Russell Birdwell and Associates of Hollywood. He will open offices soon. Among talent handled by the company are Norma Shearer, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Loretta Young and Edmund Goulding.

Fred Matthews has joined Motiograph, Inc., in a supervisory capacity. He is a brother of Thor Matthews, recently named president.

PROFITS FOR MONOGRAM, UNIVERSAL, RADIO-KEITH-ORPHEUM, TECHNICOLOR

RKO Clears $388,823 in Thirteen Weeks, Contrasted with $53,205 Loss for Same Quarter in the Preceding Year

Profits from operations were reported this week by Monogram Pictures, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation through its trustees, by Technicolor, and Wall Street sources reported substantial profits for Universal.

RKO's trustees told the New York federal court in charge of the reorganization that the company had cleared $388,823 in the 13 weeks to April 1st, against a $53,205 loss for the same quarter in 1938. In its report for all of 1938, issued two weeks ago, the trustees listed profits for the year at $18,604.

Monogram's profits for five months to April 1st were $57,308, Technicolor earned $310,500 in the first three months of 1938, and Universal's half-year profits, to May 1st, are estimated at $400,000.

Dividends were declared this week by Consolidated Film Industries—25 cents per share on preferred, payable July 1st—and by Eastman Kodak, which will pay $1.50 per share on its common, on July 1st.

The profits reported this week add to those disclosed in the May 6th issue, when a combined net of $14,200,721 was listed for six companies; Loew's $7,268,847 for 28 weeks; Paramount, $4,105,675, for 52 weeks; Twentieth Century-Fox, $1,224,250, 13 weeks; RKO, $18,604, 52; General Theatres, $145,544, for 13 weeks, and RCA, $1,488,110, for 13.

RKO Nets $388,822 in Quarter

Andrew Christensen, vice-president of the Irving Trust Company, acting as the trustee's representative, submitted to Federal Court in New York last Thursday the eighth report of the Irving Trust Company, showing an estimated net profit for the quarter ending April 1st of $388,822 for RKO. The net profit indicated is after all charges, including the accrual of $191,027 on outstanding debentures and gold notes, but before provision for dividends on the Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred stock. The result for the quarter compares with a net loss of $53,205 for the corresponding period a year ago.

Also disclosed by the report was the fact that the remaining $50,000 of RKO secured gold notes outstanding have been extended to June 30th, and that a further extension will be asked by the trustee later. The fixed indebtedness of RKO was further reduced by $610,776 during the latter half of 1938, making the total reduction since July 1st, 1934, $8,026,238. Cash increased approximately $2,650,000 during the same period, rising to about $7,650,000.

Universal Nets $400,000

Heralding the first six month profit for the company in eight years, Universal's earnings for the first half of the fiscal year ended May 1st have been estimated at approximately $400,000 by Wall Street sources. The expected results for the period compares with a loss of approximately $500,000 for the same time last year.

The company reported a profit for the final quarter of its fiscal year ended November 1st, although operations for the year ended in a loss. However, with a profit shown for the six months just ended, Universal has been in the black for the last nine months, a record for the company not matched within the past 10 years.

The consolidated net earnings of Technicolor, Inc., and Technicolor Motion Picture Company for the first quarter of 1939 were $310,500 after estimated taxes, comparing to the $360,889 for the same period last year. Higher wage levels were advanced as one reason for the lower earnings. The footage delivered in the period amounted to 20,837,521 against 20,560,000 a year ago.

At the stockholders' meeting held Monday at which the profit was announced, four directors were unanimously reelected for a term of three years: George F. Lewis, Robert Cushman, Murray D. Welch and John McHugh.

Monogram Profit $57,308

Monogram earned a consolidated profit of $57,308 for the five month period ending April 1st, 1939. The company's operations for the first three months of this year show a consolidated profit of $20,175 after amortization. This unaudited figure does not make provision for Federal income taxes.

O. Henry Briggs, president of the Pathe Film Corporation, received a salary of $25,531 in 1938, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported Monday. In radio, Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Crosley Corporation, received $25,000. Vice-presidents Lewis Crosley and James D. Shouse received $20,000 and $19,000 respectively.

Holding "Happiness" Previews

Following comments in 12 cities from invited members of women's clubs, civic and social leaders, Parent-Teachers Associations and Better Film Committees in gauging feminine reaction to the Paramount picture "Invitation to Happiness," Paramount is holding five similar screenings this week in Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, Detroit, Chicago and Toronto.

Victor M. Shapiro, publicity director for Selznick International, has resigned to return to an executive position with Baer Laboratories on the coast. He is succeeded by William Hebert, former aide to C. B. De Mille.

R. C. Patterson, N. P. Rathvon To Join RKO

Richard C. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and N. Peter Rathvon, investment broker, were proposed on Tuesday to Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York City federal court, as executives of the newly reorganized RKO, Mr. Patterson as a director and chairman of the board, Mr. Rathvon as chairman of the executive committee. The Atlas company, proponent of the reorganization plan, submitted the proposal, which is expected to receive Judge Bondy's approval.

Mr. Patterson is to resign from his government post in mid-July. His background includes the following: member of the United States Government's monopoly committee; director of the Import-Export Bank; director and executive vice-president of the National Broadcasting company from 1932 to 1936; Commissioner of Correction for New York City from 1927 to 1932; an engineer; a Colonel in the United States Army during the World War; holder of the French Legion of Honor award; holder of decorations from other countries; member of the advisory board of the Chemical Bank and Trust; trustee of the Provident Loan Society and Central Savings Bank; and holder of the Columbia University Medal for distinguished public service in 1932. Additionally, Mr. Patterson, in 1932-33 declined the Fusion nomination for Mayor of New York.

Judge Bondy was asked that Floyd B. Odlum, who had been temporary chairman of the board, "be permitted" to withdraw in favor of Mr. Patterson. The Atlas Corporation statement to the press emphasized that Mr. Odlum believed that "in Mr. Patterson . . . he has found a permanent chairman who, due to his qualifications and experience, can be of real service to the company, and to president George Schaefer", and that "the nomination of Mr. Patterson has the approval of the Rockefeller and Radio Corporation (of America) interests."

The statement said that Mr. Patterson will not be obligated to give full time to his new RKO duties, and that "the executive work of the company and all operations will be completely under the jurisdiction of George Schaefer, as president."

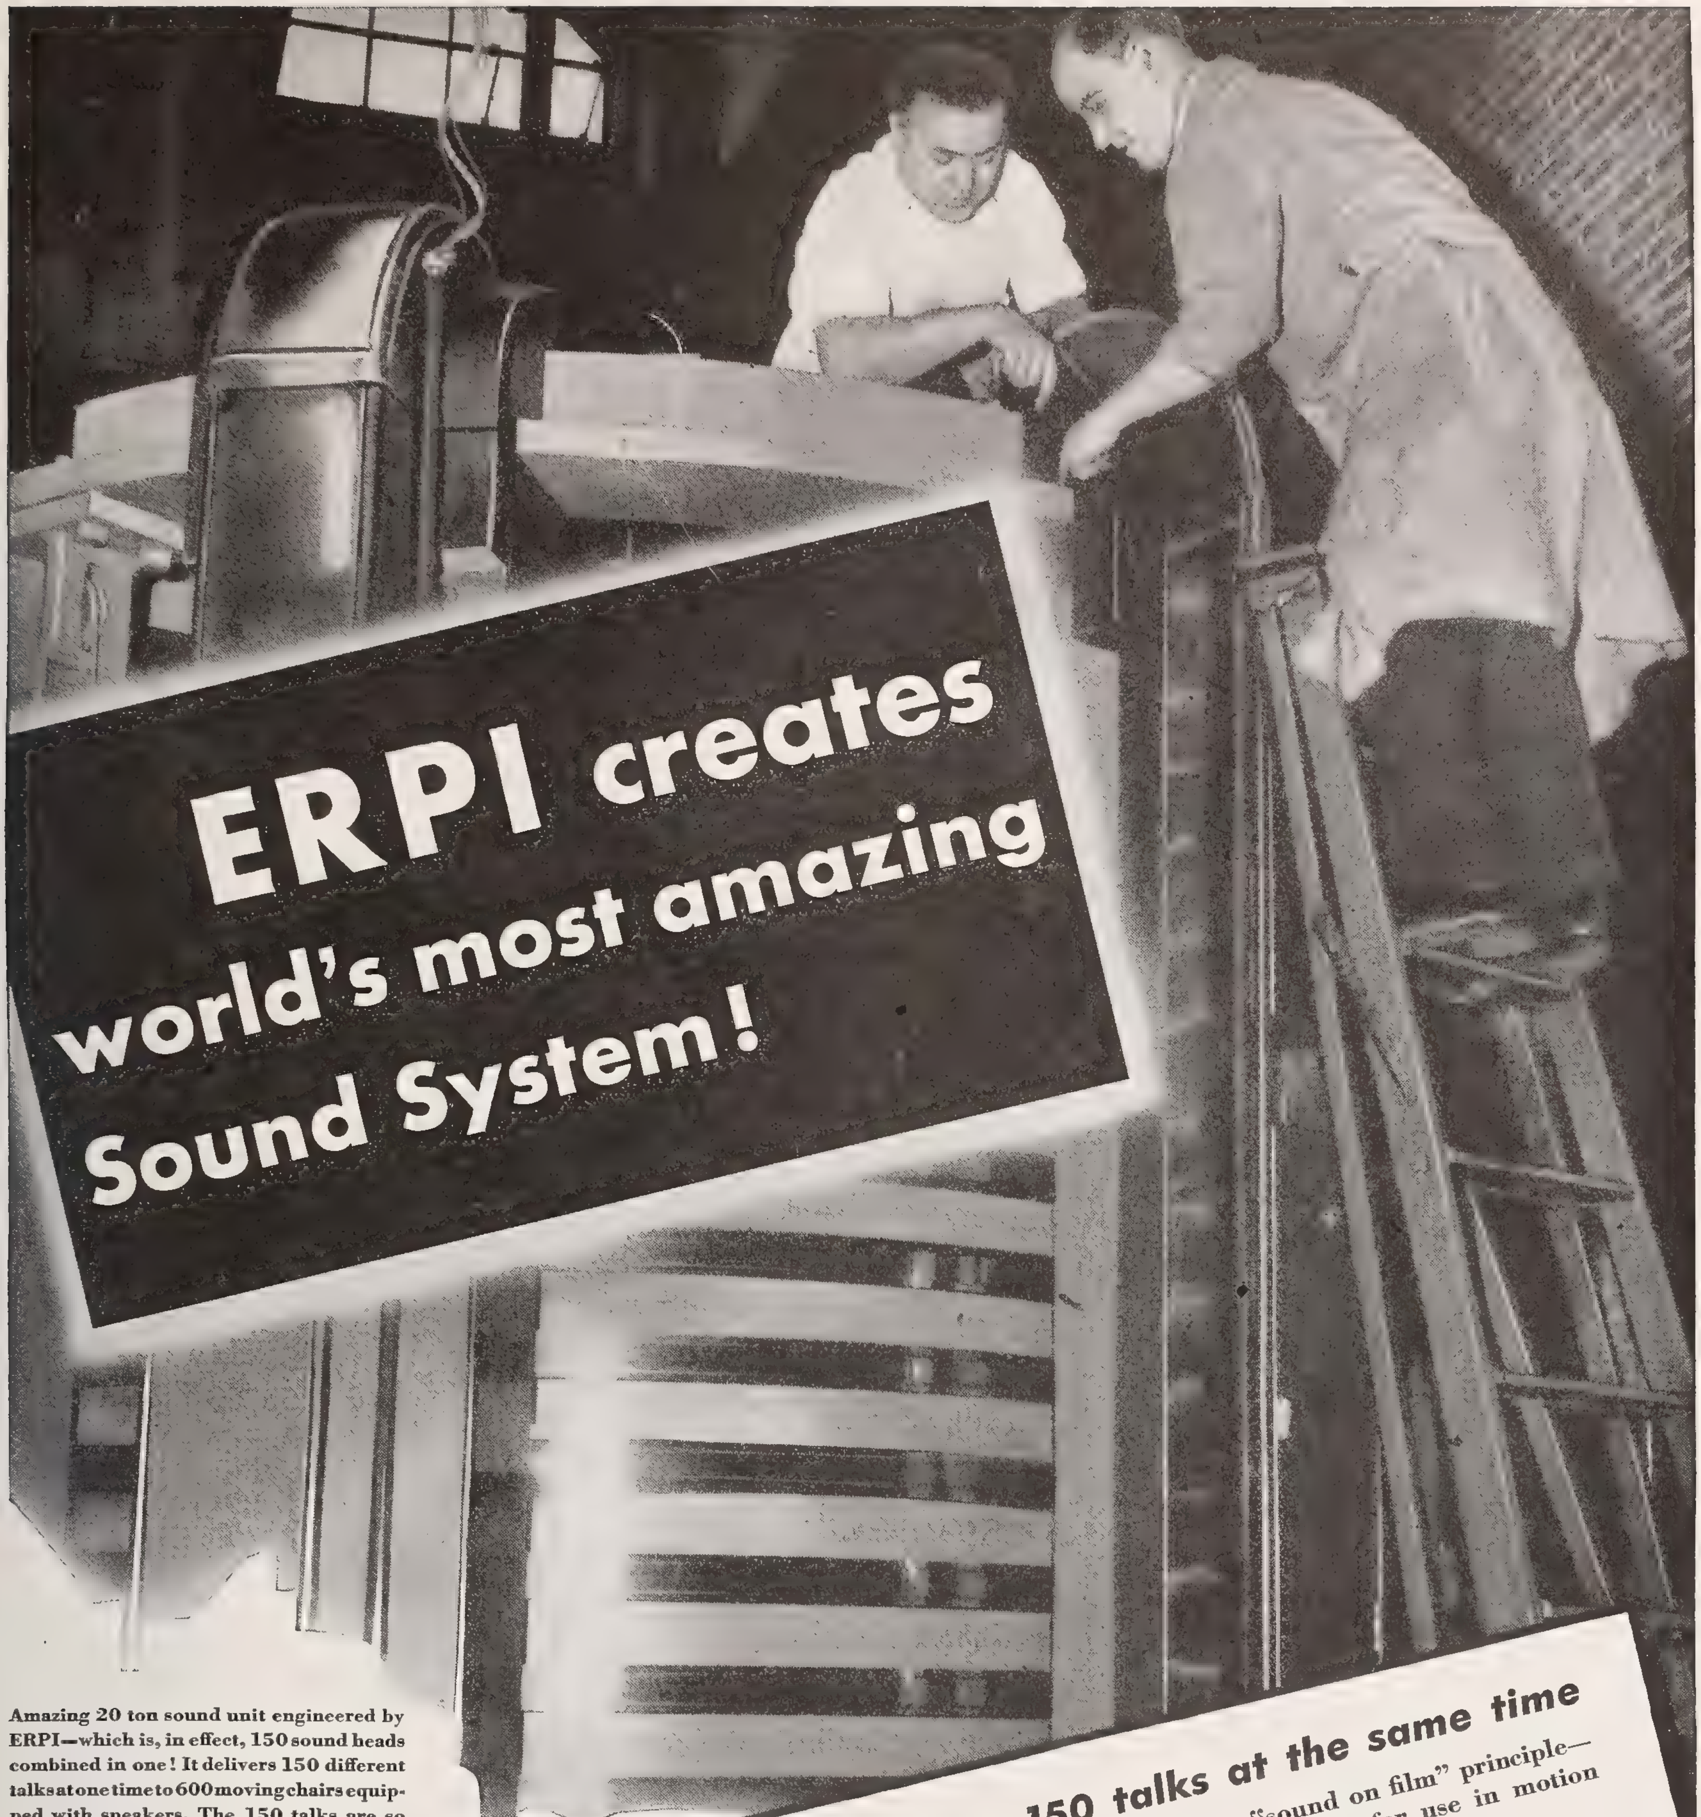
Mr. Rathvon had been approved by the court, previously as one of the nominees to the directorate. His new position as chairman of the executive committee is expected to require only part of his time, according to the Atlas company statement.

Mr. Schaefer is expected in New York this weekend from Hollywood.

John S. Stover, attorney for Ernest Stern, holder of 1,234 shares of Class A stock, Wednesday filed his appeal asking for a reversal of Judge Bondy's order in filing the plan. Arguments will be heard in the week of June 5th.

William V. Mack, formerly GB district manager in St. Louis, is now city salesman there for National Screen Service.

Harry Smythe has been named Tri-National district manager in Chicago.



ERPI creates world's most amazing Sound System!

Amazing 20 ton sound unit engineered by ERPI—which is, in effect, 150 sound heads combined in one! It delivers 150 different talks at one time to 600 moving chairs equipped with speakers. The 150 talks are so perfectly synchronized that spectators hear described the exact scene they are viewing in the "Highways and Horizons" panorama. The original sound film will tell General Motors' story 5 million times!

Giant machine delivers 150 talks at the same time

Nothing like this multi-voiced marvel—now installed in General Motors' exhibit at the New York World's Fair—had ever been attempted before.

In working out the many unique technical problems involved, ERPI once more showed how it is constantly finding new uses for ideas developed by Bell Telephone Laboratories.

For this giant machine is based on the familiar "sound on film" principle—originally developed for use in motion pictures.

Pioneering in new fields is an important part of ERPI's work. But the old will suffer no neglect. For — through scientific research — ERPI maintains its leadership in the work of improving apparatus for recording and reproducing sound in pictures.

Only Angels Have Wings

(Columbia)

Adventure and Romance

The elemental principles of cinema entertainment—story, characterization, appeal to the emotions—are fused and furbished to a high degree in Columbia's "Only Angels Have Wings," a story of adventure and romance in a little banana port in South America.

Within one minute of two hours in length, the film is a gripping and highly emotional portrayal of love and living under the constant menace of nature's elements.

Seldom if ever have such thrills of aviation been shown on the screen; seldom if ever have such characterizations been blended in a story having spectacle, comedy, feeling.

This is Howard Hawks' first picture for Columbia under a producer-director agreement. He not only produced and directed the film, but supplied the story upon which the screenplay is based.

The result is a production with potentialities of universal appeal. It depends for spectacle and thrill upon the dangers of flying "crates" over the Andes mountains, and battling storms. It has a dual love story, that of "Geoff Carter" and the showgirl, played by Cary Grant and Jean Arthur, and that of a shunned flier and his wife, Barthelmess and Rita Hayworth.

The Hawks touch for the spectacular in flying has been heightened. The preview audience again and again applauded the daring of the aerial scenes. The background is aviation, the locale a little banana port in South America which serves as the starting point of a projected transport line.

For marquee strength there are Cary Grant and Jean Arthur. Then there is Barthelmess, in his first picture since his decision to return to the screen. Judging from the applause at the preview, his return will be widely welcomed. Supporting them, in addition to Miss Hayworth, are Thomas Mitchell, whose character roles have won him wide acclaim, Allyn Joslyn, Sig Rumann, Victor Kilian, John Carroll, Donald Barry, Noah Beery, Jr., Maciste, Milissa Sierra, Lucio Villegas, Pat Flaherty, Pedro Regas and Pat West, a cast painstakingly selected. Principal acting honors go to Grant, whose characterization as the hard head of the airplane firm, who drives his fliers to almost suicidal trips in decrepit planes, is another outstanding role added to his impressive list.

"Bonnie Lee," a showgirl, falls in love at sight with "Geoff Carter," the transport line executive, and leaves her boat to be near him. The drive to continue regular flights causes him to ignore her, in view of the importance of a promised subsidy from a South American republic. Further complicating their romance is the arrival of "Judy," to whom "Carter" once was married, and her new husband, "Bat MacPherson," a pariah among fliers. In a series of extraordinary events, in keeping, however, with plausibility, the romance is culminated and "MacPherson" redeems himself.

Jules Furthman, who has received screen credit on some of Hollywood's outstanding box office pictures, adapted Hawks' story with an adept hand, giving it the flavor of comedy and suspense in appealing proportions. Elmer Dyer gets credit for the aerial photography, Roy Davidson for special effects and Paul Mantz for technical advice and stunting.

Tinted in sepia, the picture is one about which showmen may shout from the housetops.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where the audience, both professional and paying, cheered Grant's work and that of Jean Arthur, and roared a welcome to Barthelmess. Lobby talk was unanimous that Columbia has a winner.—V. K.

Goodbye, Mr. Chips

(MGM)

Character Portrayal

In the third production from its British studios, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, adapting to the screen JaJmes Hilton's compact novel which recorded phenomenal sales immediately upon its publication in 1934, presents as a cinematic fact a story evolved from material which, seldom attempted on the screen, has been attended by artistic or boxoffice success only when it has been handled with supreme skill.

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" is a mature example of the technique of portraying intangibles, of making the camera record in vignettes the tender joys and daily disappointments in the ordinary life of a character completely fictional but completely true to life.

Like previous pictures of the same type, it departs completely from the school of action which, since the filming of the first full reel feature, has been so dependable and rich a reservoir of material. Instead it is an episodic treatment, quiet in mood and slow in tempo, but deeply moving, of the life of a schoolmaster from shy youth to benign old age.

Completely English in setting, the story tells of "Mr. Chips'" coming to tradition-laden Brookfield school; of the shyness and ineptness which keep him from close contact with the boys, his pupils; of his marriage in early middle age with a charming girl and of her faith in him; of his growth as a beloved part of Brookfield after her early death has brought him sorrow and wisdom, and of the love and respect of four generations of boys which he has earned when it is time for "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Dramatic unity, suspense and interest derive from the careful direction of Sam Wood, whose Hollywood productions have been such action pictures as the Marx brothers extravaganzas and "Navy Blue and Gold." A special title credit is given Sidney Franklin, who will be remembered especially for "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The Good Earth." It is to be remarked that these two films, with "A Man to Remember," were the most recent examples of the type of product to which the present picture belongs.

Although its externals will be unfamiliar to Americans, the film depends entirely on the outstanding performance of Robert Donat. Audiences who applauded him in "The Ghost Goes West," "The 39 Steps," "Knight without Armour" and lately "The Citadel," will acclaim his characterization of "Mr. Chips" from a youthful graduate to a vigorous 83 as the finest of his career.

Launched as a roadshow at the Astor theatre in New York with an elaborate campaign conjoining it with "Pygmalion," the Shaw opus which preceded it there, the production is assured all possible pre-release exploitation support, valuably assisted by fulsome praise in newspaper and magazine criticism and publicity.

Faithful in its adherence to the spirit and letter of the book, the picture should find profit-giving favor with the public which expressed its liking for the published version in terms of eager buying and with the much larger audience which can be reached through careful exploitation.

The Mikado

(Universal)

Gilbert and Sullivan

Devotees and admirers of the composer and librettist from whose works selections have been sung, hummed and whistled throughout the world for fifty years will find in this opulent production faithful adherence to the Gilbert and Sullivan tradition and a literal translation from the stage to the screen of one of the most popular of their gently satiric musical extravaganzas.

The original structure of the nineteenth century operetta has remained inviolate, the lines are cut only slightly, few songs are omitted, the stage business and the exaggerated characterizations which the composers skillfully joined to animate the creations of their fantasy are unchanged.

The only concessions to the changed medium of presentation are made to take advantage of the camera's ubiquity and even these do not extend to bridging cinematically the changes of scene mechanically necessary on the stage. But beyond the possibility of any stage presentation are the richness of sets and costuming which technically flawless color photography exploit to the fullest.

The quietly absurd story of Nanki-Poo, son of the Mikado, who flees in disguise to avoid marriage to an elderly court favorite; woos Yum-Yum, ward of Ko-Ko, the tailor who becomes Lord High Executioner; and wins her after true Gilbertian complications of plot, is, of course, pure fantasy. Its presentation on the screen is of a nature with the even more complete departure from reality achieved by Disney and the cartoonists, and that imaginative quality is carefully preserved in the make-up and costumes.

The cast is headed by Kenny Baker, American radio singer whose name and popularity should be worth considerable on a marquee. Supporting him are a group of English singers and actors completely familiar with the vehicle, several of them members of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company of England whose revivals of the Gilbert and Sullivan works are familiar to and popular with American audiences. The D'Oyly Carte chorus supplies the choral accompaniment and the score is played by the London Symphony Orchestra. All of this should guarantee the production's authenticity.

The integrity of Geoffrey Toye's adaptation and Victor Schertzinger's direction extend to the preservation of comedy verging on slapstick which, while completely English in feeling, is "The Mikado" as Gilbert and Sullivan wrote it.

Important in consideration of the exploitation possibilities for American audiences are the facts that Gilbert and Sullivan sheet music remains in consistent and appreciable demand, that recent performances of this and companion works by the D'Oyly Carte Company and others on the American stage have achieved record seasons, and that the film, the first complete presentation of any Gilbert and Sullivan operetta on the screen, is timed to coincide with impressive popularity in New York and on tour of the modernized versions, "The Swing Mikado" and "The Hot Mikado."

The Gracie Allen Murder Case

(Paramount)

Murder Comedy

Probably no showman who hasn't seen it will feel quite up to promising his customers a picture as funny as the title of this one suggests, and probably few customers are likely to take that sort of a promise at face value anyway, so perhaps the proper first step in exploitation of the picture is to notify the patrons that the chairs have been securely bolted down and reinforced and that persons wishing to miss none of the dialogue had better sit close to the screen because audience laughter will kill important sections of it for those farther back. The picture puts a real strain on the seat anchorage, and the advice about sitting close to the screen is legitimate. It's an uproariously amusing comedy.

The name of the late S. S. Van Dine has become synonymous with cleverly concocted murder mysteries in the minds of a large segment of the population. This work of his does not let them down. It embraces two authentic killings and an astue unraveling of the enshrouding mystery by "Philo Vance," played by Warren William, hilariously helped and hindered by "Gracie Allen," played by Gracie Allen. But this is no mere murder mystery. This is, additionally, a gloriously competent demonstration of Miss Allen's extraordinary talent for glorifying the dumb dame.

Miss Allen's performance is one for the history books. Working without George Burns, but with half a dozen other straight men feeding her gag lines, she is at least half a dozen times as funny as she ever was before. She makes stupidity a fine art, ignorance an enviable variety of bliss, and inanity an inestimable virtue. By way of variation, she achieves an equivalent result in one long solo sequence of antiquated silent slapstick which registers as brand new, and she had an unprejudiced preview audience applauding lustily for her singing of "Snug as a Bug in a Rug," a Matty Malneck-Frank Loesser song number already doing quite nicely on the air lanes.

There are as many ways to exploit the picture as there are ways to sell a comedy. It is distinctly a departure from comedic norm as "The Thin Man" was, and as worthy of sequel. It is all-purpose, all-place entertainment, a complete justification of its innately humorous title and an extremely amusing film.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., to a Friday night audience that laughed almost continuously, and frequently in such volume as to drown out sections of dialogue, an impressive array of completely contented customers.—William R. Weaver.

Ex-Champ

(Universal)

Ringside Melodrama

Don't check this off as another variant of "The Champ." It's a plain, rugged and singularly honest sort of story about a former fighter turned doorman, his grown children and a young boxer he finds faith in when his own son breaks his heart. It gives plain, rugged Victor McLaglen a chance to play the character he knows best, and he plays it in telling fashion.

Tom Brown and Nan Grey are excellent as the young boxer and the ex-champion's daughter. Donald Briggs plays the bad boy well enough and Constance Moore deals pleasingly with a society girl assignment. William Frawley turns in perhaps the best performance of his career as the down-and-outer who is buddy to the former champion.

Philip Rosen's direction of these players in a straightaway screen play by Alex Gottlieb and Edmund L. Hartman, from a commonsense story by Gordon Kahn, is a study in effective restraint, making each point stand up for what it's worth and never forcing an effect or straining for an emotion. Comedy and pathos are smoothly counterpointed and neither is carried to extreme. The end result is a realism uncommon in pictures and practically unknown in fight pictures. Burt Kelly, associate producer, and Jack Otterson, art director, provided topnotch production values.

Unlike the heroes of films in kind, the ex-champ played by McLaglen neither glorifies nor abases the pugilistic profession, neither weeps like a baby nor pulls miracles out of the sleeve. A son on whose education he has spent his savings denies him and poses as an orphan to marry a socialite. He finds a substitute interest in training a promising boxer. When he learns his son has stolen money and is about to be discovered, he attempts to save him by betting on the opponent and drugging his own entry. It is not his fault that his plans

NEW BILLS AFFECTING FILMS IN SIX STATES

Washington Hearings, May 25-26, on Barbour Measure to Repeal Ban on Fight Films

Legislative activities this week affecting the motion picture and unfavorably for the most part, centered as usual on taxation, ranging from new tax moves in Florida against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, a seat tax threat in St. Louis, and new admission taxes in Michigan, to both sales and ticket tax developments in New York. In addition, Pennsylvania and Illinois would regulate attendance of children at theatres, Rhode Island has an idea for fire protection in theatres, Illinois advanced theatre divorcement and state censorship readings, and New York is looking at a tax on outdoor advertising signs.

Barbour Bill Hearings May 25-26

At Washington, hearings on the Barbour bill, which seeks to repeal the ban upon fight films, were set for May 25th and 26th. Well known boxing figures, including Jack Dempsey, and representatives of the film and broadcasting industries are expected to testify before a Senate interstate commerce subcommittee headed by Senator Ernest Lundeen of Minnesota. Delegates from a number of civic organizations are expected to voice opposition to the measure.

Albany was the scene of the most active state legislation affecting the film industry. Introduced last Saturday by Senator W. C. Martin of Syracuse, and now before the State Senate for consideration, is a bill calling for a two per cent sales tax, designed to raise $125,000,000 returnable to communities for local relief costs. So far as theatres are concerned, the bill calls for a tax on admissions at the rate of one cent on each ticket costing from 13 to 63 cents, two cents on those between 64 and 99 cents, and the same basic rates on those over 99 cents. In view of the heavily adverse Republican conference vote last week, passage of the measure was doubted.

However, seen as nearly certain to prevail this week is the Desmond-Moffat-Mitchell low cost housing measure, which would give cities the right to tax theatre ticket admissions one cent, and to tax billboard advertising signs in excess of three square feet one cent per square foot per year.

While Assemblyman Robert Crews of Brooklyn was expected to move this week to take from the table his bill calling for the licensing of operators of 35 mm. projectors, this action was not considered likely to succeed. State Senator Roy Page has filed a bill giving town governing boards the right to fix by ordinance daylight saving provisions from the last Sunday in March to the last Sunday in October. The bill is expected to meet opposition from rural groups.

Governor Lehman signed the measure sponsored by Assemblyman James E. Owens permitting 20 per cent of the qualified voters in certain villages to petition for a referendum on Sunday shows.

Sunday Juvenile Attendance

A Pennsylvania bill prohibiting the attendance of children 15 years old, or younger, at Sunday theatrical performances, reached the State Senate floor. In New Bern, N. C., the local Board of Aldermen deferred action on the request for Sunday shows.

In St. Louis, a municipal tax measure which would impose a five per cent levy on theatre receipts was being drafted by Alderman William Warnick. The Missouri two per cent sales tax took in $1,771,972 for the state in the month of April, up $97,339 from a year ago. For the first four months the income from the tax was $453,033 greater than it was in the same period of 1938.

Bills dealing with radio stations and the use of copyright music have been introduced in the Florida Senate, and an amusement tax bill has been introduced in the Florida legislature by Representatives Strayhorn and Lewis. Senator John R. Beacham's bills would exempt station operators from liability for libelous statements during broadcasts unless it was affirmatively declared that the statement was in the operator's behalf, and would impose a three per cent tax on gross receipts on the privilege of selling performing rights of copyrighted music, with this latter affecting the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Under the provisions of the amusement tax bill, all places of amusement would have to pay a tax of 10 per cent based on their gross receipts.

Michigan Tax Measure

The Michigan House has passed and sent to the Senate an amusement tax bill that would yield in the neighborhood of $3,000,000. The amusement tax was inserted as an amendment to the sales tax which would impose a three per cent levy on theatre admissions.

If a special session of the Georgia Assembly is called late in August or early in September, as foreseen by some political observers due to the need to provide funds for the state's decreasing revenues, the introduction of an amusement tax bill is seen as almost a certainty.

Rhode Island's Governor William H. Vanderbilt has signed the Whitwam bill authorizing theatres in Cranston to engage than regular members of the city fire department for theatre duty as firemen. The law also requires all Cranston theatres to have fire alarm boxes.

The three film bills of Senator Joseph Mendel, of Illinois, have been advanced to third reading in the State Senate and can now be called up any time for passage. The bills concern theatre divorcement and the control of theatre circuits; prohibit children under 14 from admission to theatres after nine P. M., and establish a state censorship of films, respectively.

Change of UA Name Sought by Goldwyn

Samuel Goldwyn this week filed an application with the Secretary of State at Sacramento, Cal., to change the name of United Artists Studios to Samuel Goldwyn Studios. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks own the land on which the studio is located, although it is leased to Mr. Goldwyn, who has been the sole owner since 1935 of all the buildings and equipment on the property.

Mr. Goldwyn's action, believed to be a tactical move in connection with his breach of contract suit against the company, has nothing to do with the United Artists distributing company.

Walter Wanger is the only United Artists producer besides Mr. Goldwyn now using the studio. Hal Roach has his own ranch, as also does David Selznick, at whose studio Mr. Fairbanks is to produce. Edward Small uses the General Service studio. It is understood that Alexander Korda and David L. Loew will also produce there.

Paramount Asks Reelection of All on Directorate

Notices of the annual meeting of Paramount stockholders at the home office in New York June 20th, mailed to stockholders Tuesday, asked for the reelection of all company directors for a one year term. The management said that it knew of no other business to be transacted at the meeting except the election of the directors.

The proxy committee for the company will vote for the reelection of Adolph Zukor, Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Y. Frank Freeman, Austin C. Keough, Neil F. Agnew, John W. Hicks, Jr., Stephen Callaghan, Harvey D. Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, Earl I. McClintock, Edwin L. Weisl, Maurice Newton and E. V. Richards.

The notices report that the following board members own stock in the company, beneficially or of record: Mr. Balaban, 2,000 shares of common; Mr. Griffis, 3,000 shares of common; Mr. Freeman, 500 shares of second preferred; Mr. Keough, 59 shares of common and 223 shares of second preferred; Mr. Callaghan, a director of Allied Owners Corporation, which owns 9,900 shares of first preferred and $250,000 principal amount of 3¼ per cent convertible debentures; Mr. Gibson, chairman and president of the Manufacturers' Trust Company, which owns beneficially 5,607 shares of first preferred and $3,000,000 principal amount of 3¼ per cent debentures; Mr. Goodyear, 1,000 shares of common and 600 shares of first preferred; Mr. Harris, 200 shares of common and 200 shares of second preferred; Mr. Hertz, 100 shares of common; Mr. McClintock, 100 shares of second preferred; Mr. Weisl, 3,200 shares of second preferred; Mr. Newton, 8,118 shares of common and 2,813 one-fifth shares of second preferred beneficially, as well as an interest in an estate which owns beneficially 900 shares of first preferred and $125,000 principal amount of 3¼ per cent debentures (he is a director of Adams Express Company, which owns 40,000 shares of second preferred and $103,000 principal amount of 3¼ per cent debentures); Mr. Richards, 7,500 shares of second preferred.

Zukor, Agnew and Hicks are not listed as owning any of the company's stock. The designation of the nominees for reelection originated with the board, the notices say.

Boyer Honored

Charles Boyer has been awarded the annual gold medal of the Federated British Film and Stage Association for his acting in the pictures "Algiers," produced by Walter Wanger, and "Mayerling," a French film, distributed in this country by Pax Films.

Hays in New York

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, arrived in New York Tuesday morning from Hollywood, where he conferred with Cecil B. DeMille on the feature the industry is preparing for the New York and San Francisco Fairs. The title has been changed from "Cavalcade of America" to "Our America."

Frank E. Mullin, manager of the publicity department of Radio Corporation of America, has been elected vice-president in charge of publicity and advertising for RCA by the board of directors. Horton Heath, assistant to Mr. Mullin, was promoted to publicity manager.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The old-time Country Store Night at the neighborhood movie grew to wide proportions with dish giveaways and to still greater proportions with "Bank Night" and such, and has taken a new freakish turn in the Bronx, of New York, where, starting a few weeks ago with the giving of $2 for such stunts as ripping off a customer's trouser leg, they're now having balloon-blowing contests, in which women, appearing on the stage blow their heads off while blowing-up balloons, the winners getting a whole quarter (25 cents). Another new front-of-the-stage stunt is to have a lad submit to having his suspender buttons torn off and sewed on again while lying over the lap of a pretty seamstress. Still another—entitled "She Won by a Nose"—is to have a woman on her knees push a peanut across the stage floor with her nose. Then there's the "shoe race." This performance tickles the audience, if not the toes of the contestants, who leave their seats as movie patrons to volunteer for the shindig. The lads doff their footgear, step to the opposite corner of the stage, then race back to don their shoes. Prize: 50 cents.

Aspirin was consumed plentifully in Washington the other day by the special events crew of radio station WJSV and the Paramount contingent traveling with the "Union Pacific" train.

The half-hour exploitation program was scheduled for two P. M., whereupon it developed that the old-fashioned wood-burner could not travel very fast and would be delayed. Equipment was set up on the lower level of the Washington depot. Then the Paramount people decided that it would be an imposition on the public if it came in on the lower level, and demanded that the equipment be brought up to the upper level, and so the equipment was transferred. The train arrived on the upper level and on time, too, but it was shoved into track 27 instead of track 30, where it was expected. That's when the harassed WJSV crew went on strike. The broadcast would come from track 30, else they were going home. The train was shifted.

Now for the denouement. WJSV is blaming the whole thing on Warners, being under the impression that "Union Pacific" is that company's picture.

Another "Union Pacific" tale is told by Leonard Lyons in his Lyons Den column in the New York Post, and it starts with the fact that "Union Pacific" had its world premiere in Omaha on April 28th, the same day Hitler made his speech replying to Roosevelt. Because the premiere was one of the most publicized events to hit Omaha since the railroad got to town, the editors of the Omaha World-Herald were distressed at the news that Hitler's speech would be made that same day. "What," the publisher was asked by his staff, "shall we do with Hitler's speech?"

"If he mentions something about Union Pacific," was the reply, "run it."

Western Electric has a new sound gadget in which a man's voice can be transformed into that of an aged and quivering person, or to that of a soprano, or even a roaring, thundering giant. One person can sing a duet with himself, too.

"YES, things are fairly safe now—in all ways," observes Mike Berkowitz, for 48 years a projectionist, "peep-show" and otherwise, and one of the oldest, in service, in the business. Mike, who serves at Loew's Capitol Theatre, in New York, was tendered a dinner Friday night, by the "25-30" club of the New York projectionists' union, Local 306.

"For one thing, you don't have to lock your booth, and carry a gun any longer," he said.

Mike, who is 65 years old, and whose experience as a projectionist began rather informally, was referring, in this instance, to his career as a "peep-show" projectionist, with Frank Cannock at the Eden Musée, New York. The two of them, who had invented a machine they called "The Edengraph," took such precautions. Ethics were just not in those days; machines needed a lot of improving—and men were out to make money.

Mike's career began, some 48 years ago, when, as a machinist, he was walking idly along New York's Bowery. A foreigner, whom he recalls as a "French Count," approached him, and asked for directions to the Gaiety Musee. Mike directed him, and then was asked if he wanted a new job.

"What doing?" asked Mike.

"Making pictures move," the "French Count" replied.

So Mike Berkowitz went to work. Two hours later the machine caught fire.

Later, he worked as a projectionist for the early Vitagraph, now Warners. At the time, the company sent out projectionists with their films. For a while, he worked in Coney Island, with Cannock. When the company wanted to send Mike "on the road," he balked: he couldn't speak English very well, and that was a handicap, he felt, outside of New York.

So he went back to the machine shop.

Then Cannock, at the Eden Musée, a world famous "wax works" and amusement enterprise, sent for him. The two worked together, developing the "Edengraph," which, Mike claims, is the forerunner of the present day Simplex mechanism.

About 28 years ago, Mike joined the auxiliary of Local 35, which was then called the spotlight operators' union, and is now the Local No. 1, stagehands' union. The union auxiliary, made up of projectionists, shortly broke away from its parent, asked for, and received its own charter, and began its career as Local 306, which now has over 2,000 members.

For nine years, Mike was with the Warner Brothers studios, and, he claims, virtually invented the "Vitascope," a machine to project sizes of film other than 35 mm.

Mike's son, Milton, is chief operator at the Capitol Theatre, and "bosses the old man." Milton has been a regular theatre projectionist for about 15 years, the last eight at the Capitol.

"Soldiers" going to work in the "war" David Selznick is putting on for "Gone With the Wind" have got to have sound teeth—very sound. They'll have to use old Confederate rifles, and those guns require a waxed paper cartridge, consisting of a fixed charge of black powder and a lead bullet tied together with heavy thread. Before the cartridge is rammed down the barrel of the gun, the riflemen have to bite a piece off the breech end so sparks from the repercussion cap can ignite the powder charge, as of old. The Confederate Army's recruiting officers first looked at a man's teeth to make sure he could bite cartridges. Toward the end of the war a Confederate soldier could lack an arm or a leg but he had to have good good front teeth.

In London's music halls these days they're singing a brand new little nursery-rhyme, entitled: "We'll Be There," the chorus running as follows:

We'll be there if we're wanted, we'll be there,
We'll be there and prepared to do our share,
Peace on earth, goodwill to all,
But we'll be ready at our Empire's call.
We have heard lots of people shout and rave
"Britain isn't ready" they declare,
When you hear the lion's roar, don't you worry any more,
We'll be there if we're wanted, we'll be there.

Back in 1918, John Burhorn was selling film for General Film in Pittsburgh. Bill Rodgers was his chief, at General's headquarters in New York, and when General Film was liquidating, Mr. Rodgers found it necessary to write to Mr. Burhorn informing him of the fact and adding that if ever he could do anything for Mr. Burhorn he stood ready and happy to do so.

The years passed—21 of them, and it was not until Tuesday that William F. Rodgers, now general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn, got the opportunity to do something for his former aide. Mr. Rodgers on Tuesday presented to Mr. Burhorn the Quigley Silver Grand Award, at MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S annual "Managers' Round Table Club" award ceremonies at the Hotel Astor in New York, to which Mr. Burhorn had traveled from his Gayety theatre in Chicago as the guest of Quigley Publications for his winning the year's best exploitation campaign as adjudged by the industry in New York.

MORE HOUSES TO GET TELEVISION; SCHENCK SAYS FOX WILL BE READY

New Studio Lighting System; Combined Transmitter and Receiver Patented; Paramount on Broadway Installs Receiver

Advances in the laboratory field, the installation of a receiving set in three more New York theatres, and an announcement by Joseph M. Schenck, Twentieth Century-Fox board chairman, that his company will be ready to deal with the new medium when commercially feasible, marked the past week in television.

The television scene in England also continued active, with Gaumont pressing installation work on 12 London theatres in order to have them ready May 24 to receive the Derby by television, although war scares appear to have held up other English television developments; while in New York no decision was reached as to the final disposition of the union control of the field, with Actors' Equity renewing its demands for jurisdiction.

New Lighting System

A new system of television studio lighting, which may find application also in film studios, according to O. B. Hanson, National Broadcasting Company's vice-president in charge of television, has been developed by William C. Eddy, NBC engineer. The system consists of numerous remotely controlled lighting units suspended from the ceiling. Each unit, mounting a bank of six lamps, may be raised and lowered, or tilted, through a considerable angle, and swung through nearly a complete circle in focusing the illumination on any desired spot, Mr. Hanson said. Through remote control from the lighting engineer's desk, the lighting set-up may be changed at any time without interfering with camera action.

A combined television transmitter and receiver, which utilizes only one cathode ray tube while permitting simultaneous two-way television communication between two stations, has been granted a patent in Washington. The invention is the work of Allen B. Du Mont, head of the Paramount television affiliate which bears his name. The new tube has two screens. One is photo-electric, and on this the image to be broadcast is focused and converted into electric impulses corresponding to the lights and shadows of the image. The second screen is fluorescent and makes visible as an image the television impules received.

Paramount Installs Receiver

The second theatre in the New York metropolitan area to install a television receiving set, the Paramount on Broadway, has placed a Du Mont receiver in its Elizabethan Room. The Little Carnegie Playhouse is currently using an R.C.A. receiver. The New Amsterdam and Plaza have also installed receivers.

Twentieth Century-Fox, interested in television through its holdings in Gaumont-British, which controls Baird in England, will be ready for television when it arrives, Mr. Schenck said this week, though he has emphasized his conviction that the day when television will be theatre competition is far distant. The studio building plan launched three years ago made provisions for television in the contruction of stages and other technical equipment, and, in common with other film companies, as noted in the HERALD last week, Twentieth-Fox keeps television broadcasting possibilities in sight when buying story properties.

Donald Hunter Munro, British Broadcasting Corporation's television production manager, returning last Friday with Gilbert Seldes, Columbia Broadcasting System's television production manager, from a six week survey of BBC television, said that television in England is "booming." Audience reaction in England, according to Mr. Munro, has shown that persons will sit in their darkened homes for television and that the most popular programs are versions of current stage shows, film versions of plays, regular film features and sports pickups. Mr. Munro will spend another month in this country as television consultant to CBS.

Get Ready for Derby

Gaumont-British is working at 12 London theatres now, with the idea of having them ready for the reception of the Derby by television, when the race is run on May 24th. With the BBC planning to shut down in the event of war, however, the construction of a second television transmitter, at Birmingham, is reported to have been indefinitely delayed. In war the shortwave bands would be used for transmission of official reports and information.

R. Pelletier, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation program director, who recently returned from a six months' study of television in England, said that "in a few years most radio programs in England will be televised," and that television already has "arrived" in the field of amusements.

In the struggle for control of the television field among members of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, the parent body of the "talent" unions and guilds in the American Federation of Labor, Actors Equity on Monday presented a resolution to the AAAA demanding jurisdiction. The Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Radio Artists continue reluctant to make an outright grant, favoring a period of "watchful waiting" until it could be seen in what direction television was heading. Equity felt that there should be no question of jurisdiction inasmuch as television jurisdiction was included in the preamble to the Constitution as adopted in 1930, and since both the actors' guild and the artists' federation were said to have been organized through Equity's efforts. The guild and federation felt that the "assignment of jurisdiction should be made on the basis of which organization can best be of service to members." The matter was tabled, delegated to the AAAA board refusing to vote without specific instructions from the unions they represented, with executive board meetings of the member unions expected to be held during the week.

Actors' Equity on Tuesday took a strong stand in the jurisdictional fight for control of the television field and asserted its right to control actors engaged in this work.

"The Equity Council has no doubts in its mind, and wishes to leave no doubts in the minds of others, that it is able and willing to exercise the jurisdiction it holds over the field of television," said Equity. "It asks this help of its members at this time to enable it to make the exercise of jurisdiction a matter of pride to them, the Council and the Association."

The organization declared that all Equity members who are approached for regular work in television are required to submit the offer and its terms to Equity for approval.

More Marketing Receivers

General Electric is rushing to completion plans to market receiver sets, as is Stewart Warner; with the Columbia Broadcasting System due to start its television programs early in June from the tower of the Chrysler Building in New York.

With television interests in New York believing that sport will be one of the main subjects to be treated by television, along with fights, horse racing and such, the first telecast of a baseball game was made Wednesday, when a game between Columbia and Princeton universities was picked up by an NBC mobile television unit. NBC has set up its own newsreel for television, with several issues of the reel, entitled "teletopics," already released on the air. The films are on 35 mm. stock, and run from five to eight minutes in length.

An RKO short subject, "Television," which is a short study of the subject, has been booked into the Rivoli theatre in New York, beginning with the run of "The Mikado" on May 25th.

Forms Open-Air Theatres

Robert Cobe, former Republic exchange manager in New Haven, has organized Open Air Theatres of America, Inc., in Boston. Mr. Cobe is president, treasurer and chairman of the board. Salvatore Adorno plans to open a drive-in theatre in Middletown, Conn.

Leonard Snyder, formerly with American Record, has joined Consolidated Film Industries as assistant general sales manager.

13 Start; 8 Finish

As nine companies started production work on 13 pictures, a new unit, Cathedral Films, entered the picture making field. The new organization's initial effort will be a Biblical story of topical significance, with John Beal, Gibson Gowland, Lloyd Corrigan and Maurice Moscovitch, and others. The title is "The Great Commandment."

Four studios each started two pictures.

The RKO-Radio numbers are "Timber Stampede" and "The Spell Binder." The first named is a George O'Brien feature in which he will have Marjorie Reynolds, Chill Wills, Tom London and Bob Courtney as the principal support. Lee Tracy is the star of the second, in which will be seen Allan Lane, Linda Hayes, Charles Halton, Pierre Watkin and Leona Roberts.

At Universal camera work was started on "The Underpup." It will present Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Gloria Jean, Virginia Weidler, Ann Gillis, Ernest Truex, Doris Lloyd, C. Aubrey Smith and Raymond Walburn. Sigrid Gurie, Donald Briggs and Eve Arden will be featured in the second activity, "Dames."

New "Mesquiteer" Team

The first of two started at Republic, "Oklahoma Outlaw," will present a new "Three Mesquiteer" team, John Wayne, Roy Corrigan and Raymond Hatton. The cast for "The Fighting Irish" will include Phil Regan, Jean Parker, Jerome Cowan, Horace MacMahon and Barnett Parker.

Columbia began work on "A Woman Judge," featuring Freida Inescort, Rochelle Hudson and Otto Kruger. At the same time it started "Mounted Police," which will star Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith.

With Jane Withers as the top name, 20th Century-Fox started "The Chicken Wagon Family." Other personalities who will be seen are Leo Carillo, Spring Byington and Marjorie Weaver.

The most pretentious picture of the week is credited to Warner Brothers, who began work on "The Knight and the Lady." A historical subject, it will present Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Donald Crisp, Allan Hale, Henry Stephenson, Robert Warwick, Rosella Towne, Leo G. Carroll and Ralph Forbes.

For Paramount distribution, Harry Sherman started "The Double Dyed Deceiver," the picturization of an O. Henry story. Leading names are Tito Guizar, Emma Dunn, Alan Mowbray, Gale Sondergaard and Jane Clayton.

Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland will be starred in MGM's "Babes in Arms."

Bette Davis Film

Warner Brothers completed two pictures. Of the pair, "The Old Maid" undoubtedly is the more important if looked at from the point of name value alone. The star is Bette Davis, who will play a sympathy-stimulating role. Cast name value is supplemented by the presence of Miriam Hopkins, Jerome Cowan, Donald Crisp, Egon Brecher, Louise Fazenda, Sidney Bracy, Cissie Loftus, Jane Bryan, James Stephenson and William Lundigan. In the second picture, "Hobby Family," will be seen Henry O'Neill, Jean Sharon, Fred Tozere, John Ridgely and Aldrich Bowker.

Raymond Massey, star of the Pulitzer prize winning play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," who will repeat his stage role in RKO Radio's forthcoming screen version, receives from Daniel Frohman the annual award of the Drama League of New York for the most distinguished performance of the season.

Universal finished "In Old California." The cast includes Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore, Noah Beery, Sr., Guinn Williams, Mabel Albertson, Thurston Hall, Paul Fix, Mala and Mamo Clark.

"Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" wound up at MGM. It features the regular cast, Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Sara Haden and Ann Rutherford, plus Terry Kilburn, Helen Gilbert and Sidney Miller.

On scheduled time, director Malcolm St. Clair brought in "The Jones Family at Grand Canyon" for 20th Century-Fox. The usual cast, together with Eddie Collins, Robert Shaw and Helen Ericson, are concerned in the domestic comedy.

"Geronimo" was finished at Paramount. It will present Preston Foster, Ralph Morgan, Chief Thundercloud, Andy Devine, Gene Lockhart, Ellen Drew, William Henry and Kitty Kelly in an action story with American history background. The studio likewise finished "The Cat and the Canary," with Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, John Beal, Douglas Montgomery, Gale Sondergaard, Nydia Westman, George Zucco, Willard Robertson and Elizabeth Patterson.

Columbia completed "Good Girls Go to Paris." Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell are the stars. In support are Walter Connolly, Alan Curtis, Joan Perry, Isabel Jeans, Stanley Brown, Alexander D'Arcy, Robert Sterling, Beatrice Curtis, Helen Jerome Eddie, Howard Hickman and Barlowe Borland.

Self-Glorification

Hollywood, long adept in glorifying any subject or personality within the ken of man when the moment seemed propitious, is now indulging in a little self-glorification. Of course there have been scores of "Hollywood" pictures, some of them fiction but all satires and burlesques in which Hollywood poked fun at itself. Shortly, however, patrons will have an opportunity to see three productions which will be Hollywood historicals, in which the story of the industry's town will be approached somewhat as was Irving Berlin's music in "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and the background story and music of "Rose of Washington Square."

One of the subjects, an industry project temporarily titled "Our America," is unique in that it will only be seen by the public at the World's Fairs in New York and San Francisco. Now being rushed to completion by Cecil B. DeMille in collaboration with Will H. Hays, the picture will contain the highlights of virtually all great American historical films made in Hollywood to date, bound together by a screen story of one American family. While present plans do not call for showings other than at the Fairs, there is a possibility that the production may be reproduced on 16 mm. film

The second subject, "Hollywood Cavalcade," a 20th Century-Fox production and strictly a commercial proposition, will tell a human interest story of the community, blending fact with fiction and primarily dealing with the history of the motion picture industry from 1913 until the coming of sound in 1927. With Irving Cummings assigned as director, the picture, which will be made in color, will start in about a week. Don Ameche and Alice Faye will be the stars. Mack Sennett has been brought back to the Hollywood scene he knows so well to serve as technical adviser as well as to act as associate producer on the film with Harry Joe Brown.

The third picture, MGM's "Nickel Show," will expand the Hollywood history idea in that while running through the history of famous accomplishments and personalities, it will also trace the history of theatres from the old "store show" days to the era of luxurious picture palaces.

Wolf Call

(Monogram)

Adventure

Taking wide liberties with Jack London's noted story, particularly in the way in which modern production effects accentuate melodramatic theme, "Wolf Call" nevertheless retains the elements commonly appealing to audiences appreciating thrilling entertainment.

Intelligently produced by Paul Malvern and so directed by George Waggner that exciting movement counterbalances love interest with a few moments of vocal music interluding, the picture generates interest at the beginning, moves speedily and concludes with a note of real surprise. Capably acted, with John Carroll, Movita, Peter George Lynn, Polly Ann Young, George Cleveland, Wheeler Oakman, John Kelly and John Sheehan contributing convincing performances, the show is one holding considerable interest for adults while being an attraction certain to arouse the youngsters. The method by which the canine actor, Grey Shadow, is worked into theme and action gives "Wolf Call" a character carrying back to the Strongheart and Rin-Tin-Tin days.

Play Boy "Vance," exiled to the Canadian Northwest by his father to investigate potentialities of a radium mine, finds all the cards stacked against him. Brutally treated by "Carson," conniving superintendent, and "Slugger Nelson," the tenderfoot finds friendship and romance with a native girl, "Towanah," and allies in a priest, "Devlin," and a scientist, "MacTavish." As his father is about to sell the mine, "MacTavish" discovers a process of reducing radium ore economically. Defeating "Carson's" plot to block a report of the discovery, "Vance" is injured in a plane crack up but is rescued by the dog, "Smoky," who fights off a wolf pack. With the mine preserved for the "Vance" family, the city girl sweetheart, "Natalie," surrenders her affections for the man who dared and won to the Indian girl.

The Girl from Mexico

Farce Comedy

Hokum and slapstick combine to make "The Girl from Mexico" a farce comedy of down to earth amusement with a couple of capable farceurs, Lupe Velez and Leon Errol. Fun is the element to exploit in this Robert Sisk production, from Lionel Houser's story and the screen play on which he collaborated with Joseph Fields, Miss Velez, Errol, Donald Woods, Donald MacBride, Linda Hayes, Elizabeth Risdon, Eduardo Raquello and Ward Bond have most to do in making the piece lively. In directing, Leslie Goodwins steered the picture in a manner that gives it much showmanship exploitation merit.

Talent hunting in Mexico, radio executive "Lindsay" discovers the kind of singing senorita he wants in fiery "Carmelita." Back in New York, where "Lindsay" is having love trouble with girl friend "Elizabeth," he entrusts his discovery to "Mat," playboy uncle. He promptly shows "Carmelita" all the town's hot spots. But when it comes time for the audition, she can't sing a note because she has lost her voice rooting at ball games and wrestling matches. Simultaneously "Elizabeth" visions "Carmelita" as a romantic menace and insists that she be returned to Mexico. With "Mat's" connivance, "Carmelita" gets a night club singing job, attracts a rival broadcaster's attention and forms an association that makes "Lindsay" jealous. Thereupon the picture becomes as comical as the antics of a cageful of monkeys with "Lindsay," thrilled that "Elizabeth" has broken their engagement, embarking upon a hectic pursuit of his discovery to marry her. The finale is a wild and woolly hairpulling match between "Carmelita" and "Elizabeth."

Code of the Secret Service

(First National)

Serial Stuff

This is one to tell the serial fans about. It's complete in one chapter, and the chapter's an hour long, but it contains just about everything serial fans have been thriving upon for the last couple of decades.

Material used by Lee Katz and Dean Franklin in their screenplay was compiled by W. H. Moran, former chief of the U. S. Secret Service. It pertains to the theft of engraving plates from the U. S. Mint and the pursuit and capture of the thieves, who are caught up with and disposed of in a mountain fastness in deep Mexico. The pursuit, capture and doing away with are embellished with as many narrow escapes and breathless emergencies as can be packed into 60 minutes of running time.

Ronald Reagan plays the Secret Service man assigned to the case, at breakneck speed. Eddie Foy, Jr., plays his comic assistant. Rosella Towne, heroine, enters the picture well down toward the end to supply the required romance. Moroni Olsen is suitably malevolent as the chief crook. It's a Bryan Foy production directed by Noel Smith.

The City

(Civic Films)

Documentary Film

"Year by year our cities grow more complex and less fit for living. The age of rebuilding is here." So run opening lines of the foreword for this four-reel documentary reel depicting the need of city planning. Sponsored by the American Institute of Planners through Civic Films, Inc., a nonprofit corporation, the production costs, estimated at $50,000, were advanced by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The film is to open at the Science and Education Building of the New York World's Fair on May 26th. Commercial distribution has not been set.

In technique and tone, the production is similar to a previous documentary work, "The River." With a kaleidoscopic style, superlative camera focusing and directorial manipulation from Ralph Steiner and Willard Van Dyke, an effective musical background as provided by Aaron Copland and a clearly spoken narration by Morris Carnovsky, the film offers powerful educational and propaganda material for the pleading of a new era in housing and industrial planning. However, whether it constitutes theatre entertainment seems doubtful.

There is no note of factional propaganda. Running time, 44 minutes.

The March of Freedom

(Universal)

Americanism

Universal has invaded the Americanism field in this picture. The freedom of the people, under the Bill of Rights, is traced from the American Revolution down to the present. Scenes of the World War include the outbreak, combat in the air, on the water and on land, and the return of the American troops after the Armistice. A comparison also is made of how the youth of Europe, under dictatorship, are trained for war while the younger generation of the United States lead free lives in the field of sport.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Donald's Cousin Gus

(Disney-RKO Radio)

Warning!

This Disney number presents the case history of one Gus Goose, cousin to the illustrious Donald Duck. Donald, the good host, has prepared a meal fit to set before a king, but he has not reckoned with a gargantuan appetite of Cousin Gus, who doesn't stop for table manners. The picture is a tasty dish of rich fun.—Running time, seven minutes.

Porky and Teabiscuit

(Vitaphone)

Cartoon

Porky's latest adventure finds him at the race track with a broken down race horse as his entry in the steeplechase. The stuttering pig has had the horse wished on him but the nag's chances of winning the race turn out to be better than good when a balloon is punctured behind the horse. Produced by Leon Schlesinger.—Running time, seven minutes.

Oregon Trail

Action Serial

The first three episodes of this serial are packed with hard riding, fighting and shooting of the pioneer days. John Mack Brown is the Government agent assigned to uncover a band of outlaws who are wrecking wagon trains enroute to Oregon. He meets a girl (Louise Stanley) whose father is bringing a train across the country to settle in Oregon. Indian raids, prairie fires and outlaws present obstacles, but John Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight and Bill Cody, Jr., remove them. The serial, 15 chapters, has a running time of 21 minutes for each episode.

Smooth Approach

(RKO Radio)

Golf Lessons

This is an ideal short subject for the golf enthusiast. Against the scenic background of Pebble Beach, Cal., and the National Course, at Augusta, Ga., Horton Smith, Jimmy Thompson, Ed. Dudley and Dick Metz give a few pointers to the average golfer on how to improve his game. The most difficult shots are executed in slow motion with detailed narration. This is one of the better shorts on golf.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Pharmacy Frolics

Variety Program

This musical variety introduces the Three Playboys as masters of ceremony and soda clerks. They introduce the Frazee Sisters, singing duet, who have appeared in other short subjects and in various hotels, Emerson's Mountaineers, hillbilly group, Gilrone and Starr, ball-room dancing team, Richard and Carson, tap dancers, and Dave Monahan on the xylophone.—Running time, 18½ minutes.

A Worm's Eye View

Cartoon

Scrappy goes fishing but the action centers not around Scrappy but the little worm at the other end of the line. The worm's immediate problem is to avoid the hungry fishes that swarm around him. A fast talker, the worm convinces the fishes that once they have eaten him they themselves will be caught and fried. So Scrappy's fishing excursion is unproductive and he wends his way home at the end of the day while the happy worm still dangles at the end of the line. A Charles Mintz production. Running time, seven minutes.

Arcade Varieties

(RKO Radio)

Musical Comedy

With Eddie East and Ralph Dumke, better known to radio fans as the "Sisters of the Skillet," as master of ceremony, the latest Nu-Atlas Musical introduces Lillian Roth singing, the Frazee sisters harmonizing a Mother Goose ditty, Gilrone and Starr, who have appeared in many New York hotels, and Radio City Music Hall, ballroom dancing, and for a climax the six Philharmonicas, a group of young men who have had success in night clubs and on the radio.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Nellie of the Circus

Melodrama

This Walter Lantz Cartune is a burlesque animation of the gay 90's melodrama complete with the heroine, hero and villain. Big Dan is searching for Nellie, the heroine, who has been kidnapped and put in the circus to perform on the trapeze. After years of discouragement Dan finds her, overpowers the villain and as in all melodramas hero and heroine live happily ever after. Off-screen commentation as well as dialogue by the characters makes this cartoon entertaining and amusing.—Running time, 7¼ minutes.

Diving Rhythm

Sports Issue

The skill of outstanding exponents of diving is illustrated here in slow-motion by Pete DesJardines, former Olympic champion; Charley Diehl, heavyweight champion; Marshall Wayne, 1936 Olympic's winner in flying somersaults, and Tony Zukas, world's most spectacular diver. Practically all the dives in the book are executed brilliantly and effortlessly by the champions. A touch of humor is provided by the diving comedians Ted Weingarten and Frank Foster. Narrative by Jack Kofoed. Described by Ford Bond. Running time, 10 minutes.

Swing Sanitarium

(Universal)

Musical Comedy

Stone and Collins (Dorothy, daughter of Fred Stone, and her husband Charles Collins) open a sanitarium for curing all ills with swing. Roscoe Ates, the stuttering comedian, is their first patient. The Three Marshalls are introduced in a vocal rendition, followed by Kathleen Nay, soprano, the Robbins Brothers and Margie doing their tumbling act and the Melva sisters producing music from liquid filled bottles. Stone and Collins wind up this short with a tap dance.—Running time, 17½ minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 62

Oddities

Alois Havrilla here has an assemblage of many interesting subjects for his narration. John Boyle, a radio engineer, has a collection of miniature oddities, including a playable violin no larger than a cigarette. Reverend Linton Reel, a country parson in Greenville, Tenn., has captured a wild horse and trained him to do tricks. In Nashville, William Edmondson, a Negro sculptor, cuts objects from stone. Also in Tennessee a mule raiser of Columbia has crossed mules with Shetland ponies and produced mules of smaller stature. Road builders in Holland are shown overcoming the obstacle of exceedingly marshy land. Tall piles must be driven into the ground to lend support to the concrete that will be laid on top of the piles. Automatons, mechanical figures that move and act like human beings, comprise an interesting collection now on display in New Orleans. This is an interesting and instructive color subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 9

(Paramount)

Coast Guard, Wild Life and Fashion

Paramount's latest pictorial is divided into three parts. First is filmed the United States Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., with young men being trained in the classroom, machine shop and on the water to face all emergencies. The second section takes the camera below the surface to glimpse the actions of ducks swimming and diving, and then goes into the dense swamps, after nightfall, to study the habits of animals. The final section is devoted to the women, with Colette, famous style designer, contributing a formula from which any woman can dress becomingly.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Screen Snapshots—
Series 18, No. 9

Stars and Horses

Hollywood's current interest in horses is taken note of in this issue of the Screen Snapshots series. Bing Crosby, Joe E. Brown, Virginia Bruce, Charles Starrett, Allan Jones and Robert Young are shown with their stables. At a horse show in the San Fernando Valley in California are seen such horse fanciers as Bill Boyd, Irene Hervey, Robert Taylor, Clark Gable, Carole Lombard and Jean Parker among others. The comedy is supplied by the Three Stooges. Running time, 10 minutes.

America Takes to Skis

Skiing

With spring and summer sports the current past time, this short is a little belated. The subject deals with skiing instruction by Otto Lang, famed ski expert and instructor in turning, racing and slalom racing. The short also shows the delicate care in ski-manufacture. It is an entertaining and instructive seasonal short.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Come Back to Erin

(ABPC)

Travelogue

The beauties of the Emerald Isle here are translated into a color picture which has a quiet charm all its own. The tour takes in its stride Blarney Castle, Giants Causeway and Killarney, the fishing industries of Ulster, and the homely folk of the western coasts. The footage is overlong and the dialogue commentary, between a couple of Irish exiles, verbose. There are Irish airs as a musical background. In the United States, no less than on this side of the Atlantic, a wide public exists for such a film. Running time, 33 minutes.

The Hockey Champ

(Disney-RKO Radio)

Donald on Ice

Fun is fun, in or out of season. Master Donald's role here pictures him as a ducklike Sonja Henie; in fact, Donald inquires who is this Nordic skating star. Then comes the debunking by that trio of related imps, Donald's nephews. The hostilities wax hot and furious despite the wintry arena. It's merriment unconfined.—Running time, seven minutes.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LAW COMES TO TEXAS, THE: Buck Jones, Veda Ann Borg—This star is gaining popularity with each showing. Columbia should help him along with good material. Good for western lovers. Running time, 56 minutes. Played April 16.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LAW OF THE TEXAN: Buck Jones, Dorothy Fay—This was another western that fell 'way down at the box office. Money is scarce among the group that have been accustomed to the westerns. Played March 4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Margaret Lindsay—Very good program murder comedy with action and fun from beginning to end. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WEST OF SANTA FE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—This was probably the lowest gross we have had for a western in several years. Picture satisfactory. Played March 25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Lionel Barrymore, Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Spring Byington, Ann Miller—We cannot complain much about the gross on this one as it was above normal considerably, but it hardly drew as well as we thought it would. A swell picture which pleased most of the fans. Running time, 125 minutes. Played April 23-24.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—Very good. Nice weekend business. Pat O'Brien steals the picture. They brought us out temporarily out of depression.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Fine drama with tragic ending. Drew and pleased the ladies only. Played May 3-4.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—Pretty good musical comedy feature but no box office appeal. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 23-24.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—Didn't draw like we thought it would and it really didn't have much to bring them in. Powell is slipping in these parts. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver—Well, we finally had to get the SRO sign out and dust it off for this picture, and that hasn't happened in a long time. As far as the box office is concerned, this is the best picture we have played this year. Played April 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver—Enough has been said by other exhibitors, which are correct. The best story and next to the Hardy series this is the best Rooney picture. Running time, 92 minutes. Played April 13-14.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—"Hain't" any. Just a pleasing programmer.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DRAMATIC SCHOOL: Luise Rainer, Paulette Goddard, Alan Marshal, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—Good picture but nothing to bring them in unless it is Goddard, whom several wanted to see. Highly overrated and much too highly allocated. Rainer is slipping fast here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—A dandy comedy that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Good picture; good business. Has everything. Played April 30-May 1.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—Personally I am ready to endorse everything other exhibitors have said about this picture, adding a few bricks of my own for good measure, but as it kept the patrons roaring with laughter, here's a nice orchid for you, Joe, and we hope to see you again soon. This is not good enough for a single feature but doubled it with "King of the Turf" and it certainly pleased. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 21-23.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Alan Marshal, Buddy Ebsen, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor—A nice little program picture that went over nicely but not the show that it was allocated at. Just a good little homey picture that pleased the audience but not an exceptional draw. No good for extended runs. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franciska Gaal, Franchot Tone, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner—A fair picture, not bad but not so very good. Running time, 76 minutes.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—All the cash customers came out with a smile and a satisfied look and the box office statement was also cheerful reading, so everybody was happy. Played April 28.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Edward Arnold, Lionel Barrymore, Victor McLaglen, Guy Kibbee—Very entertaining but not a success at the box office. Play it if Nelson Eddy is liked without MacDonald. Victor McLaglen was very good; the show was really all his, but the little Barrymore played was good and enjoying. Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day, Marc Lawrence—Wallace Beery is popular here and he gives the superior performance we expect from him. He is just the whole show. Alan Curtis as the son who becomes a killer is very good. In the final sequence where he permits himself to be shot to save his father the grief and disgrace of capturing him, he is superb. Leo's new star, Laraine Day, is not ready for the lead. Marc Lawrence is good. Held the interest but is rather depressing. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 28-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter—First of this picture seemed draggy but picked up at the end. This was just a fair picture and sure was not worth the rental paid for it. Played April 28-30.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—Wonderful production but nothing for small town box office.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

WITHIN THE LAW: Ruth Hussey, Paul Kelly, Lynne Carver—Not a super special but a good program picture. It has pace, and while it deals with a gang of smart crooks, there was but one killing, a restraint that was welcome. And a word for Ruth Hussey, new to us, but a sureness and deftness in her role as leader and brains of the gang.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Monogram

BOY'S REFORMATORY: Frankie Darro, Grant Withers—Good for "B" houses, especially pleasing for juvenile trade. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 7.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

WANTED BY SCOTLAND YARD: James Stephenson, Betty Lynne—The title is the only good thing about this one. Lacks excitement. Just fair. Running time, 56 minutes. Played April 16.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Paramount

AMBUSH: Gladys Swarthout, Lloyd Nolan—A dandy action picture and pleased weekend audience.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EAGLE AND THE HAWK, THE (reissue): Fredric March, Cary Grant, Carole Lombard, Jack Oakie—A reissue. Good airplane picture that did fair business. But one thing that is apparent is the advance of recording. These old reissue pictures do not reproduce on the system as nearly as good as the new methods.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—This is not an "Arkansas Traveler" but it did satisfy the Burns fans evidently. Only trouble as I see it was weak on story. Burns is a salty individual and he has that something that goes with the regular folks.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—Business average. Picture OK but lacks something. Paramount should do better by our Bob.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—This picture has everything and is right down Miss Colbert's alley. But you can't give Colbert two or three "Zazas" and expect business. Today the memory of the public is long; they remember the failures and forget the successes. If there is one star that has bad breaks that star is Colbert. She belongs in light comedy and that is where she should stay.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—A grand musical picture. Paramount has made quite a few good pictures this year, at least they have proven so at my box office. This picture is different from any he has made. Also Miss Gaal is a fine little actress, even if she is "a Sweet Little Headache." Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 28.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—Another sour gangster picture from Paramount. They need a shakeup out on the coast. They seem to have lost all touch as to what makes audience pictures. Out of the number they are releasing they have had ten pictures that have killed all the way from one to four in each picture. No wonder business is slipping. It is not all depression. It is the quality of many of the features that have come through this season and Paramount holds the top spot, if that is

The cure IS here!

"There is nothing wrong with the motion picture business that good pictures can't cure."
— Nicholas M. Schenck

Across the continent a camera turns, stars speak words into a microphone, and a picture is born.

Men and women — artists, directors and technicians — their careers and their professional lives at stake, sweat, struggle and dream to make that picture a success.

Sometimes they fail. More often they succeed.

Today, it seems to us, these men and women have succeeded more brilliantly than ever before.

With "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell". With "Juarez", "Union Pacific", "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle", "Wuthering Heights", "Man of Conquest", "Only Angels Have Wings", "Goodbye, Mr. Chips", "East Side of Heaven".

These are great pictures, money pictures. They are pictures that will be seen and talked about in cities and small towns throughout the country. They are pictures that point to happy days for every box office, large or small.

For good pictures are good for everyone. They're good for those who make them, good for those who show them, good for those who see them.

But especially are they good for those whose business it is to show them. For what is good for the average exhibitor is good for the industry as a whole.

Perhaps it seems presumptuous of us to pass judgment on pictures. But our position in the industry only makes us prouder to be part of a business that can stir America with craftsmanship of such a high order.

Now in this May of 1939, in a year that still has more than seven months to run, we firmly believe that the industry has the pictures, great pictures.

Gentlemen, we think that the cure IS here — for all of us. From our end of this great industry you will receive the fullest cooperation.

any honor.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—Average western which pleased average business. Played May 5-6.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Just what the doctor ordered for a small town. Went over with a bang. Give it your best playing time, fellow showmen, it's worth it. You won't regret advertising this picture because the title alone is box office attraction. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 20-21.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Will please Autry followers and western fans. Good. Running time, 56 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DOWN IN ARKANSAW: Ralph Byrd, Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Pinky Tomlin—A real hill billy that is a scream in every inch of film. These are great for small town approval and great for your box office. Play it by all means.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

PRAIRIE MOON: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Shirley Deane—Nice little western that did a better than average business. Played May 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BOY SLAVES: Anne Shirley, Roger Daniel—Played with "The Saint Strikes Back." Just a couple of programmers. "Boy Slaves" title got some business. Both got by nicely, and pleased.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FIXER DUGAN: Lee Tracy, Peggy Shannon, Virginia Weidler—A fair programmer. Will please the juvenile trade. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 7.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

RENEGADE RANGER, THE: George O'Brien, Rita Hayworth, Ray Whitley—This picture was substituted for "Painted Desert" too late to advertise to our customers. Box office poor. Played April 8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SAINT STRIKES BACK, THE: George Sanders, Wendy Barrie—Played with "Boy Slaves." Just a couple of programmers. Both got by nicely and pleased.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TROUBLE AT SUNDOWN: George O'Brien, Rosalind Keith, Ray Whitley—Played with "Twelve Crowded Hours." "Sundown" was a good western. The two made a tough show all the way.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TWELVE CROWDED HOURS: Richard Dix, Lucille Ball—Played with "Trouble at Sundown." "Twelve Crowded Hours" not much. The two made a tough show all the way.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Robert Kellard, Jean Rogers—Jane got us into a lot more trouble. People disappointed and proprietor disappointed at the box office. Failed to make film rental. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—As usual Jane had some extra draw for us and brought our Friday-Saturday business back to normal. And she had Carrillo to help out a lot, too. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT, THE: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—Good. One of the best Jane Withers up to date. Pleased. Running time, 69 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

EVERYBODY'S BABY: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane—Good comedy. Drew well on Pal Night. Played May 2.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—Swell, swell, and the box office really did swell. One of the best money makers since "Tom Sawyer." Wish it had played more than two days. Give it more playing time because it's all worth it. Running time, 105 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Amanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson—With this picture we began our Friday-Saturday shows. In addition we had a matinee performance Friday afternoon. Picture highly satisfactory. Returns at box office good considering business conditions here. Played April 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Certainly here is a box office natural. It is a beautiful picture with a swell cast, and how Walter Brennan did run off with the honors! Best draw in our house since "Boys Town." Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 30-May 2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—One of the sweetest, most beautiful pictures made. The best Miss Temple has made. The grandest entertainment ever to come to my screen. Put it over big, my friends, because it has box office value. Even if some people don't like Temple, they will like this, if you can get them in. They won't regret they came. Truly one of the best pictures I have ever witnessed. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 16-17.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari—A good program picture but not much help to the box office. Played March 18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, George Barbier, Helen Westley—Not quite so good as it should be with this excellent cast. Too much talking. The real stars are George Barbier and Helen Westley Will get by but story is not too good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Roger Daniel, Dolores Costello—Double featured this with "Flirting with Fate" and it made a very satisfactory program. Adolphe Menjou gives his best performance in this, and the boy, Roger Daniel, is excellent. Some good races. Many did not like the ending, where Menjou struck the boy, but altogether it is very satisfactory. Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 21-23.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRISON WITHOUT BARS: Corinne Luchaire, Edna Best—Played this during investigation of Iowa state institutions to fine business. Picture excellent but has no draw names so must be put over.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Joan Bennett, Fredric March, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—Personally we enjoyed this very much but our farm friends are poor lovers, so we suffered. Would recommend it double billed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—Very good but not extended runs by any means. Please all.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CODE OF THE STREETS: "Little Tough Guys," Harry Carey, Frankie Thomas—B houses can use this on week-ends as a top biller and a good one for A's as a co-feature. Will please the juvenile trade. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SINNERS IN PARADISE: Madge Evans, John Boles, Bruce Cabot—In spite of stormy weather, we did normal business. Played March 11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

STORM, THE: Nan Grey, Tom Brown, Barton MacLane, Charles Bickford, Preston Foster—Picture satisfactory but box office returns lower than ever. Played April 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THAT CERTAIN AGE: Deanna Durbin, Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, John Halliday, Irene Rich, Nancy Carroll—Good picture that did not draw any too well. First Durbin picture that I have run and the fans did not know her any too well. Played April 21-22.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Fields never made a poorer picture but the help and name of "Charlie McCarthy" did not hurt the box office in the least. Not a good show but still they come, so why complain. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YOUNG FUGITIVES: Robert Wilcox, Dorothea Kent, Harry Davenport—We played this to below normal business. Played February 25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Humphrey Bogart, Kay Francis—In spite of the fact that it had Bogart in this lead, this was only a second rate programmer for duals. Was a fair picture but no draw. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, DETECTIVE: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—Not a bad picture but evidently made for the second half of a double bill. Did average business on this. Played May 2.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—A picture that had plenty of panning but went nicely here on a weekend. Did not see how Blondell and O'Brien could make a bad show and took a chance on it and these two stars did not let us down but Bobby stole the show. Running time, 68 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: No. 258—This is the issue that recorded parts of Roosevelt's speech in Georgia. Frankly, I think that the audience was shocked at the smug, rabble rousing terms that he used in denouncing the European situation. There is something wrong with business in this part of the country and has been since this war scare and my opinion is that part of it is such jingoism as was in this News. Certainly it reaches a vast number of people in the different issues of the newsreels. IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

in London

Paramount Starts

With the arrival of Ray Milland and Ellen Drew from the United States, work began immediately, under Mario Zampi, on Paramount's first major production in this country, "French without Tears." Anthony Asquith is directing.

The film is being made from one of the most successful comedies to have graced the London stage in many years.

Previous to shooting at the Sound City Studios, considerable exteriors were taken in a Normandy fishing village where much of the action supposedly takes place. Scenes of a village fete with bands playing and open air dancing were featured. These will be matched up with studio sequences in which 500 persons will take part.

Various leading French artistes have been brought over from France by Zampi and include the massive comedian Jim Gerald, and ingenue Janine Darcey.

Properties have been imported from France and include specifically French seltzer syphons, cafe tables, umbrellas and other details of local color.

Also in the cast are Roland Culver and Guy Middleton, who both appeared in the London play.

London on Screen

An effort to put London on the screen is planned by G. & S. Films, now being formed by Capt. Richard Norton and Josef Somlo, whose first picture, "A Window in London," is due at Pinewood for immediate production.

The story, which is to have authentic London backgrounds, already has had the blessing of Herbert Morrison of the London County Council, and a feature of its narrative will be the rebuilding of Waterloo Bridge. The London Passenger Transport Board is also collaborating.

Herbert Mason is directing from a screen play by Ian Dalrymple, and locations already have been shot on the Embankment, Waterloo Bridge, Chelsea Palace, Savoy Court and the Underground railway.

Paul Lukas will appear with Michael Redgrave and Sally Gray. GFD will distribute.

52-Week Schedule

A 52-week production schedule is boasted by Strand Film Company, major producer of documentary films in Britain. Recently Strand moved to the Merten Park Studios where, with the close collaboration, financial and otherwise, of Western Electric, they are at full pressure on their 1939-40 program.

From East Africa has returned Alexander Shaw, who has been shooting a picture on Colonial administration. This is to be cut and made ready for showing at the New York World Fair. On the completion of this film Shaw will make a four-reeler on the Newcastle to London collier boats in color. Basil Wright will produce.

During the absence in Canada of Stuart Legg, Donald Taylor, managing director of Strand, is producing. His activities include a film on the work of the national fitness campaign, "Animal Kingdom," dealing with the black-headed gulls of Lincolnshire, and a three-reeler now being shot in Africa on the London to Durban Imperial Airways flying route.

Jimmy O'Dea and Nova Pilbeam as they appear in the forthcoming Michael Balcon production, "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," being directed by Walter Forde at the Ealing studios.

To follow are an answer to "The Citadel," a film on Anglo-American collaboration, one on local government, and another on housing. Also scheduled are a documentary on the work of the Channel Pilots and a film on the Aran Islands. Robert Flaherty is among those collaborating on the scripts.

Awaiting trade show from the Strand Film Company are: "Wings over an Empire," a three-reeler on civil aviation; "Sydney Eastbound" dealing with the Empire Air Routes; "Color Flight," a Len Lye in color; "Speed the Plough," the story of the mechanization of British Agriculture; "White Rhino," a film of the rhinoceros; "Air Background" for Imperial Airways and a film for the National Savings Committee, "Holiday Horizons."

Creating "Gang"

A novel production plan which it is hoped will have the backing of one of the leading figures of the European show business, has been launched by Irish director Michael Dillon, creator of the documentary of London, "Eight Million."

Dillon plans to create what he terms "Michael Dillon's Murder Gang," bringing into it certain unknown but talented artists from provincial repertory theatres. He will make three pictures a year on a single quota basis and the gang will be featured in radio and television shows as well. The story of each film will, as the title suggests, be mainly of the thriller variety. Though the players will be paid on a salary basis; there will also be profit sharing on cooperative lines.

Brewery Again

A brewery played a prominent part in the last George Formby film. A brewery is a leading feature in "Cheer, Boys, Cheer!", currently on the floor at the Ealing Studios under the direction of Walter Forde.

Particular care for authenticity has been displayed by art director Wilfred Shingleton with the set upon which Nova Pilbeam, Jimmy O'Dea, Edmund Gwenn, Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt perform their routines. Much of the action of the film takes place there, and realism has been added to the scene by having the bottling done by men and woman lent for the occasion by a brewery.

No time has been lost by Sam Sax, executive producer of Warner First National, in getting to work at the Teddington Studios. Within a week of his arrival from the United States, shooting commenced on "Confidential Lady," which is being directed by Arthur Woods, with Jane Baxter and Ben Lyon in leading roles. Production started on May 3rd. The story concerns a bride jilted on her wedding day.

Work recently was concluded, under "Doc" Salomon," on "Murder Will Out," in which John Loder, Jane Baxter and Hartley Power play leads.

Itemized

Louis Zimmerman and author-producer Bernerd Mainwaring are associated in a new production company, Adelphi Films, Ltd., formed in Britain to emphasize on the screen "the glorious traditions and the beneficial influence on the human race of the British Empire."

The company plans to shoot exteriors in various Empire locations and start work on "In the King's Service."

Say the sponsors: "It will be shown how the fear of war so prevalent throughout the homes of the world will be dispelled in the knowledge of our preparedness and the impregnable position of the British Empire."

The estimated cost of the first film is £75,000.

"Molly, Bless Her!" is the title of Gracie Fields' second 1939 picture, due for production by Robert T. Kane, with Monty Banks again directing. It is from an original story by Frances Marion and deals with an out-of-luck vaudeville star who tires of her metier and becomes housekeeper to a millionaire.

The film will go into production at the Islington Studios in August from a scenario which is being prepared by Roger Burford, and with dialogue by Miles Mallison.

Anglo American's "Secret Journey," in which Basil Radford and Silvia St. Claire have leading roles, has been finished under the direction of John Baxter.

The producers declare that in Silvia St. Claire they have discovered a new star.

The story is one of international espionage.

"Saved by the Flying Squad," "East of the Strand" and "Good for Nothing" are the titles of three films which are to be made against a background of everyday London, by Marlborough Films, Ltd., a new company at the head of which are Keith Mitchell and E. R. Russell Starr.

BRITONS FIND PROPOSED EXCISE TAX WILL COST AMERICANS 10 TO 15%

Distributors in London Say New Import and Excise Levy Would Require Americans to Pay at Least $3,821,925 Annually

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

A fortnight after the chancellor of the exchequer introduced his new import and excise duties and presented the British trade with its prettiest financial dilemma in years, the industry still awaits any sign of a likely change in the situation. Beyond verbal expressions of interest and non-committal promises of sympathetic consideration from Sir John Simon, no suggestion has yet been made that the burden is likely to be lifted.

Protests Presented

Activity the last week has concentrated on pleadings and expostulations by the various branches of the industry. All sections, at the invitation of Whitehall, have presented their protests and their case against the new duties to the chairman of the board of customs. The fact that sectional cases were pleaded does not alter the fact that Sir John Simon has accomplished the miracle of achieving in two minutes a trade unity other Government departments have failed to achieve in ten years.

Protests have been made in Parliament itself, and Sir John Simon has promised to examine the criticisms and has admitted that it might be necessary to consider adjustments.

Though the sectional deputations to the board of customs have concluded, there is every likelihood that Sir John will receive a joint deputation led by Dave Griffiths, head of the Kinematograph Renters Society, representing the industry as a whole. A joint session of 17 industry sections on Friday unanimously agreed to petition Sir John.

Complications Unsuspected

It has become increasingly clear that the chancellor was not aware of the ultimate complications of his taxes, that they were perhaps the result of more zeal than enlightenment on the part of the young men who operate under the Treasury banner.

Until the finance bill reaches its first reading, probably not till late May, there is little likelihood of practical action. This may come in the form of amendments proposed by non-Government members, or even by the chancellor. A wide trade circle believes the case for the newsreels already has opened Sir John's eyes. Others expect concessions to British producers and on behalf of foreign films for specialized showing. The widest circle is not hopeful for a general removal of the excise tax. One body of opinion, however, is optimistic enough to expect the complete abolition of the excise duty and the import tax.

Trade concern at the effect of the new duties has magnified. Distributors now realize that it will mean the payment by American interests of at least £764,385 ($3,821,925) annually. A minimum cost to them on their operations, including newsreel operations, of between 10 and 15 per cent. Producers operating on more economic lines than hitherto declare the total tax cost, in spite of Sir John's promise of rebate on wastage, would mean the difference between operating at a profit and at a loss. Exhibitors are vividly aware of the likelihood that the duty will intensify the product shortage and consequently increase rentals. Labor foresees less employment and lower wages for those fortunate enough to be at work.

BRITONS FAVOR PLAYS ON THEIR TELEVISION

A questionnaire of the British Broadcasting Company sent to 4,000 viewers has brought 1,200 replies, 90 per cent of whom favor plays and variety programs from theatres, newsreels, magazines and light entertainment.

Equivalent of New Income Tax

The average annual turnover of distributors and producers here is approximately £15,000,000. Of this probably £2,500,000 is profit. Sir John's estimate that his taxes would yield him a million pounds means a reduction of profit to £1,500,000. Net profit is thus reduced from £1,750,000 to £1,000,000. This is equivalent to the imposition of a new income tax on the industry of seven shillings and sixpence in the pound.

On the newsreels, to whom the excise and import duties will mean an extra cost for materials of £200,000, the duty means a 25 to 30 per cent tax on turnover. It will be seen at once why further operation would be impracticable.

As regards the producers, a sop has been thrown to Cerberus by the chancellor with a specific promise that he will give a rebate on all waste film not actually included in the finished print. The complexities of this matter were dealt with at length in the House of Commons budget resolution debate by Labor member Tom Williams, who, estimating, with extreme modesty it would seem, that 4,000 feet is wasted on a 5,000 feet film, said the cost, including sound track mutes and marred prints, would reach more than £25. Sir Adrian Baillie, however, in the same debate, with probably more immediate production experience than Mr. Williams, estimated the wastage on a 10,000-foot film at between 80,000 and 100,000 feet. It is a general custom here that the British producer also bears the printing cost of release prints.

Warns of Burdens of Americans

It is obvious, of course, that there is truth in Mr. Williams' comment anent the American distributor, that the new excise duty on British raw stock is not going to make a difference between profit and loss. His estimate is that for an average feature with twenty release prints, the additional cost would be £346. But there is equal truth, probably, in his suggestion that further to burden American interests, which have already been compelled to keep £2,000,000 of their money in this country for the production of films, is not to improve relations with the importing country.

Sir John has commented that "I cannot believe that an excise duty which is expected to produce £600,000 will prove a really serious clog to a great industry which is now taking at its box offices £50,000,000 in the year." This is taken as an indication of his trend of thought, an indication not only that he was fully aware that the major burden must fall upon U. S. distributors, but a hint that he was not likely to lift it over readily.

Already it is estimated that if the duties remain there is a possibility that a hundred fewer films will come into this country from America, a circumstance which exhibitors feel will not only render more acute their product problem, but weaken their resistance to higher film rentals.

With the import duty American distributors are less concerned. The total receipts on the custom's duty are totaled as £230,000—about 3¼ per cent of the total turnover. Producers and distributors will bear a burden of 7 per cent. Higher grade films, more expensive in regard to their length, probably will pay only 1½ per cent. The Quota restrictions, of course, are already equivalent to an import tax.

The processing laboratories here will, however, feel the pinch, for it is estimated that 2,500,000 feet of duped negative is printed here annually. Labor foresees in this a decrease in laboratory employment and economies at the expense of staffs.

It is unofficially reported here that Jerome Jackson, former head of the Teddington Warner Studios, has joined Irving Asher, who is producing quota features for Columbia release at the Denham studios.

Circuits Open Fight On Louisiana Tax

The right of a state to collect a sales tax on fees exhibitors paid for showing of motion pictures in Louisiana was emphasized in the opening hearing of a suit filed by 11 circuit operators of Louisiana in the district court of Baton Rouge. The suit was primarily instituted for recovery of money they paid in protest under Louisiana's one per cent sales tax, or public welfare revenue tax as it is formally entitled. Attorneys in opening the trial said that the litigation was the first within their knowledge contesting the point, stressing the fact that Ohio and California have declared the fees exempt from their sales tax.

Infringement Action Filed Against Disney

Claiming infringements of three of its patents, the Meinograph Process, Inc., Detroit, Mich., has filed suit in federal court in Los Angeles against Walt Disney and Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., demanding an accounting of profits and an injunction to restrain further use of the processes.

The patents, according to the complaint filed by Hazard and Miller, attorneys, are for methods and devices for making multicolored prints, reducing colored copy on printing plates and reproducing colors. The suit charges the processes were wrongfully used on "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and other productions.

Charging plagiarism of her story in the making of "Rembrandt," Elsie H. Hunt, scenario writer, this week filed a $500,000 damage suit in federal court in Los Angeles against United Artists Studios, Inc., London Film Productions, Inc., Alexander Korda, Samuel Goldwyn and Carl Zuckermayer, English writer.

Miss Hunt claims she submitted a scenario, "The Night Watch of Rembrandt Van Rijn," to London Films in 1935 and had it returned to her. Mr. Zuckmayer wrote the script for the film.

20th Century-Fox Files Answer

Twentieth Century-Fox this week filed its answer in New York supreme court to the suit of Robert E. Sherwood and the Playwrights Producing Company, Inc., which seeks damages and an injunction restraining the use by Twentieth Century-Fox of the title "Young Mr. Lincoln" for its film. The answer denies Mr. Sherwood's contention that the defendant changed the title of its film from "The Lawyer of the West" and is attempting to mislead the public into believing that the film is an adaptation of the Sherwood play "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

Seek Examination Order

Skouras Theatres Corporation, Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., and Fox Theatres Corporation have applied to the New York supreme court for an order directing David Laza, as president of Lazfox, Inc., to appear for examination before trial. Lazfox is suing for $100,000, charging breach of a contract of February 21, 1931, for the candy concession in 75 theatres.

Verdict Upheld

The district court of appeals in Los Angeles has upheld the verdict against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer awarding $10,000 to Henry Barsha and David Weissman, writers, who claimed their story "High Fever" was plagiarized in MGM's film, "A Day at the Races."

OBITUARIES

James Parrott Dies; Writer and Director

James Gibbons Parrott, 42, writer and director, died in Hollywood May 11th from heart disease. Mr. Parrott entered the motion picture business in 1918 as an actor in single reel comedies for Pathe under the name of Poll Parrott.

He directed Charley Chase comedies, Max Davidson comedies and Roach Star comedies for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, including several Laurel and Hardy films. In 1935 he collaborated on the Shirley Temple picture "Curly Top" for Twentieth Century-Fox. In 1937 he collaborated on the screen plan of the Laurel and Hardy feature "Way Out West" for MGM.

Frank Moulan Dies

Frank Moulan, 63, whose characterizations in the Savoyard operettas had made him a Gilbert and Sullivan favorite for more than 35 years, died May 13th in New York. In 1937 Mr. Moulan appeared in "The Girl Said No," in which a medley of Gilbert and Sullivan songs were incorporated.

Title Rights Action In Los Angeles Court

An unusual suit over rights to a title of a literary work has been filed in federal court in Los Angeles. Margaretta Tuttle, novelist, seeks $100,000 damages from Loew's, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, First National Pictures, Inc., and Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., over the picture "The Unguarded Hour," made by MGM in 1937.

Miss Tuttle claimed she sold silent picture rights to her novel "The Unguarded Hour" to First National in 1925 when a picture of that title was made. She charges that in 1937 MGM, despite her protests, made a picture with the same title. The complaint claims that Miss Tuttle still retains property interest in the title.

Universal Is Upheld

The appellate division of the New York supreme court has sustained the legal sufficiency of the complaint of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., in its suit for $270,000 damages and an accounting against John D. and Eugene T. Tippett in a unanimous decision. The suit charged the defendants with entering a fraudulent plan in 1927 with Carl Laemmle, then president of Universal, to split commissions on a five year contract for the sale by the defendants of raw stock to Universal.

RCA Loses Appeal

The Delaware supreme court has sustained the decision of the late Chancellor J. O. Wolcott in favor of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, parent organization of Philco Radio and Television Corporation of America. The case was an appeal from the decision of Chancellor Wolcott on an injunction bill filed by the battery company seeking to enjoin Radio Corporation of America from terminating licensing agreements granting the right to use basic radio patents owned by RCA.

FACT THAT PLOT IS FICTIONAL DOESN'T SANCTION UNAUTHORIZED SHOTS: RULING

New York Appellate Court Finds Against Universal on Madison Square Garden's Hockey Case

The fact that a motion picture story is "fictional" does not give a producer the right to include in that picture scenes showing outside persons or their property which were filmed without authorization, New York's court of appeals has decided.

Madison Square Garden Case

Producers, when selecting names and places for their screen stories frequently have relied on the fact that the plot was entirely fictional, but in the case of Madison Square Garden versus Universal Pictures (7 N. Y. Supp., 845), it was ruled that even the fictional nature of the plot is no defense. In this case, Universal's "Idol of the Crowds" was conceded by both sides to be fictional, and the picture made no direct reference to the Garden, although the press book did.

These were the facts alleged: The Garden owns the ice hockey team known as the "Rangers." During the championship Stanley Cup playoffs in Detroit in 1937, the defendant, Universal, obtained permission to photograph the game with the stipulation that the shots were to be used for its newsreel only.

The feature film story was based on professional ice hockey, and the plot dealt in part with the Stanley Cup playoffs. The locale was New York City, but there were no shots actually taken within the Garden, and the Garden and the Rangers were not mentioned. However, the film did include shots from the newsreel taken in the Detroit playoffs which showed the Rangers in action, and the press book mentioned the Garden.

The Garden contended that an impression had been created that the film was actually made there.

Ruling Reversed on Appeal

The lower court, however, ruled for the defendants, declaring that it was not "unfair competition" because the plaintiff had failed to show any property right which was entitled to protection in such action; that the plot was purely fictional; and that no attempt had been made to "pass off" the film as the work of the Garden. As for the advertising material which used the Garden's name, the court held that a private person's name could not be used without consent as it was protected under the Civil Rights Law, but that a corporation was not entitled to the same protection.

On appeal, taken by the Garden, this ruling was reversed. The complaint was upheld and the suit ordered to trial. The court said, in part:

"Though the plot of the picture was fiction, the melodramatic interest in the story was increased by apparently authentic photographs of the plaintiff's team playing a championship ice hockey match in an arena purporting to be located in New York City. The public would suppose, and actually did, that the background of the film was an authentic background presenting scenes of actual games in which the plaintiff's team participated in New York. Defendant's circulars to exhibitors referred to the arena as Madison Square Garden. Even in a story that is obviously fiction so far as its plot is concerned, defendants should not be permitted, by the unfair practices alleged, to violate and appropriate to themselves plaintiff's valuable property rights."

Even if the elements of newsreel excerpts and the mention of the Garden in the press book were absent, there is for comparison the case of Rudolph Mayer Pictures vs. Pathe News (255 N. Y. Supp., 1016). In that case the same court granted an injunction restraining Pathe from distributing pictures of the Sharkey-Walker boxing match. The management of Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, had granted the plaintiff exclusive rights to make a film. The defendant contended that there was no property right in a boxing match and sent a cameraman, equipped with a telescopic lens, to a neighboring roof to photograph the fight. The court, however, ruled that a property right was invaded and granted an injunction.

Another Case

Also by the same court, in 1922, an injunction was granted for "unfair competition" in violation of a property right. Horace Goldin, the magician, claimed unauthorized use of an act he had invented called "Sawing a Woman in Half." (Golden vs. Clarion Photoplays, 195 N. Y. Supp., 455). The defendants produced a film of the same name which purported to show how the trick was done. "The affidavits lead irresistibly to the conclusion," said the court, "that the defendants have simply sought unfairly and unjustly to profit by plaintiff's success, by adopting the name which he gave to his illusion, and by copying his methods in an unfair competition and unreasonable interference with plaintiff's rights, which the courts should and will prevent."

Tiffany & Co., jewelers, were successful in an action against Tiffany Productions, Inc., to restrain use of the name Tiffany. 264 N. Y. Supp. 459; affirmed, 237 App. Div. 801; affirmed, 262 N. Y. 482.) After the defendant had spent $1,013,003 in advertising Tiffany Productions, the plaintiff brought suit. It was claimed that the defendant's advertisements which included "20 Gems from Tiffany," "Tiffany, It's a Gem," "Tiffany Presents," "Tiffany Tone," "Controlled by Tiffany," and "Tiffany, a World-Wide Organization," were intended to confuse the public and create the impression that the jewelers were connected with the producer.

Despite the fact that six years had elapsed between the adoption of the name and the commencement of the action, the court granted the injunction. Also overruled was the fact that non-competing products were involved. "The real injury in such cases of non-competitive products is the gradual whittling away or dispersion of identity and hold upon the public mind of the mark or name by its use upon non-competing goods. The more distinctive or unique the mark the deeper is its impress upon the public consciousness and the greater its need for protection against vitiation or disassociation from the particular product in connection with which it has been used."

The case was carried to the court of appeals, where the decision was affirmed in 1933, with one judge dissenting.

Remade Speech Shown Society

Complete dissection and remanufacture of human speech or other sounds, permitting the introduction of extensive changes in quality, pitch and inflection, was demonstrated Tuesday by Homer Duley of Bell Telephone Laboratories to the tenth anniversary meeting of the Acoustical Society of America, held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York.

The sound revamping device reveled in producing artificial voice effects of the kind used in animated cartoons and in horror pictures. Motion picture engineers who attended the demonstration discussed its adaptability to dubbing emphasis and emotional inflection into unsatisfactory recordings, thus avoiding retakes, as well as its power of modulating the natural voices of players to produce superior dramatic or comic effects.

The full possibility of the device was not exhausted at the demonstration, since in its present form it is adapted only to telephone circuits, and therefore to a frequency range limited to 3,000 cycles. Extension of the same principle to a greater range of sound, it was explained, is entirely practicable, and involves only adding more circuits of the kind now in use.

The speech analyzer dissects the output of a microphone into ten bands of frequencies, pitch and emphasis. Direct currents, corresponding in strength to the energy contained in each of these sound elements are then created, sent over a transmission line, and used to control the operation of oscillators that produce a re-creation of the original sound elements. Manipulating a control board so as to vary the strength of the individual direct currents results in the re-creation of sound that differs from the original in pitch, emphasis or frequency content. Thus pitch can be raised or lowered, emphasis removed or added, bass sound converted into soprano, and so on, producing effects that can be made dramatic, weird or comic as desired.

In telephone use the new device will multiply the number of conversations that can be carried over a single pair of wires, since the direct control currents occupy a band only 25 cycles wide. Thus a pair of wires capable of accommodating a range of 2,900 cycles ordinarily a single channel, can carry 2,900/25 or 116 conversations if used to carry only the control currents, with re-creation of speech at the far end. In addition, the possibility of dissecting and re-building sound is expected to facilitate investigation of questions of quality and distortion that have not proved completely amenable to other methods of research.

Vallen—Automatic Devices Patent Suit Is Dismissed

In a bench decision, Judge W. H. Kirkpatrick has dismissed a patent suit in United States district court at Philadelphia, brought by Vallen, Inc., Akron, Ohio, against Automatic Devices Company, Allentown, Pa. Both companies are manufacturers of curtain control and track equipment. Judge Kirkpatrick also dismissed any counterclaim without prejudice. The suit was filed in 1937.

TIME TO SOFT-PEDAL

Right now, while the weather is still amiable, let there be an immediate removal of the yearly mental hazard having to do with summer business.

For too long it has been the practice to make a bugaboo of the heated months and outdoors opposition. Already the loud speakers are blaring:

"Check up. Clean up. Change. Launder. Order. Make ready. Watch. Cover beaches, ball parks, picnic spots. Promote this. Promote that. Promote. Promote. Promote."

In other words, the enemy is at the gate. "And though we are outnumbered, men, let us sell our lives dearly."

Catch on?

Well, to hell with that. Cease firing. Let's look at this thing calmly.

The forming of the summer battle-lines is a hangover from the old days when the "legitimate" houses closed in April–May and reopened in September. Folks were expected to find their amusement elsewhere during the intervening months. Then picture houses with continuous policies came along to keep open all year. Exhibitors, faced with the job of selling their summer wares, worked desperately, hysterically, for business against the real opposition of outdoors sports and entertainment. There was reason then to fear the menace of the hot months. But why should that uncertainty exist as potently today?

Hot months or cold, the modern theatre has just a little more to offer than any other form of amusement at a price within the reach of all. Entertainment, comfort, convenience, safety—even luxury, in a salubrious atmosphere of courtesy and hospitality—are to be had for the asking. Then what more is to be expected in the summer than in any other season? Nothing more is expected, only that these attractions and comforts be sold effectively. And the selling is to be done by the theatreman in a calm, collected manner, without hysteria, worry or fear.

Only a sucker will maintain that the hot months bring no peculiar boxoffice problems that need firm, purposeful handling. But it's time to soft-pedal this business of getting the manager's kidneys in an uproar over what to do and how.

If the public is asked to look upon the theatre as a refuge from the heat, a release from discomfort and jangled nerves, how can the theatre function thusly while the manager, keystone of the operation, is not in complete control of the situation. And that control cannot be had unless it accompanies an attitude of mind free of hot-weather scares and exaggerated menaces.

Of course, the heated period challenges every manager to keep the grosses up and the temperature down. That's a man-size job in itself, a job the conscientious showman is prepared to meet and properly lick for satisfactory summer grosses. In so doing, he should not be confused with unnecessary alarums that June, July and August are boxoffice monsters that wear horns and spit fire.

THE ANSWER COULD BE "NUTS"

It's a very popular pastime, that already outworn device of charging motion picture advertising with every possible crime of selling appeal. Every now and then, and maybe too often, up pops An Authority from outside the business to call out, but loud, that unless something is done about it right now, something sure is going to happen.

Well, something did happen at a recent meeting of the A.M.P.A. It was a Prominent Business Psychologist, "held over" from a previous session, who volunteered to point out some defects in the advertising mechanism of the home offices. And it was Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres ad head, and Howard Dietz, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director of advertising and publicity, who answered for the industry. Truth forces your Chairman to break down and confess the film men did much the better job.

Considering the intangibles and vagaries of motion picture values, there is little for which our side needs to apologize in the creation of advertising, of sheer necessity often conceived and executed overnight for effective nationwide consumption. And as concerns showmanship, it is to be noted that the most successful advertisings launched by outside businesses, stem from ideas originated and first proven at the boxoffice by the motion picture industry in the long, long ago.

Giant cutout of Bob Burns mounted on his "nag" was planted atop marquee of the Rialto Theatre in Phoenix, Ariz., by Round Tabler "Carolina" Bronson in advance of "I'm From Missouri" opening. In addition, large stencils of horse's head with cast, playdate and title copy were used throughout the city. Other street stunt consisted of usherette in overalls stationed beside map. Pedestrians were asked if they were from Missouri, if so, girl put colored pin in town from where they came.

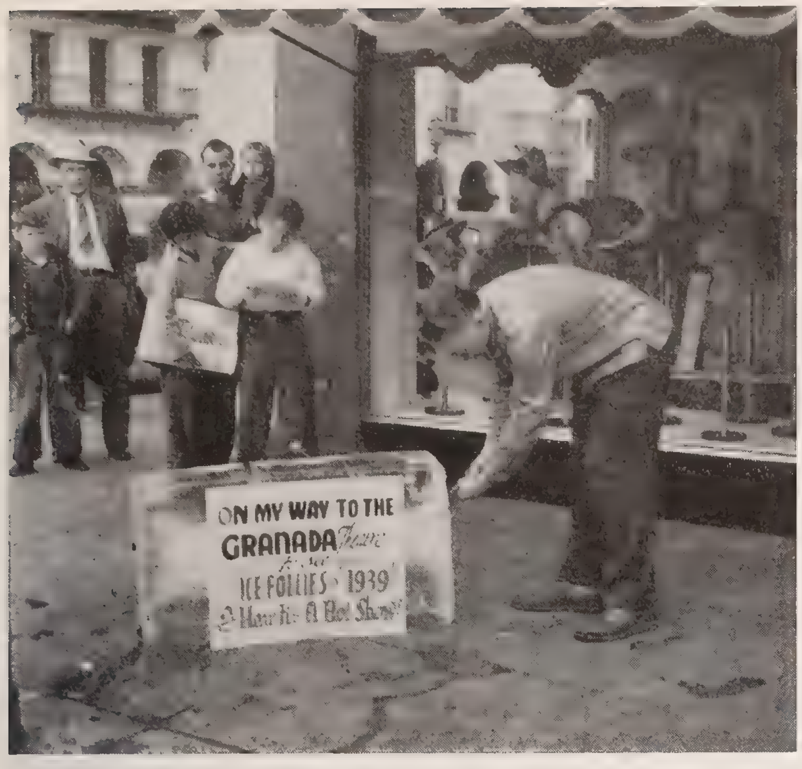
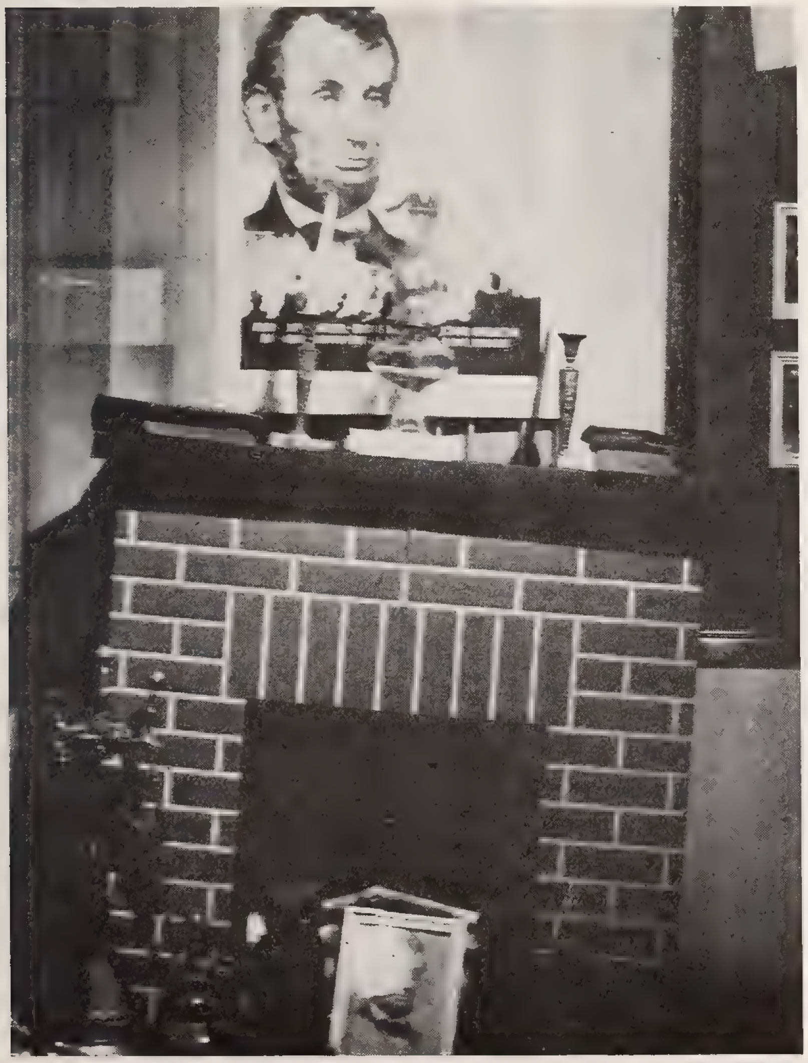
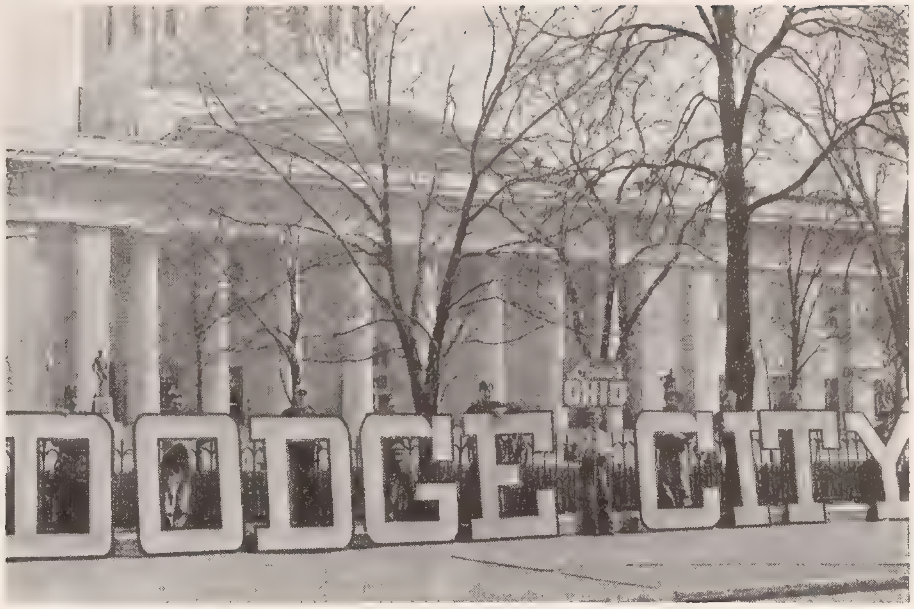
Material that had been used by the Boy Scouts at the Washington Jamboree in 1937 was taken out of the mothballs and used for street bally by Bill Smith for the "Stagecoach" date at the Palace in Breckenridge, Tex. Tepees, drums, fireplace, etc., were set up in front of theatre ahead and during run, with Boy Scouts dressed as Indians with headgear and bows and arrows stationed on guard. Giant banner with title, cast and playdates was included.



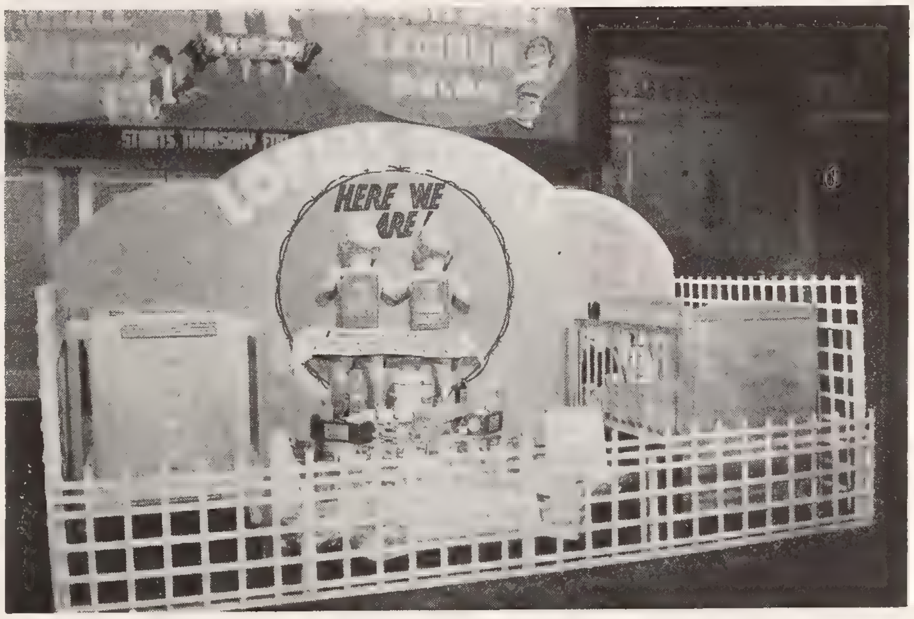
What proved to be a crowd-stopper was stunt used for "Ice Follies" by Manager Howard Ralston at Warner Brothers' Granada in Santa Barbara, Calif. Lad with ice tongs pulled 150-pound cake of ice about town; pasted to either side were cards bearing copy to the effect that boy was on his way to the theatre to see the picture.

Cardboard brick fireplace, electric logs, with all the irons and props, were part of the lobby display created for the short, "Lincoln in the White House", by Manager E. D. Hopson and his assistant, E. J. Friedwald at the Oakland Square in Chicago. Included in the display were old guns, candlesticks, picture of Lincoln, etc.





With Ohio's State House as a background for his street bally on "Dodge City", Russ Bovim's lads pose with five-foot title letters to exploit the opening of that picture at Loew's Ohio. In addition, 24-sheets were used on truck which also covered main streets in advance of the attraction's opening.



To build up Loew's "Twin Hit Shows", Joe Rubenfeld at the Oriental in Brooklyn, N. Y., promoted two layettes and all drug material to be presented to the mother of the first pair of twins born during inaugural week. Shown above is lobby display constructed by theatre display man, Henry Mangravite.

Merchant Sponsors Serial for Kids

To usher in his new "Flying G-Men" serial, Nelson McCollom at the Tivoli, in Gary, Ind., promoted local merchant on a tiein for which the store furnished trailer and model airplane kits for giveaway to kids in exchange for lobby, trailer and program credit. Merchant also supplied balsa wood gliders which together with little G-Men booklets were presented to each child attending opening of the serial. Special shows were plugged in lobby display setpiece which was prepared for the occasion and mounted with stills from each chapter and cutout one sheets.

Kumler Uses Parachutes For "The Flying Irishman"

Owner John Kumler of the Pantheon Theatre, Toledo, O., used a plane from which were released hundreds of parachutes as a ballyhoo for Doug Corrigan's "The Flying Irishman." First a special story appeared in the Toledo Blade announcing that the chutes with pass attached would be released at noon on the following day. Just before the parachutes were released eight government bombers flew over the district, apparently on their way to Detroit. "Flying Irishman" was stamped on each parachute.

Theatreman Concentrates On Goodwill Builders

Reported as proving highly successful is the birthday club inaugurated by Gordon Carson, at the Royal Theatre, Fort William, Ontario. Cards are issued to each child on which he places date of birth, and are duly filed chronologically. On natal day, congratulatory message together with guest ticket is mailed to the member.

Another method of instituting goodwill reported by Carson is his shoppers' check room service inaugurated the first of the year. Trailer was run several weeks in advance, informing patrons that the service was available, in addition an attendant is on hand at all times to wrap parcels into one convenient package. Showman also uses small stickers with copy to the effect that it was a pleasure to offer the service.

Cox Reports from Dexter, Maine, a 4,000 Community

Playing single day dates on "West With the Hardys" and "Tailspin," the former on Saturday and the latter on the following Monday, it was Manager Bob Cox's idea to kill two birds with one stone, so to speak, by incorporating exploitations on both attractions at the Park, Dexter, Me., with one big street stunt.

In exchange for generous plugs for the owner's flying school, Cox promoted the use of a local plane for cost of gas, advertised widely via throwaways in advance that at noon on the Saturday before the opening plane would fly over the town to drop gold certificates and passes to "Tailspin." Banner across page one of the local daily was also promoted, copy reading, "Dexter to Be Bombed," with story following.

As a guard of honor and a safety patrol, Bob selected 25 Boy Scouts who wore imprinted overseas caps as they paraded the main street with banners to the center of town, where the Scouts acted as patrols to regulate traffic during the plane stunt. To announce the events of the day, the manager also promoted a sound truck and microphone over which he plugged both attractions while the crowds gathered. When the flight was over Cox brought the crowd to the microphone, where he interviewed the finders of the certificates and passes, followed by a sidewalk interview in which questions were asked about the Hardy picture with silver dollars given for the best answer. Result, according to Bob, was standout attendance on both days for the two pictures.

Inaugurates Merchant and Auto Show

Another activity reported by Cox was a combination Merchant and Auto Show put on in a vacant three-floor garage, obtained without charge, for the various exhibits which are shown without charge for the purpose of bringing outsiders to town. In cooperation with leading store-keepers and chamber of commerce, heralds and special newspaper edition were circulated widely in the drawing area, Cox gathering all the ads for the newspaper which he put together, in exchange obtaining lots of free space for his attractions. The three days of the show drew 12,000, says Bob, the theatre voted first prize for the most unique exhibit, a miniature front advertising coming attractions and a pretty gal passing out programs.

In addition to the extra business brought in by the exhibition, the Round Tabler built up a lot of goodwill for tieins which he is now able to make with merchants in this conservative downeast community of 4,000 who heretofore were hard to land.

QUIGLEY AWARDS FORTNIGHTER APPOINTMENTS MAINTAIN LEVEL

Number of Winners Measures Up to Top Scores Made in Previous Preliminary Periods; Awards Entries Acclaimed

ROUND TABLERS are doing a splendid job of holding their own, plus a bit more in the Quigley Awards, as the selections are made that determine the Fortnighter Appointments in the second period of the Second Quarter. In all, the entries from all parts of the country continue to maintain the high standard of exploitation established in the 1939 Competitions, in part due to the new policy which stresses the single exploitation idea or promotion and not the entire campaign as heretofore.

On this page, will be found the names of those who scored in the last judging and also set down here are the details of what some of the winners accomplished. Other entries will be run next week.

Again, entrants are requested to keep in mind that those who win in more than one Fortnight Appointment will be given more consideration in the Second Quarter Judging for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations. Entrants are urged to be represented in as many Fortnights as possible.

Gates Ties in Picture Critic For Unique "Serenade" Trailer

An exclusive, arranged with Sid Andorn, local movie critic, who also has a radio program, was stunt put on by Arnold Gates, manager of Loew's Granada, Cleveland, in advance of "Broadway Serenade." Gates used a record of the star serenading the critic, at the end of which the theatreman cut in with "you have just heard Jeanette MacDonald serenading you in behalf of her new picture," etc., etc. Andorn built up gag and mentioned the star, title and playdates.

For his "Huckleberry Finn" date, lobby display, Gates arranged large cutout of Mickey Rooney in fisherman's garb at base of which was large tin wash boiler, containing decks of cards. Copy overhead invited folks to use fishing tackle placed conveniently and take two minutes to fish out five red jacks. To those accomplishing the feat, guest tickets were awarded.

Braunagel Sponsors Third Annual Bridge Tournament in Theatre

Growing more successful every year, the third annual citywide bridge tournament held at the Paramount Theatre, in Provo, Utah, is reported by Manager Jack Braunagel. Entry blanks were run in the cooperating Herald, an entrance fee of 50 cents covering all costs. Rules and other publicity were run 10 days in advance and prizes were promoted from merchants, with the exception of the two main championship trophies which carry theatre name into prominent place in homes of winners.

Much publicity was accorded the event, paper carrying daily stories about matches and results of former day's playing. Matches were carried off in the same way as a golf tourney, with championship and consolation brackets after the first day. All entrants had to play at least twice, and contest itself lasted for three weeks.

Fairbairn Holds Plane Display In Lobby on "Men With Wings"

With a lobby spacious enough to accommodate a display of aircraft, J. I. Fairbairn for his "Men With Wings" date at the Capitol in Cardiff, Wales, promoted equipment from four commands of the Royal Air Force and held a foyer display for two weeks which brought unusual newspaper publicity. Also exhibited were displays of various commodities used in building ships, and on duty daily was C. W. Watkins, pioneer of flying in Wales, who answered all pertinent queries.

Also of interest to patrons were air-mailed greetings to Fairbairn which were displayed in lobby and received from theatremen all over Europe who had played the date and were lavish in their praises. Installed in the foyer was a recruiting office with sergeant in attendance daily and mobile recruiting van toured the outlying districts.

Oddest Proposal Contest Helps Brien Exploit "The Girl Downstairs"

Following the suggestion in the MGM pressbook for an "odd proposal" contest for "The Girl Downstairs," Manager Lige Brien at the Prince, in Ambridge, Pa., secured cooperation of local high school, with students submitting accounts of oddest proposals witnessed in any motion picture. These were run in the school paper, guest tickets going to winners. Also featured in the school paper was a dream contest, entries detailing their favorite dreams.

Harris Plants Ingenious Calendars In Merchants' Windows for Powell

In advance of personal appearance of Eleanor Powell at Loew's State in Cleveland, Milt Harris printed up window cards to which were attached calendar pads of 12 sheets, copy on first reading "12 more days," the second "11 more days," the third "10 more days," etc., etc. Merchants cooperated by tearing off sheets regularly each day to note number of days before opening. On Sunday after opening stores in downtown area all carried large yellow "notice" cards with information that the store was closed to permit employees to see Eleanor Powell.

Corker Ties College Language Heads To One-Day Date on "Mayerling"

The cooperation of the Department of Romance Languages of the University of Georgia was secured by L. & J. City Manager Moon Corker for the one day date of "Mayerling" at the Georgia Theatre, in Athens, Ga. Department head wrote letters to each faculty member, teachers and principals of the 30 high schools within a 75 mile radius made announcements in schools and class rooms. Mimeographed copies giving brief summary of the picture accompanied each letter. All theatre ads, display frames and marquee copy read "This picture sponsored by the Languages Department of the University of Georgia." P. E. McCoy, publicityman, aided on the date.

Beautiful Baby Contest Arranged By Wright for "East Side of Heaven"

Through a tieup effected with art photo department of the local Kresge's, a beautiful baby contest for "East Side of Heaven" at the Paramount in Syracuse was promoted by Erle Wright. Voting coupons were paid for and distributed by the store, giving one complete side to picture and theatre and other to contest. Store also gave 10 prizes for every 50 entrants and theatre presented a gold loving cup as a grand prize, which was inscribed by Sandy, the baby in the picture. Cup was on display in store window during contest. Newspaper contest in Syracuse Journal featured a special puzzle of Bing and Baby Sandy with prizes to those submitting correct solution of how to get Bing home with the baby without being captured.

Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce Welcomes Rooney as Honorary Member

At a meeting of the Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce, Mickey Rooney was made an honorary member through the efforts of Manager Stan Gross of the Rio Theatre, Appleton, Wis., and as a buildup for his Hardy date. Board sent a letter to Rooney stating that the membership was voted because of his high ideals and their application in his work, his help in the Americanization of American youth and his excellent acting. Newspapers carried story on this, together with three-column photo of giant membership card mailed to the star, which was held aloft by the signees.

"Professor" Burhorn Heads Quiz Night To Stimulate Single-Feature Program

In a double-feature district and with no giveaways, screen or chance games allowed at the Gayety, Chicago, John Burhorn recently, and with signal success, sponsored a Quiz Contest, with himself as the "Professor," with grand prizes given by cooperating jeweler and other prizes, guest tickets to the theatre. The single feature attraction was "Pirates of the Sky."

To encourage questions on the two nights of the Quiz, Burhorn's district paper, the Daily Calumet, ran coupons for readers who had questions to enter, with those selected for the Quiz also earning passes. Publicity ran for seven days ahead and over 150 coupons received. Jeweler paid for trailer and program in addition to giving the big prizes.

Local Air Organizations Tiein For "Wings of the Navy" Date

The main event in the "Wings of the Navy" campaign at the Vitaphone Theatre, Wenatchee, Wash., was a model airplane show put on by Charles Greime and his assistant Pat Tappan, through cooperation of the local Air Service and also the Model Airplane Club. The former paid for all costs and in addition furnished a goodly number of free airplane rides and a free course of flying instructions in exchange for advertising in the foyer. Show was announced week ahead of picture opening, models placed on display in lobby day before with credit cards, a pass was presented to each entrant with grand prizes for winners.

Judging of the models took place afternoon of opening and winners announced from stage opening night, at which time the prizes were presented. Newspapers were generous with stories and art work. Air Service cooperated also by dropping lucky numbered heralds from ship flying over city, free rides going to those catching heralds, numbers on which corresponded with those posted in lobby.

Fulton Sponsors Special Newspaper In Advance of "Little Princess"

Disposed of house-to-house by a licensed distributor company were the 5,000 special four-page full-sized newspapers put out by Bob Fulton, on "Little Princess" at the Paramount, Waterloo, Iowa, the entire cost of printing and distribution covered by outside advertising carried on the back page. Labelled "Paramount Theatre News," the edition was given the same professional treatment as the daily papers and was credited with being the top feature in the campaign.

As a second entry, Fulton offers a Blues Singer contest on behalf of "Saint Louis Blues," put over with the cooperation of the leading daily. Local girl singers were invited to participate for the cash prizes at a special midnight show, the preliminary auditions held on a broadcast over station WMT.

Interviews with Old-Time Operators Features Lampe Advance for "Bell"

Numerous newspaper publicity breaks were secured by Gus Lampe for the opening of "Alexander Graham Bell" at RKO Schine's Keith Theatre in Syracuse, topped by shots of three local telephone operators shown comparing telephone instruments of the past and present. Interview with one of the city's first telephone operators during the period between 1880 and 1887 was also run, as was story and photo of former commissioner of public safety and a pioneer leader in the Syracuse telephone field.

Syracuse Journal's fleet of trucks were appropriately bannered with cast, playdates, etc. All display windows of the telephone company carried tiein cards, as did Postal Telegraph, Western Union and bus terminals. Picture was screened for the executives of the telephone company, who helped publicize the date to all employees.

Eleanor Powell Acts as Judge In "Beauty With Brains" Search

Before taking off for Paris as guest of MGM, Ray Bell planted another page-one tiein, this time for the personal appearance date of Eleanor Powell at Loew's Capitol, in Washington. Contest came about as a result of recent senatorial investigation wherein it was testified that gorgeous gals were being given all the breaks in the Civil Service. Ray thunk up a search for "beauty with brains" and sold the idea to the Washington Post for a long run. Miss Powell bowed in by accepting appointment as one of the judges, the winners to be selected during her local stay.

Chamber of Commerce Sponsors Special Fargo Theatre Week

Using as a jumping-off point the first run of "Spirit of Culver," together with the fact that a lad from a neighboring town appeared in the production, a "Fargo Theatre Week" was declared under the auspices of the local Chamber of Commerce and through the efforts of Manager Stuart Tomber of the Fargo in Sycamore, Ill. Highlight of the campaign was special edition of the local Tribune secured for the week, with numerous stories, banners, merchants' ads, etc. In appreciation of the additional advertising secured by Tomber, the paper made up a larger than usual edition and distributed it to every residence in Sycamore in addition to those on subscription list and its rural route boxholders.

Other promotions for the event included the issuance of a bulletin by the Chamber of Commerce authorizing the affair, the pasting of "Fargo Theatre Week" stickers on all store windows, counter cards in all stores, the insertion of pictures and stories in newspapers of the area and the announcement of the occasion and the adoption by the membership of all local organizations.

Redmond Promotes Railroad Day For Date on "Union Pacific"

For the first time in local theatre history, Jimmie Redmond reports a complete newspaper tiein for a picture, with both papers in Fairbury, Nebr., going for extensive promotions on "Union Pacific" at the Bonham. Heretofore, writes Jim, he was only able to crack one sheet at one time. Both dailies ran special co-op spreads, more than the usual publicity plus feature stories on the coming of the railroad in the early days, all of which was hooked up to a special Railroad Day proclaimed by the Mayor.

Continuing his publicity drive in the drawing area, Redmond also arranged extra publicity and advertising in 11 outside weekly papers, his entire advance campaign running two straight weeks to be registered among the most effective put on by this Round Tabler.

Fitzpatrick Invites High School Leaders To Be Guests of Andy Hardy at Opening

Basing his exploitation on the pride displayed by Mickey Rooney in winning his letter at basketball, in the Hardy series, Ed Fitzpatrick tied in the high schools of Waterbury, Conn., on "The Hardys Ride High" at Loew's Poli, by inviting all lettermen to be his guests at the opening. The result was a first-time break in the weekly paper of the leading school which also broke the ice for possible future tieups.

To build up the promotion, Fitz located a local boy bearing a strong resemblance to Rooney, dressed him in tuxedo and high hat, had him drive a collegiate jallopy suitably inscribed in the company of a pretty usherette. The entire campaign was then tied in with a street parade at noon of opening day led by the state's crack fife and drum corps, followed by the invited lettermen and escorted by police detail.

Suggestions for Training the Theatre Service Staff

Highlights of Manual Compiled As Instruction for Ushers and Other Personnel

by RUDOLPH A. KUEHN
District Manager, Warner Jersey Theatres

There have been so many requests to this department and to Round Tabler Rudy Kuehn for information on and copies of his service manual commented upon editorially in the issue of April 15, that it has been decided to reproduce in slightly abridged form, the highlights of this informative booklet, the initial article of which is set down on this page.

The material here has exclusively to do with the usher forces, of which there will be more in the next article. Conduct of other personnel, first and similar helpful instructions will also be treated.

An usher at all times on the floor should be neat and well-groomed. He should be at least five feet ten inches tall if possible. Clean shaven, clean face and hands, fingernails trimmed and clean, hair combed neatly, shoes shined and clothes pressed and neat. If an applicant is untidy when applying for a job, it is a fair indication that he is naturally untidy and careless of his appearance.

Poise is another important requisite in picking ushers. A boy may qualify in every other detail, but he may not be able to walk correctly. He may be one of those ungainly, loose-limbed, gangling boys who are awkward and will make an awkward appearance. Each boy must have the ability to walk, stand and be snappy in his posture. One boy out of line in poise will practically ruin a service staff in its appearance.

Says Service Most Important

In the preliminary training period, the boys should be brought together for a talk on the why and wherefore of service in a theatre. Make them realize that service is fully as important as the quality of the show. A theatre without service would be like a movie without sound. A patron should be treated with the utmost courtesy and deference. If he is treated right before he is seated, he will enjoy the show much more. And he will come back again and again despite the quality of the show if he knows that he is being shown every attention possible. Each new boy must be made to feel that service is the most important thing in a theatre as far as he is concerned.

A space should be found to put the training school through a drilling period. Each boy should know how to march, keep in step and do the regulation right face, halt, left and about face commands. That is the basic step in teaching them discipline, which, although not of military intensity, is an important factor in insuring a good staff. They are taught to stand correctly. Head back, chest out and stomach in. They must be taught to walk snappily with a military carriage. A sloppy carriage tends to sloppy habits while on the floor.

How to Address Patrons

The usher should know how to stand at attention on post, with arms in back of him, hands folded at the base of his spine. Here his posture may be relaxed to insure comfort; but not relaxed enough to look indifferent. Although a prosaic fact, the slogan, "Service with a smile," is perfect for any theatre.

Before addressing a superior, the usher must know that he is to stand at attention a foot or two from the person he wishes to address. When recognized, he says, "I beg your pardon, sir," then he states his business. He uses this phrase whenever he addresses his chiefs, any members of the management, or people on business in the theatre to see the management.

When he addresses a patron, he uses the same phrase. He must be taught never to touch a patron when addressing one to gain his attention. A stumble of a patron at the time the usher is addressing and touching him might lead to a lawsuit. Only if asked to assist should an usher ever touch any patron, the exception being with old and feeble people who obviously need assistance. When one usher addresses another usher he calls him by his last name prefixed with "Mr." It is always Mr. Jones or Mr. Smith, and never a first name or a last name alone.

Learn Theatre Layout

Another point in training the usher is the physical layout of the theatre. Show him where each exit is and the number of the exit so that he can remember it when he goes over the theatre again. He must know the locations of all fire extinguishers and the places of the fire hose stations. Show him the porters' room, projection booth, engineers' and artists' room, etc. He must know where everything in the house is located. The numbers of the aisles in the orchestra, loge and balcony are of prime importance.

Each theatre probably has its own system of signals for the service staff. The following is that used in the Stanley Theatre. Signals mostly used among ushers is to indicate or ask for a superior. If the chief of service is wanted, the right index finger is placed across the left arm. Three fingers for the treasurer and four for the assistant.

Examples of Checking Signals

Another phase of checking is the communication of numbers by signalling to indicate the number of people or empty seats in a given section of the house. The signal for a hundred is to move one finger in a circular motion diagonally across the body and across the chest. Two fingers for two hundred, etc. For the number ten, one finfier is moved downward in front of the chest. Two fingers for twenty, etc. For signalling numbers from one to ten the fingers are moved upward across the chest. Example: Two hundred sixty-five. Two fingers in a circular motion across the chest; then five fingers moved downward, followed by one finger of the same hand; then five fingers upward across the chest.

The usher must know how many seats are in the entire house. Then he must know the breakdown of how many seats in the orchestra, balcony and loge. The important thing about this is that the usher should know at all times how many available seats are in his sections.

Escorting Patrons to Seats

Escorting patrons to their seats has a definite significance and must be done with the utmost courtesy and satisfaction to the patron. This is an important factor in service. The flashlight should be held in either hand, but in the back of the usher and pointing downward in order to give good light to the patron, but where it will not glare in the eyes of seated patrons. The usher should be about three or four feet in advance and should stand facing the patron when the proper seat is found. The seat should not be pointed out with the flashlight.

As the usher meets the patron in the aisle (when the house is not crowded) it is a good point in service and convenience to ask the patron, "How far, please?" and "How many, please?" First of all, it helps the usher and gives the patron something personal to think about. He feels that the theatre is doing all it can for him.

Filling Single Seats

Selling seats is one of the most important factors in service where the conditions are or near standing room. The usher must learn that he must take patrons into his confidence, so to speak, and convince them that where there is standing room only, he will do the best possible for them. Phrases such as, "I have a good pair of seats, right down this aisle," and "There are two good seats near the front, but in a good place," and etc., and the things which please the patron.

In a crowded house where most people come in couples, there is usually an overabundance of single seats which are wasting money for the theatre. These must be filled to make more room for additional patrons waiting. Now there is a definite technique for selling single seats. Naturally, a young couple, or even most older people, do not like to be separated. Here is the time when the usher must use persuasion, tact and diplomacy to get couples to take single seats. He can say, "I have two single seats, close together and in the center where you can see each other and join later." There are countless ways in which to word phrases to a patron which will satisfy him. The main idea is to get the singles sold.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

started his work at the Maryland Theatre in Omaha, Nebraska, where he is now manager, in 1935. His first job at the house was to act as janitor. The following year brought him into the doormen's category and the next promotion saw him as assistant manager, as well as cashier. Climbing steadily, he finally got the managership of the theatre and we expect to hear frequently from him about his activities.

started in as an usher at the Colonial Theatre, Detroit, Mich., in 1923 and the next year procured the job as house manager at the Liberty, in the same sector. From there he went to the Gratiot as manager, soon changing to the Hancock. In 1930 the Fine Arts house claimed his managerial duties and the next promotion brought him to manage the Majestic and Colonial Theatres. He became the assistant general manager in 1934 of these Midwest Theatres and in 1937 secured the post of general manager.

is the skipper at the Arcade Theatre, Springfield, Massachusetts, one of the houses of Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc. In 1932, at the outset of his moving picture career, he was an usher at the Metropolitan and Washington Street Theatres in Boston, Mass. Two years later, moving to the Scollay Square house, George was appointed chief usher and remained there for a couple of years, after which period he was promoted to act as the assistant manager at the Paramount in Springfield. The following year George was made house manager of this theatre and in 1938 he came over to his present spot.

CURTIS BLUCHER BELL

Please let us hear from you and at not too infrequent intervals, Blucher, for much of what you are doing would undoubtedly be of interest to the rest of the readers.

WALTER E. COHEN
started his theatrical career as an usher and display artist at the Broadway Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland. He also wrote copy and announced the program on Polish Radio Hour, discoursing in English. Seeking to resume his art career, Walt left his organization but the very next day found him back at his post. The next move was to the Apollo Theatre, acting as assistant manager, but he continued as paint-slinger, extending his efforts to other theatres of Rome's Associated circuit. A managerial post at the Lenox was the next spot, and from there he transferred to the Leader, in the same capacity, where we now find him. Motion Picture Herald appreciates the nice things you say about it and Managers' Round Table is delighted to receive your many contributions. Keep 'em coming, Walt.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as offically given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"AFTER the EVENT"

THIS being what is called free America, anybody, even an editorial writer, is supposed to be entitled to an opinion, whether he is competent to have one or not, about anything. For painful instance, one finds the Register of Des Moines remarking, thus:

"People interested in preserving the maximum of freedom of expression generally favour dealing with immorality, libel, incitement to riot and other such dangers on the screen in the same way they are dealt with on the printed page by the regular courts after the event, rather than by censorship in advance."

There ensues a discussion of what is called "the Hays office . . . own central censorship" which is discussed as a device for keeping out of trouble, and leading to the declaration: "So we have the curious paradox of the movie industry on one hand decrying existing local censorships and on the other yearning for the cheap insurance of an effective centralized censorship."

May we submit that there is no more paradox concerned in the device of the Production Code and its Administration than there is in having a managing editor in the office of the Des Moines Register. Why not let the police reporter, the City Hall Reporter, the State Capital Staff and the Washington correspondent, the correspondents in Council Bluffs, in Waterloo and Dubuque, especially Dubuque, run "hog wild" and pour into the paper whatever strikes their fancy, and let the courts decide, "after the event." Let the Register try that!

THERE'S a crisp and cheery note of encouragement in last week's pronouncement from Mr. Walter E. Green of National Theatre Supply that "The Cure is Here." It is his opinion that the prescription in Nicholas M. Schenck's classic remark, "There is nothing wrong with the business that good pictures can't cure," has been filled. And that reminds one of the observations of Mr. Spyros Skouras at the Quigley Award luncheon that today's good pictures are better than the selling of them and that if there are shortcomings at the box office "it is our fault, not the public's."

SOMETIMES we are in danger of being "killed with kindness." In the Pittsburgh Press, Florence Fisher Parry, perennial defender, radiantly remarks: "Have you noticed what's happening to our movies? They're becoming an art. Don't ask me how. . . . The movies are giving us another concept of LOVE. The Boy-Meets-Girl blueprint is no longer enough. . . . Love is no longer just a pretty theme song. It is a symphony with full orchestra."

ONE-MAN PRODUCTS

"HOLLYWOOD writers should not be bullied journeymen," says Mr. Gene Towne, "and the sooner producers concede them freer rein in the making of pictures the better for the industry," reports Motion Picture Daily.

In Mr. Towne's case, now that he is becoming an RKO producer, he seems to have that freer rein.

The basic fact is that a motion picture has to be fundamentally a one-man job. If it is a writer's picture then it is the writer's job—but it is still true that some picture making may require of the writer that he be as much an incidental journeyman as a piccolo player or a scene painter. It depends on the picture and who is making it.

CUPS AND CLASSES

ENTERTAINMENT is to be had in regarding the sudden and simultaneous concerns of governments over certain matters of drinks. New York State, U. S. A., considers a measure to require a requirement that liquor glasses shall hold $1\frac{1}{2}$ ounces at least. That, one must presume, comes under the "pursuit of happiness" clause.

Italy is thumbs down on coffee, for trade reasons, and wants the faithful to drink Italian wine. Consider Chianti for breakfast! And now comes Russia opposing vodka, arguing for beer and Russian champagne—the champagne, of all things, as "a cultural drink." This comes the same week that Mr. Stalin's papers have been telling the people they must look up to and approve their educated classes. Whither, may we inquire, is the proletariat drifting?

Now that Russia is mentioned, has anyone heard what ever became of Comrade Boris Shumiatsky, the vanishing one-time head of the Soviet cinema?

FROM camera to spectacles about all of the business in our modern and technical world has to pass through lenses. Located at the center of the optical industry of America, the University of Rochester has been building up an Institute of Optics for training and research, with important cooperations from the Bausch & Lomb Optical company, so well known to and long established in the service of the motion picture. Optical engineering is a newer and uncrowded field.

ELECTRONS and FAITH

THE dramatically tenuous hold of brave young Mr. Fred Snite upon his stricken life, three years in an "iron lung," now on his pilgrimage to Lourdes and its miracle shrine, makes him a personalized and poignant symbol of the life of all of us, and our civilization.

He is buoyed by faith and hope, and kept alive by the scientific miracle of the electronic flow through a mechanism of motors and wires. Let the electrons fail ever so briefly and his life is done. He lives by the mercy of science, of the unending flow of power through wires.

The living is made worth the effort by concerns of the spirit, superficially seeming remote and intangible, forces of faith that record on no galvanometer.

Even our own motion picture industry is like that, too. It lives by the concrete and specific and what we call "factual," including, too, utter dependence on wires and electrons, flowing unendingly, without interruption.

But the essence of what the motion picture is, and what it is to be sustained by, as a functional part of the social scheme is to be governed in its survival by matters of spirit and faith and the service of them.

Practices and Allied

A new trade practice program, revised after changes were recommended by exhibitor organizations and leaders, was completed on Wednesday, including an arbitration system, on the eve of an open forum in New York, sponsored by Allied of New York, closing a three-day session of independent exhibitors. The self-regulation program is expected to be a center of interest also at the national Allied convention in Minneapolis June 13th to 15th.

Allied States Association, which was to have considered a proposal for a nationwide buying and booking combine at the forthcoming Minneapolis gathering, has determined to hold in abeyance its plan while observing and cooperating in the workings of a somewhat similar arrangement which has its operating center in Oklahoma City, and is to take in also Arkansas, Kansas and the Texas Panhandle.

The stories are on page 16.

Anti-Trust Actions

Washington expects a half dozen new anti-trust suits against the motion picture industry to be filed by the Department of Justice in as many local jurisdictions after July 1st, when increased appropriations for the Department's anti-trust division will become available.

This and other developments in the blossoming field of trust actions are treated in detail in the article starting on page 20.

Reciprocity

The heads of two major distributors, Sidney Kent for 20th Century-Fox and Murray Silverstone for United Artists this week reported independently the adoption of similar policies of reciprocity to be followed by their companies in their relations with foreign markets.

Details are on page 51.

Manchukuo

Arthur G. Doyle, managing director for 20th Century-Fox in Japan, in New York this week for home office conferences, reported that a three man committee representing American distributor offices in Tokyo is investigating the possibility of resuming shipment of American films to Manchukuo.

His report on the activity is on page 50.

Copyright Changes

Changes in the Copyright Act of 1909 as proposed by the representatives of film, music publishing and other fields, were to be completed this week for presentation to Congress next week.

Radio Requirement

Immediately following predictions by David Sarnoff, president of RCA, that censorship inevitably would follow government regulation of radio programs and alarms from the National Council on Freedom from Censorship and the Civil Liberties Union, the Federal Communications on Tuesday issued an order requiring that licensees of international broadcasting stations "shall render only . . . service which will reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international goodwill, understanding and cooperation."

The advent of censorship is reported on page 42.

60 Features

A program of 60 features for the 1939-40 season will be announced by RKO Radio at its convention opening June 19th at the Westchester Country Club, New York. Paramount, the only other company which has not made its product announcement for the new season, will hold its annual convention in Hollywod starting June 7th.

The story on page 28 reports these convention plans and details of three regional meetings held this week.

Copyright "Intangible"

Holding that films purchased outside Louisiana and shown in public theatres are presented under a restricted copyright and not leased as personal tangible property, District Judge Charles Holcombe at Baton Rouge, La., this week handed down a decision in favor of the Saenger Realty Corporation, New Orleans, and 10 other leading exhibitors of Louisiana against the state collector of revenue. Exhibitors throughout the state had been awaiting the decision in a bitterly fought case.

The suit was a test case, petitioning return of the 1 per cent sale tax levied on the use of "tangible personal property" imported from outside the state. The exhibitors contended that a movie copyright was a federal instrumentality on which distributors charged exhibitors for a displaying privilege, drawing a distinction between "the cheap celluloid film itself and the genius and acting talent it portrayed."

The collector of revenue had contended that permission to use a copyright merely released the exhibitors from infringement liability, the exhibitors "really renting or leasing the film from a distributor, the fee paid thereon being subject to the sales tax."

Fox Objections

Objections to the approval of the final accounting of Milton C. Weisman, as receiver of Fox Theatres Corporation, in which Mr. Weisman was accused of managing the company in a "negligent, improvident and careless manner," were filed Wednesday with John C. Knox, federal judge, in New York, by Gustavus A. Rogers, chairman of the Fox Class A stockholders' protective committee, and the Trust Company of Georgia.

Mr. Weisman, as receiver, and William E. Atkinson, his predecessor, have filed petitions with Judge Knox requesting that the final accounting be approved and that Mr. Weisman be discharged.

On January 30th a plan of liquidation for the company was approved by Martin T. Manton, former circuit judge, and Mr. Weisman and Kenneth E. Steinrich were designated as trustees.

Royal Visit

Apprehension that strict Scotland Yard supervision and stiff court etiquette would prevent the securing of good newsreel footage on the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth has been proven unfounded according to Merle Johnson of Paramount News who returned to New York this week after supervising a crew of 15 newsreel men filming the royal visit.

He tells his experiences on page 40.

News Men Strike

There have been no camera men from any of the five newsreel companies (Paramount, News of the Day, Pathe, Fox Movietone, Universal), or from the March of Time at the New York World's Fair since last Saturday. This is by order of Charles Downs, business manager of the International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industry, Local 644, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, because of a strike by Local 644's still cameramen.

The walkout was called on charges of refusal of the Fair management to hire union still photographers when the staff was augmented recently.

Newreels and Diver

Newsreels and radio networks dispatched camera crews and special effects men from New York by plane Tuesday to cover the rescue efforts for the crew of the U. S. submarine Squalis, sunk off the coast of New Hampshire. Planes were to bring back negatives for inclusion in the regular Thursday issue of the newsreels.

A new diving bell was sent down to the submerged submarine Wednesday morning.

Asks Release

Pandro S. Berman, RKO vice-president in charge of production, whose contract expires formally March 1, 1940, has petitioned George J. Schaefer, president, and the RKO board of directors for a release from his agreement as of October 1, 1939, at which time he expects to have completed product now in preparation.

Mr. Berman's desire to be responsible only for a small number of productions annually has been voiced frequently. For this reason it is believed in Hollywood that at the conclusion of his vacation he may organize his own producing company to make several films a year for release through one of the large companies.

A successor to Mr. Berman at RKO has not been mentioned.

Increasing Burden

State legislatures, nearing adjournment, this week turned last minute attention to new taxation measures for the motion picture industry. Several were under consideration and those already passed included a New York law allowing cities to levy a tax of one cent on admissions up to 50 cents with a graduated scale above that figure, and a franchise tax of one cent per square foot per year on outdoor advertising signs in excess of three feet in area.

Reports from the capitols are on page 52.

New Organization

The United Theatre Owners of Illinois was formed in Chicago this week with the announced purpose of pooling exhibitor strength primarily to fight adverse legislation. At a closed meeting held Tuesday Edward Zorn of Pontiac, Mich., was named chairman. Mr. Zorn appointed Jules Rubens of Great States circuit, Fred Anderson of the Anderson circuit, G. A. Alger of the Alger circuit and H. B. Bailey of Bailey Enterprises to meet May 31 at Springfield to complete the organization. Principal speakers at the meeting were Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Mr. Rubens and Morris Leonard of Balaban and Katz.

The Allied unit in Illinois has been reported planning a campaign for downstate members.

Association Active

Regional exhibitor associations were busy this week with discussions bearing vitally on such problems as pooling, the Neely bill, the proposed trade practice code, taxes and rentals. Study and discussion of a buying and booking combination as a means of protection against "circuit aggressions" led the program of the Kansas and Missouri Theatres Association, meeting in convention in Kansas City Thursday.

Programs and convention dates are reported on page 48.

That "One Big Union"

Pointing to potential amalgamation of 50,000 actors and actresses of stage, screen and radio, into "one big union," the several performer unions and guilds continued meetings in New York this week on the "first eliminative processes." The various memberships "want it badly," according to a statement issued Wednesday evening by the organizing committee.

The purposes desired are economy, greater efficiency and better protection for the membership, which, it is felt, could be achieved through an amalgamation doing away with the dual memberships which now prevail. Chairman of the committee is Mrs. Florence Marsten, eastern executive head of the Screen Actors' Guild; with executives and one delegate of each of the branches of the Associated Actors and Artists of America represented. Other Guilds represented include the American Guild of Musical Artists, Actors' Equity, the American Federation of Radio Artists, Chorus Equity and the American Federation of Actors.

The plan, when completed, will be submitted to the various memberships for ratification.

To the Labor Board

The motion picture division of Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers' union on Wednesday filed 13 petitions with the New York State Labor Relations Board for designation as collective bargaining agent for 150 independent theatres in the metropolitan area. In addition a strike was declared at the City Hall, Manhattan, and a complaint was lodged with the board over labor practices called unfair. The board ordered hearings.

Other labor developments, including the battle for control of the studio unions in Hollywood, which entered the first decisive court test this week in an injunction suit filed by deposed officers of the technicians local against the IATSE, are to be found in a story on page 38.

Building Up

A gain over the corresponding month last year in the valuation of theatre building contracts was registered in April, the first month in 1939 to show an increase, according to the Dodge Reports, daily news division of the F. W. Dodge Corporation. The April valuation was $2,172,000, in a survey including the 37 states east of the Rockies.

A total of 72 building and alteration projects were recorded in the month. Through the first four months of 1939 there have been a total of 228 theatre projects in the area, with a valuation of $5,950,000. The same period of 1938 showed a total of 267 projects, with a valuation of $7,691,000.

New York Allied Meets In First Convention

WITH the announced purpose of seeking "better understanding between distributors and exhibitors" and with a program featuring an open forum at which distribution executives who have been active in the formulation of the trade practice code were speakers, the New York unit of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors held its first convention and trade show at the Astor Hotel this week. The meeting, delegates to which are pictured on this page, opened on Tuesday and continued through Thursday. Story on page 20.

MAJORS COMPLETE TRADE PROGRAM ON EVE OF EXHIBITORS' OPEN FORUM

Fourth Revision, Containing Arbitration Plan, Is Finished as Independent Exhibitors Assemble for Open Forum

At precisely 5:10 on Wednesday afternoon, in the Nimrod Room of the Hotel Astor, at Times Square, New York, the major distributors completed the fourth, and, they hope, the final revision of their trade practice program for self-regulation of distribution and exhibition, including a plan and procedure for adjudicating differences—more popularly known as an "arbitration system."

The program came after nine months of actual formulation, three years of negotiation and some 10 years of sporadically attempted action.

It arrived, too, on the 11th hour of the first of two independent exhibitor "open forums" on trade problems, the first by Allied of New York, on Thursday (see adjoining columns); the second, by national Allied, in Minneapolis, June 13th.

At the Same Time

The major distributors were finishing their work in the Hotel Astor even as the New York independent exhibitors were assembling in the same hotel, eight floors below, in the Grand Ballroom, for their "open discussion" of the same subject.

The majors' representatives, numbering 17 sales, corporate and legal executives, had been "dissecting" the document, to mould a finished form, since early Monday morning. In the adjoining hotel suite at the finish was the Physicians' Wives' League, of 40, at Spring Luncheon.

A "well-defined" system of arbitration had been sought for the program since March 30th, when the third "revised" form was presented to exhibitors.

There were some on Wednesday who preferred to believe that the haste of the majors' committee this week to complete the draft was a desire to have the final draft ready for the independents' New York "open forum" on Thursday. Others, more closely connected with the actual formulation, said the concentration was motivated only by a desire to be "done and gone" with a problem that has been troublesome for nearly a year.

Few Other Changes

Other than detailing a system of arbitration, "the all-important part," the "fourth and final" form differs little from the three preceding it. Language has been clarified and shortened, with but a few clauses removed or added on the 16 subjects treated.

On the matter of arbitration, the majors still must get the approval of exhibitors as to acceptability, and of the United States Government as to legality. Arbitration was once conducted in this business by the majors, and was abandoned after Judge Thomas J. Thacher, in the Federal Courts in 1929, declared it illegal, on the grounds that it was compulsory under the license agreements as provided.

Allied To Test Buying Combine

The national buying-and-booking combine of independent exhibitors as proposed from within the ranks of Allied States Association, will not be presented to Allied's national convention in Minneapolis, June 13th–15th, but, instead, will be held in abeyance pending a test of a statewide combine by Allied in Oklahoma.

The original proposal was to line up 2,500 theatres, as disclosed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on May 13th.

Now the project is being steered into the Southwest alone as a test, with national Allied putting its support behind it. If successful, the test will result in adoption by Allied nationally.

The newly formed Oklahoma Allied had in mind a buying-and-booking combination at its inception. This was abandoned two weeks ago, but was revived this week on the insistence of the membership of 52, which threatened withdrawal unless the plan was revived.

Revival of the plan is expected to bring in 200 theatres, in Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas and the Texas Panhandle, according to Orville Von Gulker, Okeene (Okla.) exhibitor, who is chairman of the organizing board. C. E. Norcross is secretary, and A. A. Moulder, John Gray, A. B. Momand and Mrs. Juanita Berry are members. Mr. Momand has pending a $4,500,000 anti-trust suit against the majors. (See page 22.)

Kuykendall Turns Down Steffes

Al Steffes' Minneapolis national Allied convention will not have Edward L. Kuykendall, of the rival MPTOA, as a guest at its "open forums". Witness this letter to Mr. Steffes:

"Because Allied and MPTOA have such widely different approaches to national problems of this industry, and because I feel that the placing of myself and members of my organization on your [convention] committee was in jest, and that we would not feel like injecting our viewpoints into your convention, feeling also that whatever came out of the 'open discussions', your board of directors would still speak for the convention, as in the past, I can see no benefits to be derived for your or my organization by my attendance.

"I also have meetings scheduled with state MPTOA units at this time.

"May you have a well attended constructive convention.

"Kind personal regards.

"(Signed) ED KUYKENDALL."

United Artists announced Tuesday that L. J. Schlaifer, its vice-president and western sales manager, would attend national Allied's "open forum" in Minneapolis. Two dozen major executives have accepted Al Steffes' invitation.

New York Allied Unit, in First Convention, Indorses National Policies Outlined by Cole; Hears Distributors

Allied Theatres, of New York, one year old, called independent theatre owners of the eastern states to the Hotel Astor in Times Square this week, to discuss, in regular convention and committee meeting, on Tuesday and Wednesday, independent exhibitor problems of the day, and to bring into "open forum," on Thursday, a discussion by independents and majors of the new trade practice program, Allied having invited sales managers of the distributors.

Originally, the New York meeting was to embrace all of Allied's eastern states, in a regional convention, but, because of the forthcoming national Allied convention in Minneapolis, June 13th, Frank Lydon, eastern regional vice-president, cancelled the regional directors' meeting until after the Minneapolis convention. However, some individual members of Allied in the eastern states, attended.

National Policies Indorsed

Indorsement of national Allied policies—with reservations—by Max Cohen and by the resolutions committee of Allied of New York came early Wednesday afternoon, as the first real business session got under way.

Colonel H. A. Cole, president of national Allied, was the principal Allied speaker of the day, outlining the national organization's reasons for supporting litigation and legislation rather than self-regulation as a means of curing the industry's "evils," socalled.

Colonel Cole's stand was indorsed by most Allied members present, but Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, another local independent owners' organization, took issue, asserting that "the program of legislation leads to government control."

Abram F. Myers, national Allied's general counsel, did not appear Wednesday, as scheduled, but, in a pre-convention message, concluded, "Men of goodwill can surmount all obstacles that stand in the way of an amicable adjustment of industry problems," adding, "A realistic approach, with the cards on the table, will dispel suspicion and distrust; the issues need to be discussed in the open without fear or favor—or personal abuse."

A plan was proposed by Arthur Pelterson, of the insurance brokerage firm of Mitchell May, New York, for group buying on liability insurance to combat new high rates, Mr. Pelterson suggesting a cooperative project of both circuit and independent owners to fight rises of as much as 40 per cent.

"World's Fair Exhibit"

A highlight of the convention "show" was the "World's Fair Exhibit" put on in the Astor ballroom by 30 producer, distributor and equipment companies.

Mr. Cohen from the dais denied any "friction" existed between the New York Allied and the national organization.

Mr. Cohen said that in favoring the acceptance of the trade code, the New York Allied had "always felt it should take what it could get."

Colonel Cole praised the legislative tactics of the local unit, and said it had handled well the trade difficulties of its members.

GOVERNMENT REGULATION DEBATED

"I do not think that the growth and power which has been obtained so quickly is symptomatic of early deterioration," he said, and predicted that the New York unit would become one of the national organization's most powerful supporters.

Colonel Cole then explained at length his reasons for believing in "legislation rather than self regulation" by going into his own career.

Favors Regulation

Colonel Cole concluded his remarks with a disclaimer of "radicalism."

"I do not want to tear down business in this industry of which I am a part, and in which my money is invested," he said. "However, I believe it would be a good thing, and a necessary thing, that this industry have strict government regulation.

"I do feel that privileges so long enjoyed in this industry have been regarded as rights.

"The time will come, and I stand or sink on it, when a clear definition of the limits in which operations can be carried on in the industry, will be made—and when we know this definition, then the time will come when real negotiations will succeed.

"I hope to see the day," he continued, "when you all will think of what is best for your industry as well as what is best for you. No one class can progress, when the rest do not. I hope you will be big enough to negotiate with the industry in view, and not just with your little problems. It's going to take big men, but there will be big men."

Mr. Cole offered to go to the government and publicly proclaim the error of his policy, if it could be proved "destructive."

Depending on U. S. Suits

In a pre-convention statement, Colonel Cole said that Allied States had dropped its campaign to obtain "divorcement" by legislation, and that it would pin its hopes on the Government's anti-trust suit to achieve this reform.

"To sponsor divorcement bills in 48 different states requires a lot of effort and money," said Colonel Cole, who described the Government's anti-trust suit in Oklahoma City as a "complement" of the major action pending in New York.

"The Oklahoma suit will determine the 'right to buy' for which Allied has contended and which the Department of Justice now recognizes," he said. "The New York suit will determine other issues. But the distributors can stop the Government's campaign by making adequate concessions."

Brandt Hits Neely Bill

Harry Brandt was introduced by Mr. Cohen as one who, "too, is seeking the middle road of progress."

Mr. Brandt thought that "only small" problems should exist between exhibitors themselves; that if they would "sit down" they would work out a common policy.

The salient question was legislation versus self regulation, Mr. Brandt said.

"I'm for legislation if what we want by self-regulation can't be worked out," Mr. Brandt said, and added that he was "tired" of traveling to Albany and Washington to watch legislative developments.

"I'd be interested in legislation if I thought that through legislation I could run my own house, and that the cost would be at least that of today.

"But in my opinion, the Neely bill would have cost us just as much as it would have cost any national distributor. We would be out of business."

ZOO ANIMALS UNDER QUOTA

"Animal Moments", a one-reel production, is one of a series which Widgey R. Newman is making for release, under the quota shorts schedule, by Twentieth Century-Fox.

The picture deals with the everyday life of the animals at the London Zoo.

Mr. Brandt then referred to Senator Neely's sponsorship of a national daylight saving enactment bill, as indication that the Senator, who has been "presumed" by the national Allied organization, which backed the bill, to be a friend of the exhibitors—is actually an enemy.

Mr. Brandt praised the trade program as "far from" what exhibitors "are looking for" but "something"; and saw hope in the arbitration clauses.

"Honest people aren't afraid of arbitration," he said.

Mr. Brandt continued: "Contrary to everything Colonel Cole has said, the program of legislation leads to a government body for the motion picture industry."

Mr. Brandt praised the cooperation of New York Allied with the ITOA, in fighting New York legislative attacks. He mentioned, and outlined the Crews' "two men in a booth" bill, which was defeated, and declared that the defeat was "what comes of organization."

Development of a national "virile" organization was Mr. Brandt's final advice to the assembly.

"Send your delegates to Minneapolis to get the organization in such shape that things can be accomplished," he admonished.

Two Resolutions

Harry G. Kosch, general counsel of the organization, read the two resolutions prepared Wednesday morning by the resolutions committee. Their wording in part, follows:

1. (After referring to national Allied's criticism of the trade practices program as limited and its declaration of continuing its campaign of legislation and litigation), "Therefore, be it resolved that the Allied Theatre Owners of New York hereby goes on record as being completely in accord with the national policies as above stated by the national board of directors, and hereby instructs its officers and its representative on the national board to give the fullest cooperation to the national body in carrying forward its policies."

2. "Now therefore be it resolved that Allied Theatre Owners of New York are in favor of and strongly recommend negotiations with the majors in order to bring about a bill of rights for the independent exhibitor; and it is further resolved that New York Allied communicate with the national Allied organization and express the New York Allied desire for the continuance of negotiations and with the further request that a new negotiating committee be appointed, composed of one representative of each state unit of national Allied; and it is further resolved that this convention go on record maintaining and reiterating its stand that if further negotiations are brought about, said negotiations shall in no way prejudice or affect any of the rights of the independent exhibitors of national Allied or the full and proper prosecution of the Government anti-trust action."

Thomas Di Lorenzo reported for the finance committee, on a new system of dues, immediately adopted without dissent. This calls for annual dues to be paid monthly, of $35 for houses having up to 500 seats; $50 up to 700 seats; $75 up to 1,000 seats; and $100 for houses having over 1,000 seats.

Insurance Rates Rising 66 Per Cent

National rate increases, effective immediately and running as high as 66 per cent, for public liability insurance for film theatres, have been ordered by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, which fixes rates for most insurance companies.

The last previous general rate increase was in 1935.

Two factors are given for the present raise in rates: the number and money value of claims have increased; and the changeover in rating insurance premiums from seat to admission basis, as made in 1935, was badly complicated, according to the underwriters.

Exhibitors will benefit by a reduction in property damage premiums of from two cents per 100 admissions to one cent.

WASHINGTON SEES "UNREMITTING PROSECUTION" OF FILMS BY U.S.

Half-Dozen New Suits Expected To Be Filed After July 1st; Action on Ten Local Anti-Trust Cases

Half-a-dozen new anti-trust suits against the motion picture business are expected by Washington to be filed in as many local jurisdictions in rapid sucession by the Department of Justice after July 1st, when new and increased appropriations for the Department's anti-trust division, approved last week by the House Appropriations Committee, became available.

"Unremitting prosecution" of the Government's campaign against the motion picture and certain other large industries was also foreseen in Washington during the week as United States Attorney General Frank Murphy publicly disclosed his policies on anti-trust matters, an utterance awaited for weeks.

Early possibilities that the Department would not receive House approval of increased appropriations threatened for a time to jeopardize its publicly announced program. Some ten to 12 film suits are said to be contemplated, beside the Government's suits now pending in New York, Chicago and Oklahoma City. The additional suits, similar to the Oklahoma City action, are addressed at localized circuit operations allegedly operating monopolistically, regardless of whether they are independent circuits or affiliated.

(Colonel H. A. Cole, president of Allied States Association, said in New York Monday that Allied will place its hope of divorcing distribution from exhibition in the Government's anti-trust prosecutions, rather than in Allied sponsored legislation, as heretofore. See page 16.)

More immediate action on trust suit matters took place this week in no less than 10 different actions pending against the majors, as instituted both by the Government and independent exhibitors, in Chicago, Oklahoma City, Boston, Wisconsin, Maine, Dallas and New York.

House Cites Reasons for Increasing Appropriation

Reporting the Department of Justice's annual appropriation bill to the House of Representatives, the Appropriations Committee disclosed that, with an additional $519,940, it made available to Assistant U. S. Attorney General Thurman Arnold, a total of $1,300,000 for the fiscal year starting on July 1st. Attorney General Arnold is in charge of the Department's anti-trust division.

The additional money, beyond financing new suits against the film and other industries against which the Department now is campaigning, will provide for the establishment of regional offices in a number of cities, including New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Oklahoma City and Atlanta—all in areas where the Government is having "movie trouble." This "decentralization" will allow for closer and quicker investigations.

Decision to add to the anti-trust division's fund was reached by the committee, which in March refused to give Mr. Arnold an immediate appropriation of $70,000 with which to proceed at once against the film and oil industries, following hearings at which the Assistant-Attorney General detailed his program and ambitions.

NEW RADIOPHOTO SYSTEM UNDERWAY

The commercial inauguration of a new system for the trans-Atlantic transmission of Radiophotos was announced this week by RCA Communications. The new system makes possible the sending of pictures and other graphic material in vastly improved detail with transmission speeds three times greater than heretofore, according to the company.

Much of the testimony, the House Committee explained in its report, was of a confidential nature. On the whole, the report added, "the committee is convinced that some measurable enlargement of the activities of this division is essential, if the anti-trust laws are to be given a reasonable degree of enforcement." This, it was commented, "it is felt should be undertaken, not alone for the protection of the consumer but for the protection of business itself."

"Much of the beneficial result of these activities can doubtless be obtained through the relatively simple means of a consent decree."

While, at hearings before the committee this March in connection with his request for immediate additional funds, Mr. Arnold disclosed that he planned ten additional suits against the film industry, it is now said at the department that probably not more than six or seven suits will be necessary. All will be based on the premises underlying the suits brought against the majors in New York and Oklahoma, it is expected.

Will Not Resort to "Hit Or Miss" Actions

In his first public announcement of his position on monopoly, issued during the week as the House Appropriations Committee gave its approval to an increase in funds for the anti-trust division, Attorney General Frank Murphy disclosed that there would be no fundamental changes in the policy laid down by his predecessor, Homer Cummings, but that he would "continue the existing policy of vigorous enforcement, employing whatever legal means are necessary and appropriate to ensure compliance with the statute."

"The purpose of this statement is not to announce a new policy but, if possible, to make the position of the Government in respect to the anti-trust laws better understood," he added.

In making known his attitude, Mr. Murphy stated that administrative action will be taken by the Justice and Commerce Departments to set up a "bureau of industrial economies," as recommended by President Roosevelt. That bureau would advise with business on contemplated practices, disseminate market information and warn aganst dangers of temporary over-production and excessive inventories.

"It has been frequently suggested that some kind of agency or machinery should be provided which could advise business concerns in advance how far they can go without incurring the risk of criminal penalties," the Attorney General explained.

"The Department will endeavor to make its own views as to what the law requires of business men as clear and as unequivocal as possible. In this way, it hopes to be genuinely helpful to business men seeking by voluntary action to eliminate business practices which are economically harmful to industry, to competitors, and to the general public. The Department has, of course, no authority to grant immunity from the anti-trust laws or to modify or suspend them."

It was made clear by the Attorney General that he opposes both "hit or miss prosecutions, instituted without due consideration of all the facts or consequences involved," and "irresponsible" use of criminal procedure. However, he pointed out, the criminal penalties are valuable, since "it must be recognized that if injunction by civil decree were the sole consequence of violating the laws they would soon become ineffective."

"In many cases, use of the criminal process is necessary and unavoidable because the criminal penalty at present is the only effective deterrent and also because in many cases a grand jury inquiry is the only means by which the Government can obtain satisfactory evidence of widespread law violation," he said.

To large extent, the Department's attitude toward the motion picture industry was summed up in Mr. Murphy's citation of milk and housing—two subjects currently the subject of investigation—as examples of nation-wide industries with practices needing "correction."

"While it is the aim of the Department, so far as its facilities permit, to prosecute every substantial violation of the law that is brought to its attention, it will not be content with sporadic prosecution of individual or isolated cases," he declared. "Where it finds, for example, that the production or distribution of a particular commodity, like milk or housing materials, is being adversely affected by practices which it deems contrary to the anti-trust laws, it will be the policy of the Department to include in a single proceeding all the groups and individuals whose illegal activities affect or contribute to the situation that needs to be remedied.

While the Department hopes for improvement in the anti-trust statutes as a result of the investigations now being made by the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee, it was indicated, there will be no halting of activity pending the completion of that inquiry. Instead, the Attorney General declared, the Department "will continue to enforce the existing laws as they stand on the statute books in accordance with the spirit of this statement."

U. S. Must Name Its Witnesses in New York Case

The slow-moving "key" case instituted by the Government against the majors in New York to force divorcement of distribution from exhibition took a new turn, last Thursday—and one favoring the distributor defendants, when Judge William Bondy, in New York Federal Court, ordered the Department of Justice to name in a bill of particulars witnesses who will testify to alleged coercive selling methods practiced by the distributors.

However, Judge Bondy granted permission to the Department to withhold the names until 30 days before the trial in instances where witnesses have asked the Government to withhold their names and where the witnesses are now doing business with any of the defendants.

The majors, except United Artists and Columbia, on Thursday submitted a joint 25-page petition for an additional bill of particulars, and asked, in the alternative, that all portions of the complaint, referring to details which were not submitted, be stricken out. Additionally, they asked for a further extension of time to answer the complaint until 60 days after the second bill is filed, and for a number of details granted originally to Columbia and UA which other majors failed to request.

The Government filed a 24-page bill of particulars for United Artists, similar in most respects to the details previously furnished to other majors. UA was charged with coercive selling, with exacting excessive rentals from independents, renting to independents on percentage basis only, encouraging overbuying, extending options to theatres affiliated with with major companies and refusing second runs to independents where they compete with affiliated exhibitors. The Government alleged that a distributor is under obligation to prevent overbuying.

As part of the continued examination before trial of United Artists in the New York trust case, the Department of Justice, through Seymour Krieger, special assistant attorney general, this week examined Paul Lazarus, head of the contract department and L. J. Schlaifer, vice-president and western division sales manager.

On Tuesday the questions generally covered relations with exhibitors in the middle and far West. Asked why United Artists preferred Balaban and Katz in Chicago to Jones, Linnick and Schaefer, Mr. Schlaifer said he had offered UA product to the latter for 1938 and 1939 but did not close the deal because he could not get sufficient rentals. Edward C. Raftery, UA attorney, refused to allow further questioning on Chicago business because, he said, UA is defending a conspiracy suit there.

Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Paul, Los Angeles, Seattle, Milwaukee and Omaha territories were also covered by Mr. Krieger in his questioning.

Trust Suit Action Is Threatened in Buffalo

A complaint to the Department of Justice is threatened in Buffalo as a result of the leasing of the Century theatre by its owners away from the Shea Amusement Company to Nikitas Dipson, and the latter's alleged inability to obtain product.

Mr. Dipson, in association with Basil Brothers of Buffalo, is scheduled to take over the Century lease on August 1st. After a trip to New York to obtain product, Mr. Dipson, returning to Buffalo this week, issued statements to the local papers saying that prospective product was committed to the Shea interests. Following publication of the statements, Max Yellen, general manager for the owners of the Century, said that unless the owners received assurances within a week that the theatre would have an adequate supply of first-run films, the matter would be submitted to the U. S. Attorney General on a charge of monopoly in Buffalo by Paramount, Loew's and Shea.

Vincent McFaul, Shea general manager, contends that there is enough product still available.

Hearings on in U. S. B. & K. Chicago Case

The Federal Government's long-pending criminal contempt anti-trust proceedings in the Chicago case against Balaban and Katz and the major companies is finally under way, before Edgar Eldredge, Master in Chancery, and the first order of court business is the introduction of voluminous documents by the defendants under Government subpoenas. This will take from two weeks to two months.

WANGER SENDS 128 SCRIPTS TO COLLEGE

United Artists Producer Walter Wanger has sent 128 scenarios, contributed by every studio in Hollywood, to the Irving Thalberg Memorial screen library at Dartmouth College. Mr. Wanger endowed the library and a course in screen writing at Dartmouth two years ago.

The screen-writing course has had the assistance of writers and producers from several Hollywood studios. Professor Benfield Pressey is directing the study at Dartmouth after spending several months at the Wanger studios last year.

Robert L. Wright, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, heading the Government counsel, called for the documents, consisting of contracts, agreements, records, corporate books and the like, with the Government next making minute examinations of the records before moving for formal trial. Additionally, the Government would extend the scope of its search of defendants' records from the three years prior to November, 1938, back to 1922, seeking information particularly on rentals paid by B. and K. throughout its Chicago operations.

This week, with attorneys for all of the defendants on hand, the law firm of Seeley and Burnham, for Loew's, identified papers subpoenaed from that company; Vincent O'Brien, for Warners, acted similarly for his client. Acting for Paramount is Louis Phillips, New York; Fred Pride, for Twentieth-Century-Fox, and Granville Whittlesby, for RKO.

Serving for the Government, with Attorney General Wright, are Wright, Simon and Canaday.

Chicago Independents' Suit Is Postponed

The anti-trust suit of 100 of Chicago's independent exhibitors against Balaban and Katz and the eight major companies was postponed again this week, to June 19th, because attorneys for the independents are occupied with another court matter. Clearance and product concessions allegedly favoring B. and K., to the disadvantage of the independents, is the basic complaint.

Majors Deny Charges In Ford Stadium Case

Third anti-trust action pending in Chicago Federal courts, instituted by the Ford Stadium theatre, this week was before Judge Wilkerson through a categorical denial of the charges filed by Mayer, Meyer, Austrian and Platt, for the defendant majors. Judge Wilkerson gave Lewis Jacobson, attorney for the plaintiff, until June 5th to file an answer to the denial.

Delay Granted Majors In U. S. Trust Action

Judge Edgar Vaught, in Federal Court in Oklahoma City, on Monday, granted the Griffith circuit interests and the eight majors a 60-day time extension, until July 27th, to file answers to the anti-trust charges filed by the Department of Justice, May 1st, in the Department's first suit of a series of "localized" actions promised by the Government to "break up" territorial operations of an alleged monopolistic nature.

The defendants told the court that to respond adequately to the charges would necessitate voluminous compilation of data.

Momand Case Also Gets Delay to Saturday

Some action on the biggest independent anti-trust suit pending against the majors, from the standpoint of the $4,500,000 damages asked by the plaintiff, A. B. Momand, is due in Oklahoma City Federal Court, Saturday morning, when Judge A. P. Murrah is to hear a motion by Griffith Circuit interests and the other plaintiffs to dismiss the long-pending action.

The Griffith interests and the other defendants, including all of the majors, are the same defendants as those named in the Government's Oklahoma City case. Much of the complaint of one suit is identical to the other.

Boston Suit Resumed, Then Postponed Again

Following the first recess taken in the Boston trust case against the majors since it started last year, trial of the action was resumed for a short period this week, and then recessed again, until May 31st, when it is expected that Timothy O'Toole, former Boston branch manager for Columbia, will be a witness.

The anti-trust action was brought against the large companies by Morse and Rothenberg and the A. and W. Amusement Company, and is being conducted for them by George S. Ryan, as counsel, before a Federal Court Master. Months had been spent on the taking of depositions.

Court Orders Majors to Answer in La Crosse Case

Judge Gunnar Nordby, in Federal Court in Milwaukee, last Friday, ordered the defendants—Welworth Theatre, Minnesota Amusements, Ed Ruben, Paramount and other majors—to answer questions before trial as asked by the plaintiff, La Crosse Theatres Co.

Robert A. Hess, Milwaukee attorney, for La Crosse, charged that in depositions taken by the plaintiff of "a number of the agents and officers of the various defendant companies, plaintiff was met with a disposition not to answer any questions that might in any way help plaintiff's proof touching on alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade under the Clayton and Sherman Acts."

Court Rules in Trust Suits in Maine

The United States District Court at Portland, Me., last Friday refused to grant three distributor motions in the two Maine anti-trust suits in which the majors sought to dismiss both $100,000 actions, to exclude as redundant certain parts of the bills of complaints, and to order the independent exhibitors to supply bills of particulars.

Action on Texas Case Is Due Saturday

The federal court at Dallas on Saturday will hold hearings on the petition of B. R. McLeondon, of Atlanta, Texas, for an injunction compelling the major distributors to refrain from delaying release of feature films to plaintiff.

U. S. DASHES "QUICK" TELEVISION HOPES, REFUSES STANDARDIZATION

FCC Turns Down Broadcasters' Petition for Standards; Says Radio and Picture Service Is "Years Away"

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

High optimism over the future of television, raised by the New York World's Fair telecasts, advanced as "the beginning of television service," was dashed this week by the television committee of the Federal Communications Commission.

Recommending that the commission take no action at this time on proposals for television standards submitted by the Radio Manufacturers Association, the FCC committee late Wednesday officially predicted that years must elapse before nationwide radio picture service will be available.

Personal Surveys Made

Composed of Commissioners T. A. M. Craven, chairman, Norman S. Case and Thad H. Brown, the committee for a number of months has been studying the television situation and has made personal surveys of laboratories and plants in an effort to determine just what the status of the budding art is at the present time.

"We feel that television technology stands at approximately the same point on its road of development as did the automobile business immediately prior to the advent of mass production," the committee reported.

"Had the Government been asked at that time to fix standards of performance for the automobile industry as the Federal Communications Commission is asked to do for television," it pointed out, "it would have been very unlikely that any agency of the Government could have foreseen the changes which swept over automobile engineering in a few short years as a result of free private enterprise and uncontrolled competition between engineers and manufacturers. Generally speaking, the history of the emergence of the automobile industry is the record of all improvement in machine operation. Conscious of this, the television committee is extremely hesitant to recommend anything which might later prove to hamper the orderly development of the industry."

"Barely Emerging"

On the whole, the committee decided, television is now barely emerging from the first or technical research stage of development. Standards adopted now might not be applicable with any degree of flexibility to future developments. "Nobody can foresee the progress of scientific invention, nor can anyone predict safely what the public will or will not accept," it commented. "Therefore, it would appear to be absurd for the commission or the industry at this time to take the position that they know precisely what the future holds."

Approval of standards now, and the consequent licensing of stations seeking to get priority on the limited number of channels available, the commission was warned, might discourage private enterprise or decrease the incentive for undertaking research to effect further improvements.

However, it was added, the commission should adopt a policy of cooperation with the industry and continue its studies that it may keep abreast of developments, but should announce it will not formally consider the proposed standards at this time, in order that further research may be encouraged.

Planned logically on sound economic principles, television presents the future possibility of developing a new and important industry, the committee held.

Warns of Pitfalls

"There are pitfalls of an economic character which should be avoided if television is to become a sound business enterprise capable of rendering a sustained and acceptable service to the public of the Nation," they reported. "Undue haste and lack of coordination between the various elements of the industry are undesirable because of the inevitable retardation of orderly development."

In this connection, the committee warned against any development which would prove disastrous to the motion picture industry. "While television as a major industry may have distinct social advantages through the creation of new employment," it was pointed out, "it appears necessary that all concerned exercise caution to minimize disadvantages which could result in unnecessary displacement of labor in industries which may be adversely affected by television service on a national scale. These disadvantages are susceptible of being minimized."

High cost of operation for some time will make difficult the support of one television station in cities of less than 100,000 population or the operation of two competitive stations in cities of less than 1,000,000, the committee believes. For this reason, it is highly desirable that the industry undertake further research looking to the development of more economical methods of operation and the maintenance of more stations in the limited number of channels available.

"In the opinion of the committee, practical television service to the public on a nationwide scale cannot be expected for some time in the future," the commission was told.

"Much development remains to be accom-

TELEVISION VIA TELEPHONE

Television images were transmitted over ordinary telephone line wires for the first time Saturday night. The occasion was a telecast of the six-day bicycle races at Madison Square Garden in New York. The telephone line hookup was a little over a mile long, running from the Garden to the NBC studios in Radio City by way of the telephone company's exchange at Ninth Avenue and 50th Street.

Heretofore only coaxial cables have been used for transmission purposes; the drawback cited being the cost involved. A coaxial cable running between New York and Philadelphia is reputed to have cost $500,000 when installed last year.

Officials of both the network and the telephone company emphasized that the program was strictly an experiment.

Talent Groups Head for Clash Over Jurisdiction; Theatre Sites Sought; British Ask Cooperation

Labor jurisdiction in television is a problem that is growing with the technical development of the medium, the principal professional unions and guilds in the talent fields apparently heading for a clash over jurisdiction, with radio, the so-called legitimate theatre and Hollywood each advancing claims over television players already at work and those to appear in the future.

Maneuvering for Position

While leaders in the various labor movements are maneuvering for position in a showdown that appears not far distant, the telecasting companies are looking about for theatre sites, both here and abroad, and England is making formal effort to obtain suitable material for telecasting from the American film producers, whose product dominates the British market. The effort looks to be successful already.

The latest development in the struggle for control of labor's end of the television field is a suggestion advanced by the executive committee of the Screen Actors Guild, which would set up a committee representing Actors' Equity, the Screen Actors' Guild and the American Federation of Radio Artists to administer jurisdiction until the new medium gains commercial standing. Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, declared that the executive committee of the Actors' Guild was of the opinion that "jurisdiction should not be vested in any organization at this time."

Reiterating the stand of the Guild, Mr. Thomson added "The interests of the members of the various organizations are paramount. Nobody knows yet which way television will turn, and to what extent motion pictures and live talent will be used. The assignment of jurisdiction to any group at this time would not be in the best interests of any of the members of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America." (The AAAA is the parent body of all American Federation of Labor performer groups.

Equity To Act

Meanwhile, Actors' Equity continued determined to exercise what it considers its right to jurisdiction in the field, inasmuch as television jurisdiction is included in the preamble to the Equity Constitution, as adopted in 1930. Also, in 1931, the Equity Council enjoined its members from accepting television work without Equity's consent. As pointed out in Motion Picture Herald of May 13th, however, neither the Screen Actors' Guild nor the American Federation of Radio Artists was organized at the time. Equity expects to organize the television field, it has been reported, regardless of what happens, unless some action is taken in the near future.

A meeting of the AAAA executive board, at which the problem of jurisdiction was to be considered further, was postponed in New York Wednesday for two weeks.

The National Broadcasting Company is pacing the field in taking steps to operate a television theatre of its own; NBC and Radio Corporation of America engineers and architects having recently been inspecting the premises of the Belmont Theatre at 48th Street off Sixth Avenue, New York, with an eye to the possible conversion of the theatre into a television playhouse. Close to Radio City, home of NBC-RCA, the theatre, if acquired, would have television equipment installed in it; with audiences admitted to the television shows in all probability, just as they are to radio broadcasts.

Although no concrete deal for the installation of Baird Television has been announced by Ian Javal, Baird television production head who arrived from England several weeks ago, it is expected that a theatre installation will be made by the first of next month.

Fifth Theatre Equipped

The Gramercy Park Cinema will install a General Electric television receiver in its lounge early in June; this making the fourth New York theatre to be so equipped. Others which already have television sets are the Paramount (which has a Du Mont set); the Little Carnegie (RCA-Victor); the New Amsterdam (RCA-Victor).

To date, the Waldorf-Astoria is the only New York hotel which has installed television receivers in public rooms, the Waldorf having installed two. However, a stride forward was taken in the apartment house field with the recent announcement that a new 23-story apartment house at 20 Park Avenue will contain a multiple antenna system to feed programs to individual tenant's receiving sets. RCA will install the antenna this summer.

Paving the way for the use of standard television receivers in the Hollywood area, 441-line cameras will be installed by station W6XAO within a month, it has been disclosed. The station has been using a 300 line screen.

The running of the Derby at Epsom Downs Wednesday, which was televised in four major West End houses in London, broke previous cinema television records there.

The start and finish of the race were clearly shown and it was reported that the new Baird Cathode tube gave improved definition. Three of the houses were provided with Baird equipment, the other with Scophony.

British Ask U. S. Cooperation

A committee representing the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society met Tuesday to draw up a memorandum for submission to the Postmaster General asking that permits be refused theatres for the showing of television broadcasts. The Exhibitors and Renters Societies have been fighting television in theatres, but the committee, unable to agree, will refer again with their organizations.

Gerald Cock, British Broadcasting Corporation director of television, who left New York for London last week, said before sailing that he had submitted a plan for co-operation between the television and film industries; having submitted it to Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and the MPPDA television committee, which consists of Harry Buckley of United Artists; Charles C. Moskowitz of Loew's, and Paul Raibourn of Paramount. The plan calls for an exchange of views on all aspects of television, collaboration on developments relating to commercial aspects in regard to theatres and the release of shorts by producers for use on television programs.

Mr. Cock predicted the ultimate spread of television over the United States. "America has the youth, the energy and resources to make a go of television," he said.

Subject to certain regulations designed to eliminate exhibitor objections in England, major American film companies will cooperate in making their short subjects available to the B. B. C. for television use. A reasonable price will be paid for the use of the subjects, which are designed for showing as "fillers," that is, used only between telecasts of "live" entertainment and other events, and not as a program in themselves.

RCA has formed an executive committee to pass upon questions pertaining to television. The committee, it has been reported, consists of Dr. Charles Jolliffe, head of the RCA frequencies bureau; Ralph I. Beal, RCA director of research; A. H. Morton, NBC television activities' head; T. F. Joyce, vice-president of RCA Manufacturing Company, and Clayton Morgan, NBC public relations director. It is headed by Frank Mullen, RCA vice-president in charge of public relations.

SEES FACSIMILE AS AID TO INSTRUCTION

"Facsimile in the field of education eventually may revolutionize certain types of instruction," was the prediction this week of Harold C. Vance, manager of facsimile sales for Radio Corporation of America. Mr. Vance addressed the Institute for Education by Radio in convention at Ohio State University at Columbus.

He also predicted that simultaneous broadcasting of sound and radio programs would develop a new broadcasting technique of certain types of programs, as, for instance, cooking schools, where listeners could have a permanently printed record while listening to the program.

"The use of facsimile in the classroom, however, is dependent upon the development of receiving sets which could be sold at a price comparable to the cost of good radio receivers and which would include both radio and facsimile reception," he said.

Television Is Far Off: Commission

plished from both a technical and organization standpoint," the report pointed out. Facilities for the distribution of programs from one center to another have yet to be developed, financed and constructed. Much has yet to be learned concerning program production as well as financing and reducing the cost thereof. Primarily because of the large cost of construction of transmitting stations as well as the high cost of operation thereof in a national competitive system, it is expected that for the next few years the largest metropolitan centers will be the only centers receiving television service and that the smaller centers of population will not have transmitting service available for several years. The cost of receivers will be high during the first years of development, and this in turn may have an additional retarding effect upon the construction of television transmitting stations, particularly in smaller communities."

"This high cost of service as well as the relatively high cost of television receivers may be a retarding factor in the development of television as a service on a national scale," it was felt. "It may also act as a deterrent upon early mass production of receivers at low cost. In the opinion of the committee, these natural economic factors of delay are not undesirable because they will enable a more sound development ultimately of an improved television service to the public, particularly when mass production of receivers at lower cost may become more of a reality than a hopeful probability.

"In view of the foregoing, it seems safe to conclude that the establishment of a television service on a national scale will be a process of gradual development, beginning progressively with the larger cities and, over a period of years, finally becoming available to smaller communities."

"Courageous Pioneering"

Noting that the financing of television will require "courageous pioneering efforts on the part of American investors," the commission issued a strong warning against investment in unproven enterprises which, in contrast to the many organizations which now have sound basic plans for the development of certain phases of the art, are not equipped from the standpoint of either basic facilities or organization but which nevertheless will attempt to obtain financial support from the investing public. "Such enterprises are doomed to ultimate failure," the committee warned.

The report paid tribute to the American industry for its development of television—undertaken at its own expense in contrast with that in other countries where governments have given assistance—and declared it imperative that the Government take no action which retards logical progress in its further development.

"While there are many problems yet to be solved and many obstacles yet to be overcome, the committee sees no reason for an assumption that these problems will not be solved and that these obstacles cannot be overcome by encouraging inventive genius organized and financed by private American enterprise to proceed with the second of the three broad stages of television development," it was declared.

"Private industry has already spent millions in developing the technical aspects of television to the point that this new art is more than a dream of inventive genius. From a scientific standpoint, television is now practical, even though its quality is susceptible of improvement.

"It appears useless to expect private enterprise to continue to pour additional capital in the further development of the technical aspects of this new art, unless there can be forseen some hope of an eventual return on the investment. Consequently the time is fast arriving when it will become necessary to ascertain public reaction to the service potentialities of television. This can be accomplished only by limited public participation through the purchase of receivers, manufactured in the earlier stages of technical development."

"Juarez" Film Guide

A 16-page film study guide has been prepared on the Warner Brothers picture, "Juarez," by Harold Turney, chairman of the Department of Drama of the Los Angeles City College. The guide is available to students of the motion picture, and those interested in the preparation and production of the feature.

"Young Mr. Lincoln" HAS DRAMA! . . . .

Managers Honor Drive Leader

The motion picture industry of the northwest turned out Tuesday night, at a banquet in the Nicollet Hotel in Minneapolis, to honor Morton A. Levy, district manager for Twentieth Century-Fox in that territory, on his appointment as national leader for the 1939-40 "S. R. Kent Sales Drive."

Mr. Levy stands fourth from the left in the photo above. On his left are Stanley J. Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox district manager at Des Moines; Jack Lorentz, district manager in Milwaukee, and Joseph Podoloff, assistant to Mr. Levy. On Mr. Levy's right are William Elson, who was toastmaster; Merle Potter, MOTION PICTURE HERALD representative in Minneapolis; Joseph Scott, Twentieth Century-Fox district manager in Omaha, and Clyde Eckhardt, manager in Chicago.

Besides the guest of honor, and Mr. Elson, speakers included John Friedl and Theodore Hayes, of Minnesota Amusement Circuit; Ralph Branton, general manager of the Tri-State Circuit of Des Moines, and Roger Ferri, editor of Fox's sales division publication, The Dynamo, from New York.

One hundred exhibitors of the territory joined with Fox and other exchange managers in sponsoring the testimonial. On the dais, besides all of those mentioned above, were: Joseph Deitch, booker for Tri-States Circuit, Chicago; Don West, booker for Central States Circuit, Chicago; Frank D. Rubel, general manager of Pioneer Theatres, Des Moines; Charles Brown, Ray Brown and Charles Marks, Iowa exhibitors, and Max Roth of Republic.

THREE MEETINGS HELD; TWO MORE TO COME

RKO To Have 60 Features, Session June 19th Will Be Told; Paramount Meets June 7th

Regional sales conventions were held this week by Columbia, MGM and Universal, narrowing the number of 1939-40 product meetings to be held to two: Paramount's and RKO-Radio's, due, respectively, on June 7th and 19th. The only other new season's developments of the week were the disclosure that Radio's new product announcement will list 60 features, and Paramount's announcement that hereafter it will produce its own trailers. RKO's 60 will be the largest number in its history.

Columbia's third and last sales meeting started Saturday, running for three days at the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles, with A. Montague, general sales manager, presiding. Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager, was also present. Jerome Safron, western division manager headed the 50 delegates comprising branch managers and salesmen from the six exchanges in the west: Denver, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, Portland, San Francisco and Seattle.

The third day of the convention was devoted to explanation of sales policies governing the marketing of 40 features, 16 westerns, four serials and 120 shorts.

Sixth and final of the 1939-40 territorial conferences of M-G-M office managers, bookers and checking supervisors was held Wednesday and Thursday in New York's Hotel Astor. Other meetings were held in Washington, D. C., New Orleans, Kansas City, San Francisco and Chicago.

Alan F. Cummings, manager of M-G-M's exchange operations, presided.

Universal in Canada

Eastern regional sales convention of Empire-Universal Films, Universal's Canadian affiliate, opened in Toronto, at the Royal York Hotel Thursday for a three-day program with company officials present from the Toronto, St. John and Montreal branches. Three executive officers of Universal, were on hand from New York.

Arrangements were in the hands of Paul Nathanson, vice-president of the Canadian company, and Alfred Perry, general manager. Other officials include: Harry Paynter of Montreal; Jerry Hoyt, St. John, and Archie Laurie and Frank Fisher of Toronto. President Nate Blumberg, Frank J. McCarthy, eastern sales head, and William A. Scully, general sales manager, attended from New York.

Mr. Blumberg travels from Toronto to the studios at Universal studio there to spend the remainder of the summer on new product matters.

Sixty features will be announced by RKO for the new season at the company's annual sales convention June 19-22, at Westchester Country Club, New York.

Final arrangements for new season product were made at the studio by George J. Schaefer, RKO head, during his stay of several weeks there. Mr. Schaefer returned to New York last Friday, completing the final lap of the trip from the coast by plane from Chicago. He was accompanied by Gordon Youngman of the company's home office legal department, who assisted with the making of new season production, release and talent contracts at the studio.

Among product for which deals were closed during Mr. Schaefer's studio visit are those with Gene Towne and Graham Baker for four; with Stephens-Lang for three "Dr. Christian" pictures starring Jean Hersholt; one from Harold Lloyd; a Laurel and Hardy picture to be produced by Boris Morros, and RKO release for eight Morros remakes of French pictures, and a three-picture deal for Richard Dix. The company will also have at least two from the Max Gordon-Harry Goetz team; three or four from Herbert Wilcox: two or three each from Leo McCarey, Gregory La Cava and the Bob Breen unit. There will be a total of 14 from "outside" producers, and RKO will make the remainder probably 20 "A's" and 26 "B's".

Before leaving Hollywood for New York Mr. Schaefer authorized RKO to start on five pictures each budgeted at $1,000,000. The Films start in 30 days, with one $1,000,000 production, "Nurse Edith Cavell" already in work. Scheduled to start in a month are "My Fifth Avenue Girl," starring Ginger Rogers; "Hunchback of Notre Dame," to be produced by Pandro S. Berman; "Pennsylvania Uprising," starring John Wayne, and possibly Irene Dunne; "Vigil in the Night," starring Carole Lombard, and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," starring Raymond Massey.

RKO's foreign manager Phil Reisman, in New York Monday, announced the names of RKO foreign representatives who will attend the sales convention June 19th, as follows:

Ralph Hanbury, United Kingdom; Ralph Doyle, Australasia; Nat Liebeskind, Argentina; Bert Reisman, Peru; Max Gomez, Mexico; Pedro Saenz, president Cia. Cubana de Peliculas, S. A.; Reginald Armour, continental Europe; Leon Britton, Far East; Bruno Cheli, Brazil; Fred S. Gulbransen, Panama; Ned S. Seckler, Cuba and Gus Schaefer, district manager for central and northern South America.

250 for Paramount Meet

Paramount's 250 delegates to the convention in Los Angeles, from June 7 to 10 inclusive will be given a royal reception.

They will be met by a band on arriving in San Bernardino and escorted to Los Angeles where busses will take them to the studio.

Business sessions will start Thursday, June 8, with William LeBaron, Y. Frank Freeman, Harold Hurley and others making addresses. Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager, will outline the new season's program on June 9, followed by a luncheon and screenings.

C. G. Dickinson, general sales manager, and T. C. Reddin, advertising and publicity director of Paramount in Great Britain, will arrive in New York May 30th. Henri Klarsfeld, general manager in France, will reach New York May 29th. Floyd C. Henry, manager in the Philippines, reached New York Wednesday.

A. L. Pratchett, general manager in Central America and the Caribbean, was already in New York, likewise Harry Hunter, managing director in Australia and New Zealand.

Announcement that Paramount will produce its own trailers, starting in January, 1940, came last Thursday. At least two types of trailers will be made, one for first run theatres and another for subsequent runs.

Paramount is the third company to begin production and distribution of its own trailers, Warners and M-G-M having done so for several years.

"Young Mr. Lincoln" IS SPECTACULAR! . . . .

Jamaica Inn

(Mayflower-Associated British in England, Paramount in America)

Shipwreck

As with most Charles Laughton films, the immediate appeal of this third Mayflower production inevitably hangs upon the drawing power of its star. At once it can be recorded that Laughton never has given a better performance and that the patrons will find yet a totally different and compelling characterization added to the long list of Laughton portraits. The novel from which it is adapted has a sale of a million copies to its credit, indicative of a foundation already there among the reading public. On its own merit the picture, as directed by Alfred Hitchcock, with its swashbuckling air of ruthless piracy, its brooding atmosphere of dark deviltry, against a picturesque coastal background, and its brilliant Regency costuming, its storms and its wrecks, has more than one element of attractive melodramatic entertainment.

A worthy successor to "The Beachcomber" and "St. Martin's Lane" and in many ways the best of the three, it is due for distribution in the United States by Paramount, under the reciprocity clauses of Britain's Quota Act. It should make as much money as its predecessors.

Laughton's role is that of "Sir Humphrey Pengallan," rich living Regency squire of a Cornish manor who, unknown to his circle, heads a shipwrecking gang who lure vessels to ruin on the rocks, loot the cargo and slaughter the crew. The story introduces to this odd world a bright-eyed maiden from Ireland and a dashing young King's officer bent on unmasking the wreckers and the master mind behind them. Shadows of romance flicker across the narrative, and the adventure draws to its close with "Pengallan" escaping from capture, trying to kidnap the girl, and finally destroying himself rather than surrender to the military.

It is virile stuff with virile action. A well-handled shipwreck opens the film. "Pangallan's" spectacular suicide, leaping from the yard arm of a quayside ship, ends it. In between there are murders, attempts at hanging, bludgeonings and escapes, a graceful glimpse of Regency society with a lingering flavor of candles, old port and brandy, and an unshaven gang of thugs slightly on the caricature side but in the true tradition of pirate melodrama. Devotees of Hitchcock will find little directorial subtlety, but rather straightforward treatment of meaty material, rousing storm sequences, and a shadowy film of sinister corners and bleak coasts finely photographed by Harry Stradling.

Laughton's portrayal is a fascinating mixture of the graceful and the genteel, of the smug, murderous and sensual, of a paunchy egotist of impeccable manners, crazy for comfort and ease and completely devoid of scruples. Maureen O'Hara, Laughton's "discovery," is beautiful and has a beautiful voice, but does no sensational acting; her immaturity stands rather in relief against the finished ease of Marie Ney as the tragic wife of the innkeeper, handled on burly lines by Leslie Banks. Emlyn Williams as a rascally sub-lieutenant of crime, and Wylie Watson as a wrecker with a conscientious eye on the hereafter, are others who stand out from a well chosen and accomplished cast.

Previewed to an all press and trade audience at the Regal, London, the film was hailed as the best of the Mayflower three, and a definite addition to the best in the star's portrait gallery.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Jones Family in Hollywood

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy

From the dual considerations of commercial and all-family entertainment values, none of the pictures in this Twentieth Century-Fox series has offered as much of both as does "The Jones Family in Hollywood." Here the regular family, with the exception of Billy Mahan, but assisted by William Tracy, June Gale, Hamilton MacFadden and Matt McHugh, experiences its wildest adventure. What happens to the family individually and collectively provided the preview audience with a solid hour's laughter, evidence that any kind of a neighborly gathering is likely to laugh at all the funny things that happen.

Like every American family, the "Joneses" want to see Hollywood. John, delegated to the American Legion convention there, is unable to convince his brood that the town is a good place to stay away from. Once in the film city, the whole family, except "John," go Hollywood. While he toots the tuba in parades and continually gets in the way of the art of picture making, movie-struck "Lucy's" experiences with a philandering juvenile star, "Danny Reagan," are sources of gleeful enjoyment. Particularly hilarious is the episode in which "Lucy," transformed in make-up from a simple country girl to a glittering moderne, undergoes a screen test. Just as funny are "Jack's" romantic associations with a screen vamp, "Alice." The giddy fun mounts when it appears that "John" will become involved in a scandal, but "Roger" saves the day for the family when he beats up two-timing "Danny."

The prestige of the "Jones Family" series, plus the fact that this number delivers a laugh with almost every line of dialogue and bit of action, is the principal exploitation value, but the different manner in which are presented studio "inside stuff" and the famous Hollywood landmarks make possible the development of many non-routine showmanship ideas.

Bridal Suite

(MGM)

Comedy-Romance

As entertainment, "Bridal Suite" is about as light and substantial as a cream puff. Sometimes it's humorous; very often it isn't. Patrons may enjoy it, more or less, but hardly find a thrill in it.

The picture is a Continental comedy romance. The Swiss Alps provide the main locale. The hero is an American lad, addicted to drink, who forgets to show up for his wedding. He's a problem to his father, but the apple of his mother's eye. Alternately pestering and exciting the heroine, a maid in a mountain chalet to which he has been taken for a brain-health cure, he shares with her and his doctor a few adventurous lost-in-the-mountains moments. A deal of tomfoolery ensues thereafter until, on a New York liner, it is revealed that the dizzy hero has married the maid.

For personal exploitation purposes, the picture offers such name values as Robert Young, Annabella, Walter Connolly, Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, Gene Lockhart and Arthur Treacher, who gets chased out of the show early following a few hilarious contributions. Backgrounds are picturesque. Some of the dialogue is quite snappy and one bedroom sequence is in dubious taste. Direction is spotty, causing gaps which necessitate considerable use of imagination.

The Zero Hour

(Republic)

Human Interest Item

"The Zero Hour" is the picturization of the suffering of a man and a woman. It is an ideal vehicle for the talents of Frieda Inescort, a production of innate appeal to women, and an example of the drive by Republic to create greater cinema entertainment. It is a deftly wrought piece of cinema direction by Sidney Salkow of an original screenplay by Garrett Fort which, contrary to possible interpretation of the title, tells without extraneous matter the simple story of the love of an actress for her benefactor who, having become hopelessly crippled, sacrifices his life for her love.

Frieda Inescort and Otto Kruger have the principal roles, and they play them to their utmost worth. Others in the supporting cast are Adrienne Ames, Don Douglas, Jane Darwell, J. M. Kerrigan, Ann Todd, Leonard Carey, Sarah Padden, Ferris Taylor, Willard Parker and Landers Stevens.

What might have been a maudlinly sentimental portrayal was avoided by the direction of Salkow and the original script of Fort.

"Linda Marsh" is sacrificing herself for an ideal, a vision of romance with her discoverer, "Julian Forbes." That he becomes crippled on what might have been their wedding night makes no difference to her, until a little girl, to be adopted, and another man enter her life.

The Kid from Kokomo

(Warner-FN)

Pugilistic Comedy

Wayne Morris is a prize fighter again in this subject, a fact to advertise, and May Robson gives a finished performance as a drunken shoplifter. Pat O'Brien is seen again as a fight promoter, a circumstance of box office moment, and Maxie Rosenbloom is in the film as both boxer and comedian, another. Sidney Toler, Joan Blondell and Ed Brophy are other marquee-worthy principals.

Billing emphasizing the humorous character of the offering is mandatory, for only an audience forewarned that it's all in fun may be relied upon to react wholeheartedly to the basic situation, wherein a fight promoter palms off a dissolute character on his sentimental boxer as his mother whom he has not seen since babyhood. Contemplated soberly, the idea has its faults. It is treated humorously.

Miss Robson's performance as the aged alcoholic is superb, if unlovely. Morris' portrayal of the gullible heavyweight, who accepts not only this counterfeit mother but also a counterfeit father addicted to playful use of brass knuckles and a blackjack, is convincing. Sidney Toler makes much of a role as a distinguished judge with an undistinguished past, Miss Blondell is adequate as the fight promoter's girl friend and Jane Wyman is brightly, although briefly present as the boxer's sweetheart.

As produced by Sam Bischoff and directed by Lewis Seiler, the picture opens as a comedy of repartee and progresses steadily, while action takes on heightened pace, to unadulterated slapstick at the finish. The screen play by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay from a story by Dalton Trumbo is in the tone of "A Slight Case of Murder" and distributes laugh lines evenly among the principal characters.

6,000 Enemies

(MGM)

Penal Melodrama

Produced in matter of fact manner with uniformly competent players, this mainly masculine story moves along well worn grooves from court room opening through pandemoniums in a penitentiary back to court room fadeout. Walter Pidgeon plays the principal role which sharply overshadows all others and imparts to the story sufficient interest to carry it over early soft spots. It takes care of itself in the prison break sequence which is the high spot.

Bertram Millhauser's screen play, based on a story by Wilmon Menard and Leon L. Stanley, relates the experiences of a district attorney famous for his many convictions when he in turn is convicted of a felony and sent to the prison tenanted by criminals he has prosecuted. They try in various ways to kill him, but the prison doctor befriends him. Gangsters outside the jail murder his brother and the hero momentarily joins in a prison break, but ultimately prevents escape of the felons. At picture end he sends the right gangster to the chair and marries a girl whose unearned incarceration he has learned he was responsible for.

George B. Seitz directed for producer Lucien Hubbard. Save for numerous graphic killings and some sequences emphasizing facial contortions of insane prisoners, the film is routine middle class audience material.

The Gorilla

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Buffoonery

The old favorite stage play, "The Gorilla," has been brought to the screen for the third time in Twentieth Century-Fox's latest vehicle for the Ritz Brothers, Harry, Jimmy and Al, who in this modified version play the roles of three detectives hired to guard the occupants of an old house honeycombed by secret passages in which much of the action takes place. All the well worn devices for creating thrills, plus the antics of the Ritzes, are included in the script by Rian James and Sid Silvers, based on the Ralph Spence play.

The chief assets, in addition to the Ritzes, are the suspense and laughs created by a real and a bogus gorilla and by the comedy contributed by Patsy Kelly. Anita Louise, Lionel Atwill, Bela Lugosi, Joseph Calleia, Edward Norris, Wally Vernon, Paul Harvey and Art Miles complete the cast.

Allan Dwan directed the picture. Harry Joe Brown was associate producer.

Hired to guard against "The Gorilla," a murderer, the Ritzes, "Garrity," "Harrigan" and "Mulligan," prowl through a series of incidents which supplies a multitude of suspects. A real gorilla enlivens the situations. "Harrigan's" explanation of the discovery of the criminal comes in a blackout reminiscent of burlesque routine.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., where the audience laughed at the "gags," although fully anticipating them, and became audibly shocked at the denouement, which had to do with window trimming and what Harry Ritz refers to as a "phoney feel." —V. K.

Hidden Power

(Columbia - Larry Darmour)

Personal Melodrama

As a matter of entertainment, this Jack Holt picture differs radically from any the Larry Darmour star has been seen in recently. Devoid of theatricals, bare of fast breaking action, it simply tells, with strong appeal to the more quiet sentiments, the story of a man who had for his ideal the welfare and protection of humanity. Naturally it is serious entertainment, as it strikes several notes of disappointment and disillusionment, as well as one of tragedy, before it reaches its happy ending. It is well staged, intelligently directed by Lewis D. Collins from Gordon Rigby's original screen play and convincingly acted by Holt and his supporting cast.

Chemist "Garfield," searching for a formula for a compound that will ease suffering, nears success but discovers that it is highly explosive. The fact is spectacularly demonstrated by an assistant who blows up the plant in a forbidden experiment. Great profit would come to "Garfield" if he would sell his secret to munitions makers. When he refuses, his former employers resort to criminal tactics. His decision causes a rift in his home and his self-

When "Steve" is fearfully burned in an auto accident which costs his mother's life, application of the compound, now perfected, to the boy's burns saves him. Its release to the public without profit is a boon to mankind.

Unmarried

(Paramount)

Melodrama of Regeneration

Buck Jones as a pugilist on his way out and Helen Twelvetrees as a night club proprietress unwillingly in love with him are castings novel enough to stimulate customer curiosity in behalf of this moderately produced but steadily entertaining melodrama. Both principals turn in fine performances.

The story by Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt, was used by Paramount a number of years ago and is still sound as adapted by Lillie Hayward and Brian Marlow. This time, it may be remarked, the unmarried estate of the principals, from which the picture takes its title, though there is a wedding at fadeout time, is given no emphasis and exists simply as a background circumstance of no plot moment. Kurt Newmann's direction is straightforward and highly effective.

"Slag Bailey" and "Pat Rogers," boxer and night club proprietress, leave New York to investigate the upstate property of a tragically deceased associate. The property turns out to be a house, to which comes "Ted," a boy of 10 or 12, who does not know his father is dead. "Slag" and "Pat" decide to stay a day or two until the boy, who regards them as married friends of his father and turns to them for comfort, shall recover from his grief. Their stay runs on into years during which their association with the boy and the townspeople combines to effect their complete regeneration.

As treated, the story appeals strongly to the more wholesome emotions, ignores the others completely.

Youth in Revolt

(Columbia)

Social Melodrama

Columbia has imported for distribution in this country the French melodrama "Youth in Revolt," a dramatization of the younger generation's rebellion against life as it is. Directed by Jean Benoit-Levy, who handled two French pictures that have drawn widespread interest in this country, "Ballerina" and "La Maternelle," and from the stage play by Julien Luchaire, the plot is novel and absorbing.

Seven young men from different walks in life establish their own government in a mountain lodge to free themselves from the worries of unemployment, restrictions of the crowded cities, and boredom. A group of girl skiers in the mountains become stranded, are offered food and shelter by the boys, and become part of the republic. A misunderstanding divides the community into two factions, but a landslide reunites them in common cause of combating the forces of nature, after which they return to civilization.

The cast, including Jean-Louis Barrault, Fabien Loris and Odette Joyeux, is well balanced, with the aid of Maurice Bacquet as the comedian. Patrons should enjoy the snow covered mountain scenery.

Reviewed at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse in New York, which deals almost exclusively in French films.—George Spires.

Across the Plains

(Monogram)

Western

The story goes back to the old west of the wagon trails of the 1850's and spans 20 years, not in historical fashion but as the growing-up period of two small boys orphaned when a band of white raiders destroy their wagon caravan and murder their parents. The raiders adopt one of the boys, friendly Indians the other.

Jack Randall is the star of this fifth of a series of eight westerns he is making for Monogram. He plays "Cherokee." Dennis Moore is the "Kansas Kid." Others in the cast are Joyce Bryant, Frank Yaconelli, Hal Price, Glenn Strange and Robert Card.

Detective Story

This original French film presents an opportunity for an American remake, due to the interesting story by the French writer and director, Yves Mirande, once in Hollywood, on the lines of "Grand Hotel."

A boy who brings a telegram to the owner of an apartment building finds him murdered in the lift. Many apartments are visited and the private lives of the tenants are bared, in melodramatic or amazing sketches.

Fourteen first class French actors provide an excellent cast, headed by Michel Simon, vaudeville knife thrower and André Lefaur as a kleptomaniac, and Lucien Baroux as the police superintendent. There is an amusing scene between Gaby Morlay and her two lovers.

A full-house audience at the Colisee Cinema, Paris, seemed delighted by the film.—Pierre Autré.

Produced by Regina Film (Paris). Foreign sales distributor, Francinex (Paris). Directed by Yves Mirande and Georges Lacombe from an original story by Yves Mirande. Screen play and dialogues, Yves Mirande. Cameramen, Arménise and Juillard. Musical score, A. Gailhard. Sound recorder, Yvonnet. Produced at the Epinay studios (near Paris). Running time, 85 minutes. Then come scenes of nurses' hardships and sacrifices in times of war, disaster, and the general welfare work of the Red Cross. Nick sings "The Great American Home" for him. The publisher sees through their scheme, but they're forgiven when he perceives how good the song really is. With the Mullen sisters and Jean Walters rendering their songs and Fred Hillebrand as the publisher, the short is humorous and entertaining. —Running time, 10 minutes.

Dark Magic

Benchley, the Magician

No jungle miniature, the picture is of Robert Benchley demonstrating his amazing talents at parlor tricks. First a demonstrator shows slickly and interestingly how the sleight-of-hand games should be done. Thereupon, Magician Benchley makes a purchase and we next find him demonstrating his talents before his none too appreciative audience of wife and offspring.

The clever and dexterous card manipulator, Luis Zingone, demonstrates anew why one can't win against a professional card sharp. Mr. Zingone's repertoire of card tricks, his handling of the pea in the old, old shell game and the revelation of just how the tricks are accomplished are entertaining and instructive. The first sequence is set in the crime laboratory of the New York City Police Department, where laboratory workers are shown detecting minute clues by means of numerous instruments. The second sequence has to do with the making of candy, the third deals with the manufacture of rubber odds and ends, and the final sequence shows how pencils are made and colored. Narrated by Dwight Weist.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Musical Mountaineers
(Paramount)
Betty Boop and the Hillbillies

Betty Boop, the bouncing young woman from the drawing board of Max Fleischer, in this instance is concerned with a visit to the feuding folk of the hill country. When Betty's car runs out of gas, she calls upon a backwoods clan. The mountaineers mistake Betty for one of their rivals, but when she begins to sing and "truck" in her own style, the gentry recognize city breeding and join her in a hectic jam session. Finally Betty departs, using as petrol some potent corn "likker." The quaint hill characters are amusingly drawn and the takeoff on a jitterbug frolic should entertain the "jives" and "antijives" alike.—Running time, seven minutes.

Donald's Penquin
(Disney-RKO Radio)
Donald Gets a Bird

Donald is the recipient of a gift from Admiral Byrd, a cute baby penquin. The business of the short is concerned with the conflicting relations that arise. Eying a sunfish bowl, the pet is warned. Then, unjustly accused of piscatorial plunder and caught on the hook of circumstantial evidence, the bird is lined up against a wall for execution. Donald melts before the tearful glances of his target. The business is done nicely and brightly.—Running time, eight minutes.

Popular Science, No. 5
(Paramount)
Interesting

The highlight of the material offered in this chapter from the Popular Science series is a tour of inspection through the new Fleischer studios in Miami, Fla. An example illustrating the cartoon technique is offered in the portrait painting of the popular pen and ink hero, Popeye. His admirers should find it interesting and instructive. Also included are a demonstration of a radio controlled plane, used in England for air raid defence, a visit to a school of adults where the pupils are grey haired scholars, and a consideration of a new work-shop gadget. The sum of the topics is an interesting and informative subject.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Voodoo Fires
(Vitaphone)
True Adventure

This is another in the Floyd Gibbons "Your True Adventure" series and is concerned with the adventure of an Indianapolis man, who at the time of the story is the overseer of a sugar plantation in the West Indies. He becomes interested in voodooism and studies it although remaining a complete skeptic. When the natives find him spying on their ceremonies they warn him not to interfere and finally they fire the overseer's house. He leaves through a trapdoor and on emerging finds himself surrounded by natives. They are so surprised to see him emerging from the ground that they flee and his life is saved. The cast includes Frank Lyon, Raymond Von Sickle, Leroy Antoine and Laura Bowman.—Running time, 12 minutes.

The Pointer
(Disney-RKO Radio)
Pluto-Bird Dog

Appreciation of the humor in the material from instructor Mickey runs to a wider field of acquaintance than the sport set. Mickey's subject of pointer pedagogy is his hound, Pluto. The confident hunter discards a can of beans for the more appetizing prospect of quail. Pluto practices his "freezing" technique despite the distractions of a bevy of baby quail, while Mickey is being shadowed by an unfriendly bruin. Pluto's portraits of a bird dog and the heckling he receives from the birds as well as the sequences showing Mickey being tracked by the bear under the impression that it is the faithful hound should afford complete comedy satisfaction for any audience.—Running time, eight minutes.

Quiet, Please
(Vitaphone)
Featuret

A two-reel comedy in color, this "Featuret" has its locale in a Hollywood studio and concerns itself with the difficulties of producing a picture. The director is on the eccentric side and when mad, which is most of the time, stamps on his straw hat or any other hat. In the swimming pool scene it's the director that goes swimming, and in the gorilla scene the director suffers when the gorilla escapes. The stars are always fighting. In the final sequence, a Viennese ball, it appears that everything is at last going along smoothly, then the very sedate orchestra starts to "swing it" and the waltzers become jitterbugs. The cast includes Fritz Feld, Charley Foy, Katherine Kane, Larry Williams, Tom Kennedy and Fred Tozere. Directed by Crane Wilbur.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Beach Picnic
By the Sea . . .

Just in time for the coming season comes this Disney picnic excursion into the field of fun and summer sport. Donald and Pluto are bedeviled with the customary collection of holiday miseries, a frolicksome surf, an inflated rubber horse, a horde of ants and a wad of fly paper, but when they concern Donald and Pluto they become different. The misadventure of Pluto with the sport horse is one of the funniest bits of nonsense found in any cartoon. The descent of the military formations of hungry ants in the guise of marauding redskins is delightful, also a final section wherein Donald is mummified in the bindings of fly paper. The color matches the gay spirit.—Running time, eight minutes.

IATSE Sets Up Five New Studio Unions to Supplant Technicians' Local 37; Capra Again Heads Directors

Hollywood's labor situation which for months has involved one or another of the talent or craft unions or guilds, continued changing this week leading to an absolute break between Studio Technicians Local 37 and its parent, the IATSE. Underlining its claims to control of local affairs the IATSE issued an order for the dissolution of Local 37, officers of which it suspended March 13, and the establishment of five separate locals to take its place. The move preceded start of a trial in an injunction suit brought by Local 37 to restrain IATSE interference.

A victory for the Screen Actors Guild was registered when it was made known Monday that extra players, voting in a poll conducted by the Guild, had voted, 3,962 to 65, to remain in the Guild.

Fourteen members of the Class B Council, the governing body for atmosphere players in the Guild, were reelected in balloting which replaced the recent vote, which had been declared illegal.

Directors Ratify Studio Pact

The difficulty between the producers and directors was formally and officially ended Monday when the Screen Directors Guild membership ratified the new pact with the studios. It provides, basically, for an 80 per cent Guild shop for the duration of the nine year contracts; minimum salaries for first and second assistant directors and unit managers; consultation by producers with the directors, on the casting and editing.

As outlined in Motion Picture Herald of May 13th, directors are to be allowed time preparatory to photographing a film, ranging from two weeks for films costing over $200,000 to two days for shorts. Assistant directors are to receive a minimum salary of $125 a week; second assistants 90 cents per hour for the second year and one dollar for the third year.

At the same meeting of the Screen Directors Guild, last Sunday night, which ratified the producer-director basic studio agreement, Frank Capra was reelected president of the Guild. Other officers named were W. S. Van Dyke, first vice-president; John Cromwell, second vice-president; Frank Tuttle, secretary, and Phil Rosen, treasurer.

Elected to the board of directors were John Ford, William K. Howard, Gregory LaCava, Rowland V. Lee, Frank Lloyd, Rouben Mamoulian, Lewis Milestone, Leo McCarey, King Vidor, William Wellman and William Wyler. David Friedman, recently named president of the Unit Managers Guild, addressed the directors, informing them that his Guild had ratified the pact with producers.

New Unions Set Up

The break in the ranks of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes and its Studio Technicians Local 37 was made complete Monday when the Alliance International dissolved Local 37, creating five new organizations to replace it. The newly chartered groups are: Motion Picture Studio Grips Local 80, Motion Picture Prop and Special Effects Men Local 44, Motion Picture Studio Laborers and Utility Workers Local 727, Motion Picture Studio Chief Electricians, Floormen and Lamp Operators Local 72 and Motion Picture Studio Projectionists Local 165.

MEDIATION BOARD URGED BY LEISERSON

Dr. William M. Leiserson, chairman of the National Mediation Board, this week urged the setting up of mediation machinery paralleling that created to handle disputes involving railways, air transportation and maritime industries, presumably including the motion picture industry.

The machinery would be set up on a nation wide basis in order to seek settlements of many disputes which cannot be adequately handled by the United States Conciliation Service as organized at present, according to Dr. Leiserson.

J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Central Labor Council, said that the move was to combat radicalism and Congress of Industrial Organizations leanings of Local 37 members. All members of Local 37 will be asked to take out cards in the new groups.

A. Brigham Rose, attorney for the autonomy group of Local 37, said that he would ask that Mr. Buzzell be charged with contempt of court.

Local 37 Suit Begins

Testimony concerning the political structure and policies of the IATSE was heard in Superior Court in Los Angeles as trial of a suit by deposed officers of Studio Technicians, Local 37, over control of the local began before Judge Henry Willis. Joseph Carpenter, Local president, who was ousted by the IATSE, and other officers seek an injunction to restrain John Gatelee and Frank Strickling, IATSE representatives, from interfering in the affairs of the Local. The action is regarded as an unprecedented test of the International's control over local affiliated unions.

Evidence purporting to show that the tenure of George Browne, president of the International, was extended by a convention composed of "handpicked delegates" in 1936 was introduced by Stephen Newman, former aide to Mr. Browne.

A. Brigham Rose, attorney for the Local 37 officers, said in his opening statement that the International officers wanted to maintain "a continual state of emergency" and have engaged in "a conspiracy of treachery against rank and file membership." George M. Breslin, chief counsel for the IATSE, contended Mr. Browne and the IATSE officers had followed the International constitution and by-laws scrupulously.

The intramural war became more acute last week when Jeff Kibre, deposed minority leader of Local 37, and his wife filed a $250,000 damage suit in Superior Court against Mr. Gatelee, Mr. Smith, Mr. Strickling, Mr. Blix and Detective Lieutenant Leroy Sanderson. Mr. Kibre charges that the above named group conspired to have him arrested on charges of criminal syndicalism, and alleges that a complaint on that score was never issued.

The Police Board of Inquiry which investigated Sanderson's inquiry recommended that a reprimand be given the officer for "failure to observe neutrality" in the union fight.

The Bookeepers, Stenographers and Accountants Union this week filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board against three Warner Brothers subsidiaries, First National, Vitagraph and Globe Export, in connection with the strike at the Warner warehouse in New York. The complaint charges unfair labor practices in discharging two employees for union activity.

According to the results of a poll released by Francis M. Curran, Masachusetts state labor relations commissioner, which he termed inconclusive, however, the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union appears to have lost its effort to be named official bargaining agent for employees of the 17 theatres of Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc.

There were 31 ballots cast. Of the 24 which were not protested, 14 were against the union and 10 in its favor. Of the seven questioned ballots, five were protested by the union on grounds that the men were supervisory employees and two were protested by the corporation on grounds that the men were not now employees.

The strike by the TMAT union at three Bronx, New York, houses of the Moe Rosenberg circuit, has been settled, it was announced this week.

E. M. Loew's theatre, Hartford, Conn., has been notified that union picketing by IATSE and Motion Picture Operators would be resumed unless the management would meet with AFL units for a bargaining conference. The union is the victor in a legal battle which started last year when the theatre owners obtained an anti-picketing injunction in superior court. The supreme court of the state has now reversed this decision.

Film Exchange Employees, Local B-5, Cleveland, will hold its annual benefit dance June 2nd at Moose Hall there. Charles Rice, Twentieth Century-Fox shipper, is chairman of the entertainment committee. Pearl Geib of the Warners Cleveland office has been named the local's representative to the IATSE district convention to be held at the Mayflower Hotel in Akron, June 4-6.

$75 Minimum Urged for All Actors by Equity

Issue of a $75 weekly minimum for actors on the legitimate stage was revived by Actors' Equity this week. The council elected a committee of eight, headed by E. J. Blunkall, to study the question and report. The present minimum is $40 but the existing one-year contract expires in August.

Heretofore Equity has refrained from fixing minimums at too high a scale because it was feared that it might affect employment. Lately however Equity has changed its stand and is insisting that other unions make the concessions. When the question of Sunday shows was broached last month, Equity insisted that all other unions consent before a referendum of Equity membership was started. When the stagehands balked, Equity refused to go ahead.

The 26th annual meeting of the council will be held Friday at the Hotel Astor in New York. The order of business will include the election of one officer to serve one year, of 10 Councillors to serve five years plus three replacements.

The Regular Ticket, against which no independent nominations have been made, consists of Burgess Meredith, for third vice-president, to serve until 1940; Councillors, Augustin Duncan, Philip Loeb, John Lorenz, Dudley Digges, Hiram Sherman, Murial Kirkland, Harold Vermilyea, Jack Whiting and Mervin Williams; Replacements, to serve until 1940, George Heller and Thomas Chalmers; to serve until 1941, John Alexander.

NEW TAXES UNITE BRITISH INDUSTRY IN WARNING THEY IMPERIL EXISTENCE

Exhibitors Fear They'll Suffer Most; Cannot Pass Tax to The Public; Newsreels Hoping for Concessions

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Though keener critics suggest that a little time may have been lost, no energy was spared by the British industry in convincing Sir John Simon that his budget taxes were regarded with complete opposition from all sections. Just three weeks after the duties had been introduced into the Commons, a united trade deputation, representative of every section of the industry's many activities, met the chancellor and explained to him how every group would be hit by his new taxes, how many of them would be forced out of existence.

Sectionalism Waived

The trade attitude, in spite of many difficulties and in the face of many conflicting viewpoints and departmental interests, has been united. Under the leadership of David E. Griffiths, chief of the Kinematograph Renters Society, every trade section has been brought together and persuaded to sink its sectionalism in order to present a common front.

No sooner had Mr. Griffiths been reelected for the fourth successive year as president of the KRS than he called a joint trade conference with representatives from every trade group and used much discretion and skill in moulding the divergent interests into a solid defense.

Committee Formed

A committee was established to draw up a detailed memorandum exposing the destructive nature of the duties and a fuller committee appointed to ask the chancellor to receive them as a deputation. Though the drafting committee first sat on the 12th of May, it decided not to meet again until the 19th. In the interim Sir John sprang a surprise by offering to receive a trade deputation on the 18th. The parliamentary whip cracked and the drafting committee leaped into new life, functioning on the 17th. The chronology of events strengthened those critics who contended the pace of action had been more dilatory than the urgent situation justified.

Not least enthusiastic in support of the trade deputation, ready to sink domestic interests, even to waive minute rules of constitutional conduct, were British exhibitors. They have come to an intensifying conviction that they will not be the least sufferers from these new duties, and probably the worst. Mr. Griffiths, in his presidential speech at the annual KRS meeting, had emphasized the inability of the industry to pass on the tax to the public, forcefully forecast that the retention of the excise duties would intensify the product shortage. Not only, he said, would it curtail the importation of second features, the mainstay of many exhibitors, but likewise shorts.

The revenue to be derived from these films did not permit of an additional burden, and there was a danger that both categories would be eliminated. There would even be a drastic effect on British production.

Already the budget duties are scheduled for discussion at the Annual Conference at Blackpool in June. Local branches have insisted upon it. It is clear from debates in the areas that exhibitors realize the dangers of elimination of certain classes of films, namely Westerns and smaller "B" films. More than one exhibitor has said that he would have to close down. They know that the tax cannot be passed on to the public, which, it is suggested, Sir John Simon and his young men from Balliol had not realized. The exhibitor, thinks the exhibitor, will be the one who pays.

> "I do appreciate the very great help that your paper has given not only my own pictures, but also those of every other British Producer. If British Films are today regarded in America with more goodwill than they were a year or so ago, this is entirely due to the kindness and help extended to the British Film Industry by your paper." — From a letter from Alexander Korda to Aubrey Flanagan, London editorial representative, MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Though here and there a nervous voice has been raised against the supposed dangers of association with the KRS in the tax battle, the long view taken by exhibitors is in direct contrast to the nervousness displayed by, for instance, certain representatives of the newsreels, who not only seem convinced that they will get a concession but are believed to have been afraid that associating themselves with united trade policy might endanger their sectional interests.

The triumph of Mr. Griffiths, whose unselfish and zealous work in regard to the duties had been the occasion of universal respect, and whose hand has been greatly assisted by the forceful lieutenantship of Sam Eckman, is the more apparent when stock is taken of the stubborn stand taken by certain organizations.

Labour Represented

It is notorious that certain sections were more concerned at the import duty than the excise duty. A leading producer frankly admitted that he would sooner see a 33⅓% on foreign negatives than a cut in the import tax. Shorts producers, already split into two organizations, were slow in coming to the mark. The substandard partisans claim to be worst hit of all, seeing an increased cost to them of as much as 400 per cent. It remained for a representative of the news theatres to propose what everybody else had forgotten, the inclusion in the drafting committee of representatives of labour.

The Front, however, is now emphatically united against the Simon duties, every trade section has sunk its own interests in the cause of the commonweal, convinced that the welfare of the entire trade is the welfare of each and every section.

The representative nature of the Griffiths committee is seen in a listing of its constituents. These are:

Associated Realist Film Producers: Paul Rotha, E. Anstey.
A.C.T.: G. Elvin.
Color: Kay Harrison, Sir Adrian Baillie, Major Klein.
National News Theatre Association: Jack Davis, C. W. Fennell.

Cinematograph Renters Society: E. Hinge, H. Mears, A. Jarratt, W. R. Fuller.
Kinematograph Renters Society: D. E. Griffiths, S. Eckman, Jr., F. W. Baker.
Film Employers: George Smith, Neville Kearney.
Laboratories: E. Roy, F. Ditcham.
Specialist Theatres: Marquis de Casa Maury.

Additional warmth was placed under the issue when E. J. Hinge, president of the London and Home Counties Branch of the CEA, declared he had evidence that exhibitors already were being asked higher film rentals because of the increased film taxes. Major A. J. Gale, CEA treasurer, protested that the distributors should bear the financial burden of the tax increases.

Sight has not been lost of the ironically significant fact that the chemists, first to benefit by the repeal of the medicine duties, to balance which Sir John Simon told the Commons he had imposed the new film duties, are opposed to the lifting of their tax. The Pharmaceutical Society, representative of over 24,000 British chemists, have told him so.

Palmer Named Manager

Mervin W. Palmer has been appointed service manager of the New York branch of Bell and Howell Company of Chicago. Mr. Palmer was connected with the old Biograph Studio in New York from 1912 to 1920. For the next two years he was chief engineer for the Paramount Studio at Astoria, Long Island. His more recent connections have been with Motion Picture Lighting and Equipment Corporation and International Projector Corporation.

King and Queen Push "Scotland Yard" Aside to Let U. S. Newsreels "Shoot"

Scotland Yard police from London guarding King George VI and his Queen Elizabeth on their visit to Canada are virtually being pushed aside by the King and Queen to allow American newsreel cameramen to cross established lines and film the royal pair freely at close range.

Expecting rigid enforcement by the Scotland Yard men of severe regulations, including the prohibiting of filming within 25 feet of the King's own party, the 15 sound, camera and contact men in Canada from New York on the assignment were astonished to find that the King and Queen themselves stepped over the police precautions to allow the newsreelers ample opportunity to shoot to their hearts' content, even stopping in their tracks, at formal functions, garden parties, state receptions and the like until the cameramen got all the footage they desired.

Leave Royal Party at Toronto

Word of the democratic cooperation extended to the newsreelers was brought back to New York Tuesday morning by Merle Johnson, contact man for Paramount News, who, acting in the same capacity for all five newsreels in a film-pooling arrangement in which all participated, headed the combined crew of 15 on the scene.

The U. S. crews left the royal party at Toronto, where Associated Screen News of Canada picked up coverage for the American companies on the tour continuing to western Canada, supplying each U. S. reel with duplicate footage as it is taken.

The U. S. companies will not pick up the party again until it reaches Washington, where elaborate preparations have been in the making for weeks, in arrangement with the U. S. State Department, for filming the first visit ever to be made to the U. S. of British monarchs.

By arrangement among the companies, no special editions of the reels are being sent out, theatres getting the film story in the regular twice weekly issues, negative shipments being made from Canada to New York laboratories by airplane. Distant points in this country, however, are getting their prints by plane.

No Picture Taking on Line of March

Word from Washington has it that the U. S. cameramen covering the arrival and reception of King and Queen there might not have as much freedom as they enjoyed in Canada.

In order not to "jar" military appearances, both newsreel and broadcasting men riding along Pennsylvania Avenue with the party were originally assigned by the Army and State departments to become a part of the Army parade, dressed in Army uniforms, in two scout cars. Now, however, Washington hears, that plan is out, and no broadcasting or picture taking along the line of march will be permitted.

The White House reception, it appears, will be even more difficult for radio and newsreelers. A space in the south yard of the grounds has been set aside for both, but it is quite far removed from the main scene. It is said that newsreel officials are going to present their case to Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, in the hope that he will intercede in behalf of better positions.

The U. S. Wages and Hours Act applies to all United States newspaper reporters and cameramen covering the visit of the King and Queen to Canada, according to Administrator Andrews in Washington.

U. S. Newsreels managements this week are studying the trans-Atlantic plane service inaugurated last Saturday by Pan American Airways as a possible means of shipping newsreel prints to Europe, saving four days.

New York Fund Ahead of 1938

Cash contributions and pledges received by the Motion Picture Division of the Greater New York Fund, in the campaign under way, total 15 per cent more than the amount received last year. Last year's contributions were about $63,000.

This year's quota is $100,000, and the committee, of which J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer general counsel, is chairman, is intensifying its efforts for the remainder of the campaign, which ends May 31st.

Mr. Rubin addressing the group chairmen at a meeting in his office this week said that while generous donations have been received, the division is determined to reach its quota. Many of the large contributors are increasing their original donations, he said.

In the remainder of the campaign, an effort will be made to obtain increased participation in the Fund by independent circuits and individual exhibitors.

The group chairmen at the meeting were Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, in charge of distributing companies; Ben S. Moss, exhibitors, and Ralph I. Poucher, Consolidated Film Industries, representing H. J. Yates, in charge of laboratories. The fourth member is Herman Robbins, National Screen Service, for the allied and accessories group.

Loew's, Inc., and the Columbia Broadcasting System each have contributed $10,000 to the Fund. National Screen has given $1,500, and Consolidated Amusements, $250.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Music School

(UA-Goldwyn)

Personal Melodrama

Many screen stories have adapted devious devices, all keyed to public emotions, to illustrate how human wreckage is salvaged. In "Music School," Samuel Goldwyn has chosen music as the stimulus, music and the influence of a great musician's personality and genius. Jascha Heifetz, the musician, inspires the boy hero, Gene Reynolds, and those associated with him in the action, to vision a happier life than is ordinarily the lot of those who live in squalid, discouraging environment.

The cards are stacked against a young East Side dead-ender, a potential criminal who loves music. They appear to be stacked against the mentor of a threadbare music school. Disaster seems to be the inevitable fate of the boy, the teacher and the school, until the great musician takes a hand.

With the prestige of Jascha Heifetz to lure those who only sometimes attend theatres, the name cast will feature a number of persons who are magnets any time they are billed.. Among them are Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Andrea Leeds, Reynolds and such other juvenile artists as Terry Kilburn, Walter Tetley and Tommy Kelly, Porter Hall, Alfred Newman, John St. Polis, Marjorie Main and Arthur Hohl. Additionally the production will feature the Peter Meremblum California Junior Symphony Orchestra.

The story basis is an original by Imgard von Cube which John Howard Lawson, who specializes in realistic screen writing, adapted. Direction is in charge of Archie Mayo, whose realistic pictures include "Black Legion," "Petrified Forest," "Mayor of Hell" and "Two Against the World."

Release date: To be determined.

News is Made at Night

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Newspaper Melodrama

Not in story idea, production detail or personalities does it appear that "News is Made at Night" will introduce anything unique, but tried and true melodramatic standbys are depended upon to provide entertainment and none of the players is a stranger.

It will concern an editor who, with the bungling aid of a girl reporter, unmasks a supposedly respectable business man, but actually an ex-convict and master criminal who is bleeding a community white. Naturally there will be love interest, comedy, mystery, murders here and there, and other elements that build suspense to a surprise denouement.

For names the production will have Preston Foster, recently in "Submarine Patrol," "Chasing Danger" and "Up the River" for this studio, and Lynn Bari, last in "Return of the Cisco Kid." The featured support lists Russell Gleason, George Barbier, Eddie Collins, Minor Watson, Charles Halton, Paul Harvey, Richard Lane, Charles Lane, Betty Compson, Paul Fix and Paul Guilfoyle.

Alfred Werker, maker of "It Could Happen to You," is directing.

Release date: July 29, 1939.

Good Girls Go to Paris

(Columbia)

Comedy-Romance

It is about as easy to describe the full entertainment and exploitation potentialities of "Good Girls Go to Paris" as it is to picture all the thrilling plays of a baseball game by reading the box score. It just can't be done. In terse digests it's about as follows:

To begin with, the title is one that permits exhibitors to do things in trickery. Then there's a pair of actors, Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondel, who many times have demonstrated they know what to do with the ball when they get it, and who were a smooth-working team in "There's Always a Woman." With them will be the capable portrayer of irascible character parts, Walter Connolly, and feature support which includes Alan Curtis, Joan Perry, Isabel Jeans, Stanley Brown, Alexander D'Arcy, Henry Hunter, Clarence Kolb and Howard Hickman. Other items of consequence are the facts that Lenore Coffee and William Joyce Cowan wrote the original story which Gladys Lehman and Ken Englund adapted. Directing is Alexander Hall, whose "There's Always a Woman" and its sequel, "Yours for the Asking," also "Give Us This Night" and "Pursuit of Happiness" attest his ability.

In the story, an Oxford exchange professor, at a midwest college campus where he is trying to study young femininity, runs into a waitress who is a golddigger at heart. He tells her that in England girls practicing that art go to jail if caught. She informs him that American girls who succeed at it go to Paris. Thereupon the fun begins. It runs through a series of escapes that involve the golddigger.

Release date: June 30, 1939.

Parents on Trial

(Columbia)

Romance-Melodrama

How two young folks find the way to happiness despite the selfishness and narrow-mindedness of their parents will be described in "Parents on Trial." Human interest is the quality emphasized in production. In addition the fact that the story is based on a radio broadcast serial should prove a helpful adjunct.

All the obstacles placed in the paths of the young couple serve only to drive them to clandestine meetings which eventuate in an elopement. Parents force an annulment of the marriage and the boy, desperately trying to see the girl, is sentenced to reform school for housebreaking. He escapes and rejoins the girl. Following a series of tumultuous events, they are recaptured. A woman friend interests herself in the youngsters' plight. Appearing as defense counsel, she paints such a picture of bigotry that the judge scolds and advises the parents, leading to their regeneration and happiness for the young couple.

Jean Parker and Johnny Downs will be seen in the roles of the young sweethearts, Virginia Brissac and Henry Kolker as the parents. Other principals are Noah Berry, Jr., Nana Bryant and Linda Terry.

Release date: June 22, 1939.

Mutiny on the Blackhawk

(Universal)

Sea Melodrama

It is a matter of record that stories of adventure at sea exert a strong appeal upon the imaginations of audiences and inspire showmen to unusual exploitation. "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" is a sea adventure story, supplemented by another and stirring one of adventure on land.

The time is about 1840, the locales the Hawaiian Islands, California and the ocean between. An undercover government officer, investigating slave running between the islands and the coast, becomes a victim of the vicious brutality of the ruthless captain and crew, then leads a mutiny that saves the lives of scores of Kanaka slaves.

The picture, which has a semi-historical background, is the first of a series which will feature Richard Arlen and Andy Devine. For supporting cast it will offer Constance Moore, now in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," Noah Beery, Guinn Williams, Thurston Hall, Mala and Mamo Clerk and Sandra Kane. The basis is a screen story written by Michael L. Simmons, whose credits include many melodramatic yarns. It is being directed by Christy Cabanne, who, during his twenty-five year Hollywood career, has accounted for such successes as "Annapolis Salute," several Gene Stratton Porter stories, "Storm Over the Andes" and "Jane Eyre."

Release date: To be determined.

Winter Carnival

(UA-Wanger)

Sport and Romance

That "Winter Carnival" will tell a love story, several of them in fact—one a real serious affair, the others college boy-visiting coed flirtations—is to be expected. The real reason, however, for "Winter Carnival," in fact its principal exploitation instrument and unique entertainment feature, will be the picturization of the actual competitive events and social festivities that are the heart and soul of the midwinter carnival at Dartmouth, famous New Hampshire college. Still a leading athletic meeting of its kind, it has been widely publicized and is a source, annually, of great popular interest. All the background shots were made at the 1939 carnival, with the cooperation of the school.

Authenticity is attested by the fact that the producer, Walter Wanger, the story writer, Budd Schulberg, and the composer and conductor of the musical score, Werner Janssen, are all Dartmouth alumni who during their student days were participants in just such fetes as the production will treat.

For name values, the cast will feature a group of players all of whom, with one exception, are within the average college boy-girl ages. Personalities who will be available are Ann Sheridan, the Warner Brothers "Oomphh Girl," Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish of "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Robert Armstrong, James Corner, Alan Baldwin, Joan Brodel, Virginia Gilmore, Robert Allen, Marsha Hunt, Morton Lowry and Jimmy Butler.

Charles F. Riesner is the director.

Release date: To be determined.

FIRST FEDERAL CENSORSHIP BORN WITH FCC RULE ON BROADCASTING

Commission Makes Licenses Subject to Its Decision on Required Qualities of International Program Material

While David Sarnoff of the Radio Corporation of America was early in the week expressing the fear that censorship would be an inevitable sequel to Government regulation of radio programs, something substantially identical with censorship arrived—explicitly and directly.

It came with new rules issued Tuesday by the Federal Communications Commission, effective immediately, stating that licenses of international broadcast stations "shall render only an international broadcast service which will reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international goodwill, understanding and cooperation."

Apparently the FCC is to decide about the required qualities of the international broadcast material.

This is the first direct governmental censorship of a medium of expression and news dissemination in the history of the United States.

The development came also in almost the same breath with expressions of anticipations and alarm from the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, of the Civil Liberties Union.

Favors Industry Code

Mr. Sarnoff in Washington told the monopoly committee of the FCC that he believed censorship inevitably would follow any attempt at governmental regulation of radio programs. He believed, he said, that a code voluntarily adopted by the industry would not only protect the industry and the public but save this country from un-American influences and practices.

The Council urged that two matters touching on freedom of the air should be left to Congress. One is to relieve stations of liability for slander in programs concerning public issues on sustaining time, the other is the provision in the Communications Act concerning obscene, indecent and profane language, "the use of which may be the occasion for refusing the renewal of a license or for revoking it."

The Council also calls attention to the policy of the networks in refusing to sell time for non-commercial programs. "This policy results in an unfair handling of public issues, for commercial sponsors have used the time they buy for the discussion of controversial issues which cannot be presented by the other side unless it too has goods or public services to sell." The problem, suggest the council, may be left to regulation by the industry.

Asks Longer Licenses

In connection with the granting of license renewals, the council contends that radio is inevitably under an indirect form of censorship and control by the FCC through its interpretation of the phrase, "public interest, convenience and necessity." The council asks that the six-month license term be extended.

Having finished its anti-monopoly hearings which began November 14, 1938, the FCC is now studying more than 15,000 pages of testimony and 700 exhibits. It is predicted that the committee, in view of the exceptionally heavy record to be digested, will not be able to make a report to the full commission before September at the earliest.

Included in the record are opinions of network officials, broadcasters, transcription companies and representatives of labor and other organizations interested in broadcasting.

Mr. Sarnoff said that radio was developing at such a rate that in five years the work of today would be virtually forgotten. This in itself, he said, would make legislation affecting programs obsolete and a hindrance.

For 13 years, Mr. Sarnoff said, there had been no "vicious interference" on the part of government. In those 13 years American broadcasting had become the best in the world. This, he said, was proof that no censorship or regulation was necessary.

Particularly, Mr. Sarnoff said, should broadcasters be given the protection due them in the freedom of speech and press guaranties of the Constitution. Any dictation of what could or could not be broadcast, or who could or could not be broadcast, or who could or could not speak on the radio, would be a violation of these guaranties.

The FCC has set June 1st as the date for hearing of arguments upon exceptions to the proposed new rules governing regular broadcast stations and standards of engineering practice. The new rules were drafted by Commissioners Norman S. Case, Commander T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne.

FCC Copyright Control Bill

A bill granting the FCC full authority over the licensing of copyrighted works has been introduced in the House of Representatives and referred to the committee on patents.

The bill proposes that where a copyright holder refuses to grant permission for the performance or printing of his work, the FCC may grant such license and fix the royalties without the consent of the author or dramatists. The FCC would first determine if such licensing is in the public interest and then hold hearings to determine what price to fix. The bill does not limit the commission's jurisdiction to radio, and it would affect all fields using copyrights, including films.

Gregg Gets Probation in Chicago Copyright Action

R. E. Gregg, operator of Pan-American Film Laboratories, who pleaded guilty in federal court in Chicago last week to violation of the copyright law by making unauthorized prints of films, has been placed on probation for six months by the court.

At the same time, the court formally dismissed a conspiracy count against Mr. Gregg and Barney Gold, an associate, but granted the Government permission to reinstate it later if found desirable. The Copyright Protection Bureau succeeded in tracing the unauthorized prints to Mr. Gregg.

"Lincoln" Premiere Tuesday

Newspaper writers and editors of the trade press leave New York Monday on the Twentieth Century-Fox Special to Springfield, Ill., for the opening there Tuesday of "Young Mr. Lincoln." Alice Brady, Arleen Whelan, Binnie Barnes, Eddie Collins and Cesar Romero will head a contingent of Hollywood stars. There will also be a coast to coast broadcast:

Owner Insists on Filming 'Ecstasy,' Gets a Jail Term

"Ecstasy," the Czechoslovakian "sex" film banned in various cities throughout the country, is the reason why J. H. Carter, of the Brookhaven theatre in suburban Atlanta, has a ten day jail sentence and must pay a $200 fine for contempt of court.

The film had been banned in the Georgian capital and James Davis, city judge, had refused screening permission to Mr. Carter.

Mr. Carter was charged with placing in front of his theatre a large sign reading: "Due to selfish and contemptible interests, we have been temporarily restrained from showing 'Ecstasy.' Will show pending court order."

Judge Davis ordered the arrest of the exhibitor, and sentenced him.

Hold Decision on "Birth"

Justices of the appellate division of New York State withheld decision Thursday on the appeal taken by Sam Citron and the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., from the state censors' ban on "The Birth of a Baby." The film has been the subject of controversy in the state for months.

The action of a circuit court in Virginia in overriding that state's censorship prohibition of the film was cited by counsel for the respondents.

New York Bans "Conflict"

Transatlantic Films, of New York, sent notice to the press on Monday that the state censor board had refused a license for its "Conflict," described by Transatlantic as a "French picture . . . about a girl mother," and added that "the New York censors have dubbed it 'immoral, tending to corrupt morals and tending to incite to crime'."

Transatlantic will appeal the ban.

Canadian and Chicago Reports

Police Lieutenant Harry M. Costello, chief of Chicago's Municipal Film Censor Board, reported this week that the board in the first four months of 1939 had rejected three features and ordered 99 eliminations, half of the six rejections and 182 eliminations having been ordered in the same four months of 1938.

Ontario's Board of Moving Picture Censors rejected only two features in its fiscal year ended March 31st. It ordered eliminations in 380 of 2,681 subjects reviewed.

O. J. Silverthorne, board chairman, said that one of the two banned features was a Russian picture, while several European pictures were subjected to considerable alteration before receiving approval, two of these being from Poland and two from Germany.

Governor Arthur H. James in Pennsylvania this week named John Clyde Fisher, of Sharon, to the state board of censorship. The appointment is now before the Senate for confirmation.

Mr. Fisher has for years been operating and managing theatres in the state.

THE LINE-UP FOR 1939-40!

—Leo, Jr. Your Friendly Short Subject

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Even Stephen

When Hollywood got through shaking the production dice this mid-May week, it found that it had broken exactly even—eight pictures started, eight finished. There are a few unusual items in both the old and the new.

RKO-Radio began work on two films. One, "Nurse Edith Cavell," is a partial biography with a wartime background. It will feature the noted English actress, Anna Neagle, in the title role, with Edna May Oliver, May Robson, Zasu Pitts, H. B. Warner, George Sanders, William Haade, Frank Reicher, Robert Coote, Halliwell Hobbes and Gustav von Seyffertitz. The second picture, "Bad Lands," will present Noah Beery, Jr., Robert Barrat, Douglas Walton, Andy Clyde, Guinn Williams, Frances Ford, Paul Hurst and Francis MacDonald in a men-without-women adventure yarn.

Columbia also started a pair of pictures. The topline players in "Escape from Alcatraz" are Brian Donlevy, Jacqueline Wells, Richard Fiske and Paul Fix. Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Sims, along with Donald MacBride, started in "Blondie Takes a Vacation."

The featured players in the new picture at 20th Century-Fox are Jean Rogers, Robert Kellard and William Frawley.

Three More Started

"Are Husbands Necessary" went before the cameras at Paramount. It will feature Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, with Helen Broderick Carolyn Lee and Allan Jones.

Universal started "Bright Victory." Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew again are teamed in the leads, and Melville Cooper, Dorothy Peterson and J. M. Kerrigan also will be seen.

With Joel McCrea, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh, Nana Bryant and Lionel Royce heading the cast, Warners began "Career Man."

RKO-Radio Completes Three

Three of the completed pictures are credited to RKO-Radio. "Career" is unique inasmuch as it will feature the winners of the "Gateway to Hollywood" radio talent quest, John Archer and Alice Eden. Established screen names in the cast are Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, Samuel S. Hinds, Maurice Murphy, Janet Beecher, Harrison Green, Leon Errol, Raymond Hatton, John Qualen and Charles Drake. The second picture, "Way Down South," a Sol Lesser production, stars Bob Breen with Alan Mowbray, Clarence Muse, Ralph Morgan, Steffi Duna, Edwin Maxwell, Stymie Beard, Sally Blane, Robert Greig, Charles Middleton, Lillian Yarbo and the Hall Johnson Choir. George O'Brien is the star of "Timber Stampede," which also will offer Chill Wills, Marjorie Reynolds, Morgan Wallace, Robert Fiske, Guy Usher, Earl Dwire and Frank Hagney.

FUTTER TO REVISE OLD SWANSON FILM

Walter Futter, independent producer, has purchased the negative and scenario of "Queen Kelly", Gloria Swanson film made at the time sound was introduced to the screen but never released. Mr. Futter plans to revise the story and use as much of the original footage as possible. Miss Swanson will not appear in the rewritten version, he said. Mr. Futter indicated that the new plot will deal with anti-democratic spy activities centered in a mythical Balkan kingdom.

The original film, made by Gloria Swanson Productions, from which organization Mr. Futter acquired it at a reported price of $10,000, was written and directed by Erich von Stroheim and produced by Joseph P. Kennedy, now United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's. It is estimated that more than $800,000 was spent on the picture but United Artists, the distributing company, rejected the production and it was shelved.

Although Mr. Futter is associated with Leslie Howard in a production enterprise for release through RKO Radio, he said that the "Queen Kelly" project is an independent deal in which Mr. Howard and RKO are not involved.

For Grand National distribution, Arcadia Productions completed "Miracle of Main Street." Margo, Walter Abel and Wynne Gibson head the cast, which includes Veda Ann Borg, Lyle Talbot, Jane Darwell, William Collier, Sr., Dorothy Devore, Willie Best and Luis Alberni.

"Charlie Chan at Treasure Island" was completed by 20th Century-Fox. In the action are Sidney Toler, Sen Yung, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore, Douglas Fowley, Sally Blane, June Gale, Billie Seward, Wally Vernon, Douglas Dumbrille and Joyce Compton.

Republic wound up "In Old Caliente." It will present Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, George Hayes, Katherine DeMille, Jack LaRue and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Columbia's completed picture is "Parents on Trial." It will feature Jean Parker and Johnny Downs with Noah Beery, Jr., Nana Bryant, Henry Kolker, Linda Terry and Virginia Brissac.

The last production completed, Warners' "Not Wanted," will present Fred Stone, Gloria Dickson, Dennis Morgan, Bernice Pilot, Sonny Bupp and Greta Meyer.

Six In June

A record for summer production at Paramount will be attained during June. Six pictures are definitely slated to start shooting in the month of brides and roses. First to go will be "$1,000 Touchdown," a football story which promises to be unique if considered only from the viewpoint that it will star Martha Raye and Joe E. Brown, the area of whose mouths has been a subject of considerable discussion. Shortly thereafter comes "Dr. Cyclops," about which there has been fully as much mystery stirred up as Warner Bros. managed to concoct for "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." It will feature Albert Dekker and Janice Logan, with Ernest Shoedsack, whose record includes a long list of unusual productions, directing. The third picture, "Madame Mystery," will feature Isa Miranda, George Fitzmaurice, the director.

On June 15th "The Light That Failed," a Rudyard Kipling story, starring Ronald Colman and Ida Lupino. Meanwhile Charles R. Rogers will have begun "Our Neighbors—the Carters," in which Fay Bainter will be featured. Booth Tarkington's classic story of puppy love, "Seventeen," in which Jackie Cooper and Betty Field will be the leads, starts on the 20th.

Before Memorial Day, Paramount is starting three other films. Lynn Overman, Janice Logan, Joseph Allen and Donald O'Connor have been assigned roles in "Dog Show Murder." No cast has been chosen for "The World on Parade," but it will definitely start, as will a third J. Edgar Hoover story, in which Lloyd Nolan and William Henry will be featured.

Ice Rhumba

Three weeks of rehearsal for an ice skating number of record cost have been completed at 20th Century-Fox. The number is a rhumba on skates, with lavish trimmings, for Sonja Henie in "Second Fiddle." The cost of the sequence is estimated at $150,000.

Fine Arts Plan

Fine Arts Pictures will make a series of six productions in color. The first feature will be "Trouble over the Pacific," an action adventure yarn, based on a story by Vaughn Ellston, in which the principals will be William Gargan, Wallace Ford, Karen Morley, Katherine DeMille and Etienne Girardot. Budgeted at $150,000, by far the most ambitious undertaking Fine Arts has attempted, the picture is scheduled to go before the cameras within 10 days.

Fine Arts attorneys and legal representatives of Grand National are now working on completion of refinancing and reorganization plans for GN.

Clearing House For U.S. Films and Radio July 1

With the attempted control of U. S. Government motion picture and radio activities transferred from the New Deal and soon-to-be-defunct National Emergency Counsel, to the newly-created Federal Security Agency, which is to be part of the permanent Federal establishment, determined efforts to rationalize the picture and radio activities of the various branches of the Government are to be initiated, Washington hears.

Under a resolution adopted by Congress, the reorganization plans of President Roosevelt, under which the film and radio activities are switched from the NEC to the Office of Education when the latter is taken from the Interior Department for the new security group, the changes will become effective July 1st, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Intended to act as a clearing house for all Government film and radio operations, the two sections in the NEC have proved unable to break down the determination of the heads of the various governmental agencies and departments to retain control of these highly valuable publicity media.

President Roosevelt, however, is represented as anxious that there be some regularization of these services and elimination of the keen competition between various agencies for air time, particularly, and to slightly less extent for theatre time, as well as the savings that can be accomplished by having all such work as the preparation of films and scripts handled in a single office.

For years, the Office of Education has sought to take the lead in the Government's motion picture and radio activities, but without success. Exhibitors and broadcasters know only too well the demands for space which have been made upon them by dozens of agencies since the advent of the New Deal.

Open defiance of any attempts to centralize these activities is expected to be offered by the many "independent" New Deal agencies.

Also opposed will be the Department of Agriculture, which by years of effort has built up a film service of real value to farmers—and largely confined to them—and a radio program which is successful in its own right. The Interior Department, which has made tentative efforts to "sell" the Virgin Islands, the National Parks and other features under its jurisdiction, by motion pictures, and is now embarked on a lengthy series of radio shows, also will protest the turning of control of those activities over to some "outside" group.

The radio unit of the NEC, however, has met with some success in its efforts to bring Government radio-time schedules within the bounds of reason, much to the relief of broadcasters who felt it politically unwise to refuse any request for time from any Federal agency, a work which probably can be carried further under the new set-up.

Concentration of radio and film activities, especially the former, will be undertaken very gradually, it is expected, so as not to raise the cry that a propaganda bureau is being created. There are, of course, dozens of propaganda bureaus in the Government today, but they are working in competition and do not offer the opportunities of controlling public sentiment which are available in a single office.

So serious are these possibilities considered in some quarters that it is quite possible reorganization will stop short of what many in the New Deal consider the ideal set-up, not the least important feature of which would be the ability of an Administration in power to weld the whole Government service behind its campaign for retention of office.

Pooling, Neely, Code Up in Missouri; Cleveland to Seek Rental Adjustments

Exhibitor problems are occupying the attention of local organization leaders in meetings in Kansas, Missouri, Ohio, Oklahoma, Illinois, Pennsylvania, the Carolinas, and Virginia.

The two-day convention of Kansas and Missouri Theatres Association, opening Thursday morning at the Hotel President, Kansas City, has on its agenda the subject of a cooperative buying and booking combination as a means of protection against circuit "aggressions," plus discussions on the Neely anti-block selling bill, the trade practice program, state and federal anti-trust suits against the majors, "unfair" clearances, and other pending matters. Open forum discussions are expected to result in the organizations voting a stand on each.

Leading some of the discussions will be Frank Cassil, KMTA president; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president; Maurice Hoffman, of St. Joseph, prosecuting attorney, and Dr. J. G. Christy, speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives. George Weeks, of Monogram, will also speak.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association late last week appointed committees to seek from the IATSE an arrangement for eliminating one projectionist in booths now employing two, or else one man in theatres seating 800 or less, in order to help meet a reported 25 to 40 per cent drop in admission receipts. The organization also seeks whole or partial elimination of premiums and double bills, and may ask for reductions in film rentals on 1939-40 contracts.

Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied president, attended the meeting, in which Martin G. Smith, president of the Cleveland group, and P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, also participated.

Ohio ITO directors met in two special sessions called by Mr. Wood, at Columbus, and which Mr. Cole also attended to discuss pending trade problems.

Morris Loewenstein, president of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners, this week announced the speakers for his organization's annual convention to be held June 26th and 27th in Oklahoma City's Biltmore Hotel. On hand will be MPTOA President Kuykendall; Bob O'Donnell, president of Interstate Circuit, Dallas; Bessie Short, also of Interstate, and others.

The board of directors of Allied of Illinois met last Thursday in Chicago to take up current exhibition problems.

Philadelphia Allied last week met in Philadelphia to discuss the trade program and delayed new-season buying. Sixty owners attended at the Broadwood Hotel.

Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina meet in annual convention June 4th–6th at Myrtle Beach, S. C., where Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA, and H. J. Yates of Republic Pictures will speak.

MPTO of Virginia meets at Roanoke's Roanoke Hotel on June 12th.

Olson Purchases Bair Circuit

Charles M. Olson, owner of the Lyric, Indianapolis, and of the property leased by the Apollo and Rivoli there, has purchased the Bair Circuit. Also acquired in the deal is the Vogue, new neighborhood theatre operated by Carl Niesse. The operating company is to be known as the Charles M. Olson Enterprises. Seven houses will be connected thereby, the Lyric, Vogue, and the five neighborhoods owned for several years by Roy R. Blair: Ritz, Uptown, St. Clair, Oriental and Strand.

Officers of the new company are Mr. Olson, president; Jean Marks, vice-president; E. M. Olson, treasurer; Mr. Bair, secretary, and Mr. Niesse, general manager. The company plans to build three additional neighborhood houses, each seating about 2,000.

Dayton Gets "Chips"

Dayton again has been chosen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as the first city in America to show an important production simultaneous with its New York and Los Angeles premieres. "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" will open in the Ohio city at Loew's, June 1st. "Pygmalion" was similarly shown there.

Popkin and Sack in Amalgamation Deal

Harry M. Popkin, general manager of Million Dollar Productions, Inc., which makes all-Negro features, and Alfred Sack of Sack Amusement Enterprises this week in Hollywood announced an amalgamation of the companies' interests, under which Sack Amusement Enterprises will distribute the Million Dollar product. Both companies will retain their identities, and Sack will open exchanges in Los Angeles and New York. Lester J. Sack, vice-president of the Sack company, will be in charge of the New York office. John J. Jenkins, Atlanta branch manager for Popkin, will become Sack's traveling representative. Exchanges are already in operation in Dallas, Atlanta and Chicago.

At the same time, Mr. Popkin announced plans for the production of eight all-Negro pictures, one or two of which are to be historical dramas based on the lives of noted Negroes, for the 1939-'40 season. Five of the eight for the 1938-'39 season have already been made, and a sixth, "One Dark Night," will go into production shortly. Leo C. Popkin is general manager and director of the films.

COLUMBIA PICTURES

U. S. COMPANIES PONDER MANCHUKUO REENTRY

Tokyo Committee Considers Advisability of Reopening Offices; Concessions Rejected

If an investigating committee from the Tokyo offices of the American motion picture companies finds it "worthwhile," American distributors again may sell films to the 30 or more theatres in Manchukuo which play foreign product, according to Arthur G. Doyle, manager in Japan for Twentieth Century-Fox, who is in New York for a visit and expects to remain in this country until August. (Picture in Pictorial Section.)

The Manchukuan market has been closed to American companies since December, 1937, when the Government instituted its own monopoly of production, distribution and exhibition, offering terms to the American companies which they felt they could not accept. The companies closed their offices in Dairen, burned their films there, and refused to send any more to that Japanese-controlled state.

Compromises

The sending of the three-man committee is a consequence of the increasing lenience which the Japanese government and the Manchukuan government are showing toward American film interests. The government monopoly, since 1937, gradually has been turned over to the South Manchurian Railway, a subsidized company. A series of offers to the American companies came from this organization. First, it offered to allow the American companies to maintain their own offices in Manchukuo. Next it offered free rent in the monopoly's building in Hsingking. Then it also offered free vaults and "practically everything except the collection of rentals," according to Mr. Doyle.

The majors in Tokyo have refused all these offers, wanting "free reign."

The committee, which was being formed in April at the time of Mr. Doyle's departure, is expected to submit a report soon.

Mr. Doyle, who arrived in Los Angeles in May 1, had left Japan before the personnel of the committee was chosen.

Eight Per Cent of Revenue

He estimated that, before the imposition of the Manchukuan monopoly in 1937, the rentals from that country accounted for about eight per cent of the total revenue from Japan.

An important result of the present negotiations with the Manchukuan and Japanese governments is the unity with which the American major companies' representatives are acting. Mr. Doyle noted that before the Japanese government, in July, 1937, had imposed its exchange restriction, the rivalry of the large companies' staffs in Tokyo had been so sharp as to preclude cooperation.

While the American companies are appreciative of the concessions in the Japanese government's exchange policy, which began in October, 1938, with the presumed import allowance of $30,000 worth of film at one and one half cents a foot before Dec. 31, 1938, they have been allowed to import only half that amount, Mr. Doyle said, and there is no prospect, at the moment, of importation of the other half.

"When the scarcity of American films becomes apparent, I think that the finance committee will allow us to import the rest of the film," Mr. Doyle declared.

At present, about 100 American films have been imported. Under the plan formulated to ease the stringent exchange restrictions that obtained for about 14 months, the receipts from the $30,000 worth of film were to be deposited in the Yokohama Specie Bank, and withdrawn at the end of three years, with no interest.

"We've been pretty well treated. We're very satisfied. We think it's the most generous thing they could have done for us, in their present circumstances."

Film Delegation to Spain, Lange Says

Fred Lange, general foreign representative of Paramount Pictures in Continental Europe, said in New York this week that a three man delegation soon would begin talks with the Spanish government's motion picture department, in an endeavor to resume normal film distribution.

That the Italian government might send a mission to the United States shortly, to discuss methods of inducing American film companies to return to distribution in Italy, was the belief expressed by Mr. Lange. He said there had been no confirmation by the Italian government.

At the New York office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America it was said that there was no "official" knowledge of such a mission.

Notarius Arrives at Paramount Studio

Louis Notarius, associated with Paramount theatre operations for the last 15 years, arrived on the coast this week. Scheduled to work under the direction of Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president, Mr. Notarius will continue to carry on the same duties in Hollywood which he performed in the east, that of serving as a liaison officer between studio production officials and exhibitors and distributors in the field.

In connection with the dinner the Independent Theatre Owners of West Virginia will hold a meeting in Morgantown on the same date.

Cohn, vice-president; James C. Ritter, secretary, and Barney Kilbride, treasurer. Renamed directors include Charles Komer, Wade Allen, Lew Wisper and Gustave W. Funk.

Wobber Says Film Men Abroad Are Not Discouraged

Americans in America are more pessimistic over the European situation than the film men in Europe themselves, Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox general sales manager, said this week on his return to New York from the company's Paris and London conventions.

"Our staffs in Europe are fighting against great odds but are not discouraged, despite the difficult conditions," he said.

The company is reestablishing Spanish headquarters this week with M. J. Messeri, formerly in charge of Spain, as managing director, Mr. Wobber said.

He said that the British film industry is not worried about television, and said that in his opinion television is still primitive and "will need a lot of money for development."

Four of the 10 films being made for Twentieth Century-Fox in England will be distributed in this country, he said. Two of these will be Gracie Fields pictures.

The trip was Mr. Wobber's first to Europe in 12 years. He was accompanied by Mrs. Wobber. He expects to leave soon for the coast prior to the start of the S. R. Kent Drive.

The RKO Albee, Cincinnati, will inaugurate a summer policy of stage shows and films starting May 26th.

KENT AND SILVERSTONE ASK FOREIGN EXPANSION ON "RECIPROCAL" BASIS

Short-Sighted Not to Encourage Domestic Production, Says Silverstone; Must Consider Exhibitors, Kent Emphasizes

Plans for expansion in foreign film markets on a "reciprocal" basis were disclosed, over the weekend, independently by the heads of two large companies, Sidney Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, and Murray Silverstone, operating executive of United Artists.

Producers' Fund

Declaring that it is "a very short-sighted policy on the part of any film company, if it doesn't encourage local production abroad," Mr. Silverstone disclosed the plans of United Artists to include the distribution of native productions in South America and France as well as in England and Australia, and said that the same method of operation would have applied in Czechoslovakia but for the German conquest.

In France, a producers' fund will be applied to a group of five French producers, following the same idea as here. UA will distribute these films in France and its colonies, as well as in Belgium and Switzerland.

In England, Alexander Korda will continue production for the company, and a feature also is planned for Australia. The Korda productions, as heretofore, will get world wide distribution. The scope of sale of the others, other than local or within their own language centers, will depend upon the quality of the particular film.

Expanding in South America

There will be a "definite elaboration" of United Artists plans in South America, according to Mr. Silverstone, who added that "we're very keen on the South American market." Six films are planned for production by Mel Shauer, one to be a Portugese picture. Walter Wanger also is considering sending an expedition to South America to make a film with native background, on the order of "Grass," for world-wide distribution by UA.

Mr. Silverstone said that the company had had the idea of distributing "local" productions as far back as 1927. Spain, he added, will be "all right" for American film interests, although there may be currency restrictions. During the civil war there, UA did a larger business than ever before, he added.

United Artists will hold its European convention in London. Mr. Silverstone, Miss Pickford and Ted Carr will attend. Douglas Fairbanks sailed Wednesday on the Queen Mary, and planned to return to Hollywood in three weeks to start his first production.

Kent on "Reciprocity"

Sidney R. Kent, for Twentieth Century-Fox, sailing for Rio de Japeiro Friday night to address the first sales convention held by the company in Latin America, said, "Reciprocity in business relations between America and foreign countries is imperative. Whatever we have in mind for future expanded activities in Latin America takes into consideration the welfare of exhibitors in the countries there."

The Fox convention in Rio de Janeiro opens June 1st, and will last three days. Mr. Kent also will attend a convention in Trinidad before returning to New York, with Walter Hutchinson, foreign director, who will join Mr. Kent in Rio de Janeiro.

LONE HONDURAS SHOWMAN HERE

The only exhibitor in British Honduras, Santiago Castillo, who operates the Palace theatre at Belize, was among the visitors this week at RKO Radio's World's Fair reception suite at the home office.

Mr. Castillo said most of his patrons prefer Hollywood-made films, especially those with action and tense drama. There are some 60,000 persons in the country, 15,000 of which are in Belize. His theatre seats 1,000. He said that he expects eventually to establish a circuit of theatres in British Honduras. The first new house will be at Corozal, a town of 3,000.

The Palace at Belize has been operated for about 11 years, and Mr. Castillo has been its owner for the last four years. In addition to his managerial tasks, Mr. Castillo represents several American manufacturers.

Corporate, Product Affairs Discussed

Refusing to comment on the situation within the company as affected by Samuel Goldwyn's breach of contract suit against United Artists, pending in Wilmington federal court, against which United Artists filed a motion for dismissal last Saturday, Mr. Silverstone held a press conference Saturday upon his return to New York from the company convention on the coast. With him at the conference were Mary Pickford, as one of the five company stockholders, Harry Gold and L. J. Schlaifer, vice-presidents and sales managers, and Ted Carr, joint managing director in England.

Emphasized by both company officials were the expanded operations here and abroad and the product for the coming season.

Miss Pickford denied that United Artists stock was for sale. "No price has been set on it and none will be," she said, "and I believe the same thing applies for Mr. Korda, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Fairbanks." The same thing applies to the United Artists studio, which Mr. Goldwyn, the fifth of the company partners, recently caused to be named after him. Originally known as the "Pickford-Fairbanks" studio, and later called the United Artists studio, Miss Pickford pointed out that Mr. Goldwyn's lease expires in 1941, but that he has another five-year option on the plant from Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks, who are still the owners and have options to work at the studio.

Five Ready for Opening

Discussing the new 28 to 32 film lineup, Mr. Silverstone said that at the opening of the new season five pictures would be ready: "Four Feathers" (Alexander Korda); "Music School" (Samuel Goldwyn); "Winter Carnival" (Walter Wanger); "Intermezzo" (David Selznick), and "The Man in the Iron Mask" (Edward Small). In addition, Charles Chaplin's "The Dictators" will be made this summer at a cost of $1,500,000 and will be ready in October. Mr. Silverstone added that the more "good" pictures there were during the coming season, the better it would be for the industry as a whole, in that "there is no such thing as competition among fine films."

The continuation of the Selznick International-United Artists deal will add, for the coming season, two films in addition to "Intermezzo," these being "Rebecca" and an as yet untitled picture which is expected to be based on a well known play. Although Miss Pickford has no immediate plans to enter production, there is a possibility that she may use a famous play as a basis for a film.

The Contracts

The contracts of all five partners calls for distribution by them of any films which they may make up to September of 1945 through United Artists, the same contract applying for Hal Roach, Edward Small and Walter Wanger. The contract with David Loew runs for about four years, while the contracts of David Selznick and Sol Lesser are shorter, according to Mr. Silverstone. Miss Pickford, in speaking of the advantages to the company producers from the "Silverstone plan" of rebates on distribution cost to high grossing films, said that one producer had received three and a half times as much as the dividends paid one of the stockholders last year. Miss Pickford added that since Mr. Silverstone had taken charge of the company, "there has not been an outstanding producer who hasn't had his eye on the company. Eventually I believe we will get many of them."

Under the Silverstone plan, and because of the large gross expected on Chaplin's next film, the distribution charges may be as low as 15 per cent, he said. Also advanced as a possibility was the fact that the picture may play in more than one first-run situation at a time, as did "Hell's Angels," which played the Gaiety and the Criterion, in New York. Chaplin's "City Lights" played 12 weeks at the George M. Cohan Theatre in New York, and "Modern Times" played for eight weeks at the Rivoli.

Mr. Silverstone said that the company had been complying all along with important provisions of the trade practice program, and Harry Gold added that there had "never been coercion" of exhibitors by United Artists. Mr. Gold will attend the meeting of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York, and L. J. Schlaifer will go to the Allied meeting in Minneapolis.

Lewis Elected

Leonard Lewis has been elected vice-president of Spot Film Productions, Inc., in charge of the radio and television division. The company's plans for the new season call for production of several television films in addition to their program of commercial and educational films.

New Patriotic Film

Leon Schlesinger, producer of "Merrie Melody" and "Looney Tune" cartoons for Warner Brothers, has completed work on a patriotic one-reel cartoon in color, entitled "Old Glory." It has been set for release the week of July 4th.

The Washington Street Olympia theatre in Boston, owned by the Mullin and Pinanski circuit, last week celebrated the 27th anniversary of its opening.

NEW TAX MOVES IN SIX STATES; TWO LEVIES ADDED IN NEW YORK

Admission Taxes Also Threatened in Florida and Michigan; Footage and Seat Assessments in Wisconsin

The motion picture business is being attacked more seriously taxation-wise in these last few days of the few remaining state legislative sessions than it was in the three months, starting January 1st, when nearly all the 48 legislatures were meeting.

Florida this week took under consideration a 10 per cent gross receipts tax on all amusements, except horse racing, and a second proposal, to apply the state's chain store tax to theatres, requiring circuit operators to pay $400 annually for each theatre operated within the state.

Michigan threatened a state admission tax.

Minneapolis exhibitors face a local "luxury tax."

New York exhibitors last Saturday were burdened with a bill allowing cities to levy a tax of one cent on admissions up to 50 cents, with a graduated scale above, and a franchise tax of one cent per square foot per year on outdoor advertising signs in excess of three feet.

The industry in Wisconsin has united in opposing a $2.50 tax on each 1,000 linear feet of film. Another Wisconsin tax would levy from $5 to $100 on each theatre as well as a seat tax of from two to 30 cents per seat.

Canadian taxation proposals include an excess profits tax on distributors of five per cent.

Taxation Details

The State of Florida has a "chain store" law which places an annual license tax of $400 on each place of business in the state operated by large chains. Theatre circuits have escaped this tax so far, but a bill was introduced in the Florida House this week which would bring the circuits under the law. In addition, all business houses selling at retail are assessed one-half of one per cent on gross receipts, and this assessment would be extended to theatres and amusements also.

Another bill introduced in Florida would assess a tax of 10 per cent on the gross receipts of all theatres and amusements.

The introduction of a special measure in Michigan, imposing an amusement tax is threatened by Representative George Higgins, of Ferndale, following defeat of a move to extend the three percent sales tax to admissions.

Minneapolis theatres are also threatened with an admission tax as a result of a proposal of Mayor George Leach for a "luxury" tax to help finance increasing relief needs.

Wisconsin exhibitors are uniting in opposition to the bill recently introduced in the state Senate by the committee on local and state government providing for a tax of $2.50 on each 1,000 lineal feet of film sold, leased or distributed for public use in Wisconsin.

Under the provisions of the measure, reports are to be filed with the state treasurer on or before the 15th day of October, January, April and July of each year stating the footage used within the preceding three months, accompanied by the required tax.

Canadian distributing companies are protesting the decision of Finance Minister Charles Dunning to raise the special tax on excess profits sent out of the country to home offices, the increase being from two per cent to five per cent on the total amount of such cash payments.

The move, which became effective with the tabling of the budget in the Canadian House of Commons, represents the restoration of the super-tax to its original level, a reduction to two per cent having been obtained when distributors made vigorous protests to the Department of Finance.

The New York legislature adjourned Saturday. The defeat of the sales tax and outdoor advertising proposals were counterbalanced by a theatre admission tax and adoption after years of opposition of an employment agency regulation bill. The agency bill has still to be signed by the governor.

Passage of the Desmond-Mitchell-Moffat housing bills, providing for the expenditure of a $50,000,000 maximum in the next year, includes the right of cities to defray their expenses through imposition of taxes, including one cent on each admission up to 50 cents; two cents from 50 to $1 and a graduated scale above. Additionally, an excise tax of 50 cents per month can be charged for the possession or operation of each vending machine.

Other Legislative Actions

The California Senate has passed the bill giving film laboratories a lien on all stills and motion pictures until process work is paid for. The measure provides for public auction sale, after two weeks' notice, of any film indebted for process work.

In Illinois the bill proposing a ban on double features has been withdrawn by its sponsor. The bills on divorcement, censorship and prohibition of children in theatres after 10 P. M. are now up for third reading in the Senate. Illinois exhibitors still refuse to take an active part in fighting the bills, being confident that they have no chance of being passed.

The Missouri House criminal jurisprudence committee has put a "do not pass" notation on the anti-ASCAP bill introduced by Representatives Turner and Hamlin.

The veto by Governor Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire of a measure aimed at restriction of billboards has been sustained by the House in a unanimous vote. It was the first bill ever vetoed by the state executive, who is serving his second term.

Federal Taxes Drop $222,274

Touching the lowest point in 15 months, Federal admission tax collections in April were dropped to $1,384,722, from $1,606,996 in March, 1939, and $1,541,518 in April, 1938, it was reported Saturday by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington.

The April collections, the smallest recorded for any month since January, 1938, brought total Government receipts from the tax for the first four months of the calendar year more than $265,000 under those of the corresponding period last year, by $6,058,979 to $6,327,650.

Special figures compiled by the bureau for the Third New York (Broadway) District indicated that the drop in collections in April was general throughout the country, White Way collections dropping to $506,685 from $612,785 in March and $596,035 in April of last year.

More than the net loss was suffered in box-office collections in the area, which dropped from $549,647 in March to $442,085 in April. Collections from tickets sold by brokers dropped from $13,934 to $11,168, and tickets sold by proprietors in excess of established prices and permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, from which $1,068 and $18, respectively, were collected in March, produced no revenue whatever. On the other hand, receipts from free or reduced rate admissions increased from $5,639 to $6,811 and from admissions to roof gardens and cabarets from $42,478 to $46,621.

Form Transatlantic to Distribute French Films

Eugen Scharin, formerly with Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO Radio in Europe, has formed Transatlantic Films, Inc., with offices at 1776 Broadway, New York, to distribute foreign pictures, most of which will be French.

Pictures to be distributed include "La Maison du Maltais," which will probably be called "Sirocco" in this country and "White Slave Girl," both starring Vivaine Romance; "Conflit" (Conflict), starring Corinne Luchaire; "Drame de Shanghai," directed by G. W. Pabst; "Girlhood," in the Czech language starring Lida Basrova; "Wedding in White," now in production in Paris, and "No More Lovers," a film to be directed by Alex Trauner.

RCA and Brenkert To Sell Complete Booth Equipment

The Brenkert Light Projection Company and RCA Photophone have jointly announced completion of arrangements whereby they will cooperate in the sale of complete booth equipment for motion picture theatres.

Under the new sales policy, worked out by the two companies, the independent supply dealers selling Brenkert products and the RCA Photophone sales representatives will be in a position to sell booth equipment made by either of the companies.

FINDS BUSINESS UP IN LATIN AMERICA, ORIENT

But Increasing Native Production Is Shutting Off Small Theatres, Says Cammack

Receipts from South American and Far Eastern film bookings are increasing, according to Ben Y. Cammack, assistant to Phil Reisman, head of foreign distribution for RKO, in New York last week, after a survey of foreign sales that took him through Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Cape Town, Johannesburg, Singapore, Tokio, Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila, Batavia, and other cities.

Native Production Growing

Native production is increasing in practically all countries, especially in Latin America, he said, and obtaining a booking foothold in small theatres, to the virtual exclusion of American pictures. Solution of this problem, he said, is for production executives to decide whether to enter production in countries where native pictures constitute serious competition, or to produce pictures in the Spanish language, in Hollywood.

Mr. Cammack pointed to increased foreign sales grosses, year by year, as proof that "the situation is not as bad as some people make it out to be." He added, "In fact, it is not bad at all; how could it be, in view of our better position?"

"The truth seems to be," he said, "that we have the market. American pictures are the best—like American automobiles.

"In few counrties of the world have I seen an exhibitor decline to book a knockout picture. To maintain first place in the world, if we are hard pressed, we have to keep making very good pictures."

"Good Anywhere If in U. S."

He continued: "If a picture is good in America, it is good everywhere; my experience has convinced me of that. We could, of course, ship out only those pictures of best quality. However, every sales department, and I know we do, wants to ship out every bit of product it has, and gain all the money to be gained. The answer, if we are going to do this, is to keep the level of quality high, and raise it so as to include every picture made in Hollywood.

"On the other hand, you have another problem, as has been conceded; the problem of trying to get pictures into every little situation where native pictures are playing. That means expense; it means we'll have to be establishing studios in or sending units into most of the countries of the world, because practically every country has some native production, and practically every country has theatres where only native product is shown. It is not for me to answer, but the question is: is it worth it?

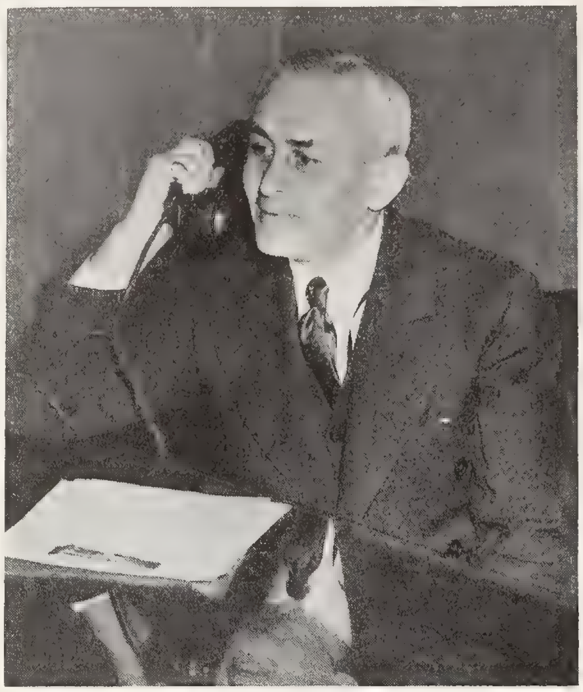
"Remember, our big pictures still play along with the native pictures in all of the key cities of foreign countries."

Cites France and England

Mr. Cammack cited France and England, where American pictures receive large rentals and obtain many bookings, as countries, nevertheless, which have large native production; and he pointed out that American companies did not enter production in those countries until absolutely necessary, and then not to great extent. American companies in those countries, he noted, were still relying on the superiority of Hollywood product.

"I came back from my trip with the conviction that business is good everywhere I visited, with the reasons being separate in each country," he added. "Our receipts are increasing, and certainly in Latin America.

"That does not look as if we're losing the market," he concluded.



MORRIS JOSEPH

Started August 20th Last Year

Mr. Cammack, as general manager of RKO's Latin American division, left Los Angeles on August 20, 1938, on the Northern Prince, for Rio de Janeiro. In that city, on September 23, he held a sales meeting, attended by Bruno Cheli, general manager for Brazil; Mr. Cheli's six branch managers; Nat Liebeskind, general manager for Paraguay, Argentina, and Uruguay; and George Kallman, general manager for Chile. The session was devoted to last season's product.

After a month in Rio, Mr. Cammack visited Buenos Aires, Rosario, and Santa Fe, Argentina; and Montevideo, Uruguay. After a brief return to Rio de Janiero, Mr. Cammack left for Cape Town, South Africa, on November 9. He visited Johannesburg, Pretoria, Durban, and other cities of that country; on December 22, he sailed for Singapore.

In the Far East, he visited Batavia, in Java; toured Java; visited Siam, French Indo China, Hongkong, Manila, Shanghai, Kobe, Osaka, and Tokyo.

Canada Sound Charge Cut

The service charge for maintenance of sound installations has been reduced and reclassified in a revised schedule for theatres in Canada by the Dominion Sound Equipments, Ltd., according to F. E. Peters, general manager of the company, which represents both Western Electric and Radio Corporation of America. The new charge for a regular checkup once each four weeks and emergency calls at any time for "A" theatres in Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal, Ottawa, London and other large cities is $8.75 a week. For "B" theatres the fee is $7.75 a week for a regular checkup once in six weeks and emergency service, while for smaller houses the rate is $6 per week with one scheduled call every eight weeks.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Edgar Rice Burroughs has served notice on all unauthorized Tarzans to quit insulting the name that he made famous.

As self-admitted creator of an industry based on the adventures of his mythical ape man, Burroughs informed the Tarzans, including wrestlers, prize fighters and professional football players, that they are making a "bum" of the original Tarzan. He said they'd have to change their names or face the consequences.

"What got me worried about the situation," he declared in Tarzana, Cal., in the white stucco lair of Tarzan, the ape man, "was a wrestling match I saw the other night, featuring a Mr. Tarzan Orth.

"This Mr. Tarzan Orth danced around the ring for a while, fell on his face, and posed like a dying fawn. All the fans at the ringside took out their handkerchiefs, waved them at Mr. Tarzan Orth and said:

" 'Yoo-Hoo, Tarzan' "

This "insult" to the king of the jungle, whom Burroughs says he imagined in 1912 and who has been going strong ever since in books, magazines, newspapers and movie theatres, caused Burroughs to write to all the Tarzans he knew.

Burroughs said there is only one man authorized to call himself Tarzan and that is Johnny Weismuller, for whom the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios have paid the proper fee.

"The other, self-christined Tarzans are apes, all right," Burroughs added.

When showing Paramount's "Union Pacific," presently the pride and joy of Mr. Cecil Blount DeMille, the Fox theatre, in Sidney, Nebraska, had progressed to the point where Monahan, the engineer of the old engine "MacPherson," is dying under the wreckage of the train. It was a breathtaking moment, and in a flash there flashed across the bottom of the screen the announcement, "Mr. Gehrig is wanted in the lobby."

Mr. Gehrig is the village undertaker.

The Capitol theatre of Loew's on New York's Broadway is in the middle of a rather unusual legal argument. Seems that when the site was first leased from the late millionairess Ella Wendel, for construction improvement by the theatre building, the lease stipulated that the theatre would pay income taxes on the rentals received by Miss Wendel so that the rent would be net. After her death, the land was devised to a charitable institution which is exempt from such income taxes, and, accordingly, the theatre discontinued paying the income taxes. But the charitable Wendel Foundation contend that the taxes should be paid nevertheless, and is suing to collect them.

PRESTO! CHANGO!

Thirty feet south of 47th Street on Sixth Avenue in New York stands a small theatre. The property is "L"-shaped, the other end of the "L" coming out around the corner on 47th Street. Regular marquees hang over each opening — the one on Sixth, the other on 47th. There is one staff for the theatre, one movable out-front box office.

The theatre occasionally plays Irish pictures and, when it does, the management keeps the Sixth Avenue side dark, lights up the 47th Street side, and calls the house the "Irish Theatre". Sometimes Irish pictures are not available and, when they are not, they play Greek pictures, or Polish, or Armenian, even Italian—and, when they do, they darken the Irish side on 47th, move the staff and the box office around the corner to the Sixth Avenue side and there light up the "Miami Theatre".

On April 15th, this pillar reported on the picture that was being filmed by P. A. Martineau and Raymond Mejat, Parisians, on French Devil's Island, in the depths of the penal colony, using actual convicts in a story about their lives and the events leading up to their incarceration. Well, the picture has been finished and the filmers have arrived in Paris, bringing with them reports on the world's most enthusiastic movie fan. He's a convict on the island, who, although he probably never again will see a screen on the outside, has tatooed on his body likenesses of every important star in Hollywood—female, every one of them, and among them such glamorous ones as Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Kay Francis, Claire Trevor, et al. The convict explained to M. Martineau that he had been in the penal colony 20 years, and had started with the tatooed likeness of Mary Pickford, adding the others as they came to fame.

After finishing the shots he is going home to put on a news reel in 15 or 20 parts at his own theatre.

The gents with the undecylenamide and the isobutyl have fun.

Calls Consumer Acceptance for Ad Film Lacking

"No general 'consumer acceptance' exists for commercial films," after all the years of their existence and the countless attempts made to open the field, according to Business Week, the business magazine, which, in its issue appearing on Saturday, will report the advertising film business in quite a state of flux.

"Curse of the Business"

Pointing out that "there are probably less than 200 consistent business users of sound motion pictures in the entire country," the publication will say, "Much of the blame must come back to roost with the people who have made industrial films. Curse of the business has been the one-camera fly-by-night 'Hollywood' directors who have flitted wraithlike in and out of the field. And the professional optimists who have glossed over the very real problem of distribution with their talk of unlimited circulation have been another menace."

Another reason is that "understanding of the medium got off on the wrong foot, and most people still classify it improperly. That is, films are regarded at the foot of novelty advertising—below souvenirs and paperweights."

Hollywood, too, is blamed as an "oppressing factor" in the development of the commercial film. "Hollywood," says Business Week, "is a land of breathtaking figures. A business man reads in his paper that it cost $2,000,000 to turn out the latest thriller for pesky little Lottie Witherspoon, the child star—and you scarcely blame him for deciding that pictures are not for his company.

"However, the most generally stated current reason why commercial films are not blossoming to a far greater extent is that advertising agencies have not been sold on them, or have not been awake to their possibilities."

Calls Business Men Puzzled

Admitting of the prerequisite of subtlety in advertising films intended for the public, on the grounds that the paying public doesn't expect or welcome advertising, Business Week reiterates what has been known for a long time, that in theatres the advertising message must be so short, or so disguised, as in a longer institutional production, that the dose will go down easily.

Reporting that "few business men will question the value of motion pictures as a medium," the publication finds the same business men puzzled with the "complicated production and distribution machinery," and the inadequacy of most of those listed as advertising film producers.

"Of the several hundred organizations in the country which label themselves producers of industrial motion pictures," the survey says that "in all there are perhaps 20 producers who own 'topflight' studios, and these do about 80 per cent of the business."

Advertising agency participation in advertising films is "calculated to do most for the immediate development of commercial films, it is said, in the survey, which delves at length into the manner and method and costs of production, distributing and getting exhibition for the ad film, the institutional "goodwill" film and the training film—these constituting the three kinds of commercial pictures.

BOOK REVIEW

DOCUMENTARY FILM, How the Motion Picture Records Our Civilization. By Paul Rotha, with Preface by John Grierson. 320 pages, illustrated, indexed. Cloth. W. W. Norton & Company, New York. $3.75.

Here is excitingly important contribution to the literature of the screen, solid enough to belong on the reference shelf, interesting, too, for even the casual observer of the evolving institution of the motion picture.

"Documentary" is now crystalizing into the term more accurately to define a region of production and recording previously, variously, and, generally inaccurately, denoted as "educational," or "industrial" or even "non-theatrical" and commonly meaning that very broad area which is "non-fiction."

Just at the moment, and it is probably a transient aspect, to this one reader at least there is something of a tinge of special pleading, social criticism and editorialization in the word "documentary." That mayhap is because the makers of documentary films have risen in a world of strife and causes, and have been in the main more nourished by their sponsors than the screen's entertainment customers. It would be an unhappy eventuation to have "documentary" come to mean films of argument, and that only.

Paul Rotha and his contemporary in Britain, Mr. Grierson, are rather well established as the international leaders in the development of documentary. It has been in Britain that the movement has come to acquire name, and, somewhat erroneously, a seeming of sudden floration. The thing that is "documentary" has been on the way ever since Charles Urban set to work on his very early shorts in the dawn years, culminating in his Kinemacolor recording of the Durbar now nearly three decades ago. Not a little of J. E. Bray's work in the 1915 period had some of the qualities of documentary and there have been sporadic, ill-supported, efforts of some skill intermittently ever since. The work of Louis DeRochemont in the March of Time and related films is of documentary character. The most conspicuous practitioner of the art in the United States today appears to be Pare Lorenz, who has moved from the critic's desk to the guidance of the camera for government bureaus.

"Documentary" is to grow in scope, importance and probably in acceptance, both within and without the theatre. Its appeal to the multitudes must depend on its skill in competing with the "story picture" which has overwhelmingly dominated the screen.

This book by Mr. Rotha is a crisp recording of facts and forces, and constitutes the only ready and authoritative conveyance of this organized information available.

It will be remembered that Mr. Rotha has been about on this side a bit under the Abbott-Barry auspices of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, which is developing into a focal point of significance in the study and evolution of "documentary." This is an important aspect of the Library's study of the whole screen story, addressed at a real orientation of the medium in our social and economic structure.

Exhibitors Oppose 'Private' Showing of Films at a Price

Screenings of contemporary motion pictures in auditoriums or projection rooms typically hired for the purpose, with the film used as a method of raising funds for a particularized group, have resulted in unanimous exhibitor expression of protest.

Barred Film Is Shown

Theatremen in the New York area are in protest against this form of competition, seen as added to legislative and other burdens affecting their patronage. The most recent example being a showing of "The Puritan," French film banned in New York State by the censor board, a ban upheld, upon appeal, by the Board of Regents. The film was shown last Sunday, continuously from four to 9:30 P.M., at the New School for Social Research, New York, in an auditorium with a seating capacity of more than 500, on behalf of Associated Film Audiences, which recently merged with Films for Democracy, and the Theatre Arts Committee.

Paying an "assessment fee" of 55 cents apiece, inasmuch as it is against the law to charge admission as such for a film which has been banned, some 750 members of the two groups attended the showing, which also included "The Declaration of Independence," Warner short.

Direct Competition, Says Skouras

Spyros Skouras, president of National Theatres, said, "Naturally, these showings are direct competition to theatres. We have no objection to non-competitive non-theatrical showings, such as those given at churches, military camps, hospitals, asylums and the like, but these others are very bad for theatres."

Charles C. Moskowitz, of Loew's, in common with executives of other circuits, affiliated or otherwise, says: "Non-theatrical showings are of course direct competition to our business and should be curtailed." In agreement with Mr. Moskowitz is John J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of RKO Theatres, who pointed out that "A certain number of people are obviously taken out of circulation from motion picture theatres by these showings."

Joining in the general opposition to these exhibitions is Monroe Stein, general counsel of the Cocalis Amusement Corporation, who adds, "We don't like anything such as this, in opposition to our business, but I don't know what we can do about it"; while Samuel Rosen, vice-president of the Fabian Theatres, says that "It stands to reason that people attending the showing of a film in any particular locality are kept away from the film theatres in that locality."

Organizations other than Film Audiences for Democracy (the new name of the merged Associated Film Audiences and Films for Democracy) and the Theatre Arts Committee have recently held similar meetings. The American Newspaper Guild, in the Assembly Room of its New York headquarters at 117 West 46th Street, showed "The Puritan" also, on March 12th last, while "Stolen Life," "The Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and "The Mikado" have been shown as well, by the Guild. At these showings, it has been reported, contributions have been accepted for the Guild strike fund.

No request for funds was made at the Film Audiences-Theatre Arts showing, the "assessment" having been levied on all those attending. However, Edward J. Kern, speaking on behalf of the organizations sponsoring the showing, said that the Legion of Decency had backed the banning of the film. The film, a case study of a murderer moved by what is portrayed as religious fanaticism. was reviewed in the March 25th issue of Motion Picture Herald.

Paramount Granted Leave to Appeal Blumenthal Ruling

Permission to appeal to the New York court of appeals in Albany from a decision denying an application for an injunction restraining Ben Blumenthal from bringing suit in England, and for a stay of proceedings was granted this week by the appellate division of the New York supreme court.

Paramount sought the injunction in a suit which claimed that Mr. Blumenthal had no right to sue in an English court for remuneration on the sale of Paramount's English theatre holdings.

Pathe Stockholders Lose In Two Legal Moves

Samuel Rosenman, New York supreme court justice, this week denied the application of Anna Bashlow, stockholder of Pathe Film Corporation, for an order granting permission to examine the books of Pathe and dismissed her suit. Justice Rosenman also denied an application of 10 stockholders holding 1,820 shares to intervene in the Bashlow suit because of his denial of her application.

In opposing the action, Phillips and Nizer, Pathe counsel, charged bad faith and attacked Bernard J. Reis, who had submitted an affidavit in support of the plaintiff's motion, charging that he had testified in other minority stockholders' actions against a film company. Counsel charged that he did so on a contingency basis and that he had acquired stock in Pathe after he learned of alleged mismanagement. Mr. Reis testified recently for the plaintiffs in a stockholders' action against Loew's.

Reserve Schine Verdict

Ellsworth C. Lawrence, New York supreme court justice, has reserved decision in the action of Schine Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., against the Massachusetts Bonding Company. The circuit seeks to recover interest and counsel fees of $2,250.70, on a compensation claim paid in the death of William Brady, circuit projectionist who died as the result of burns suffered in a fire in the projection booth of a Glens Falls, N. Y., house.

Denied Injunction

Otto R. Heiligman, common pleas court judge, in Philadelphia this week denied an injunction against the proposed erection of a motion picture theatre at Vernon Road and Sprauge Street in the northwest section of Philadelphia. Abraham Sablosky of the Sablosky interests will now go ahead with plans to erect the theatre. Frank B. Todd, Jr., a resident on the opposite corner, contended an ordinance permitting the project was unconstitutional and that incidental auto parking would create a nuisance.

Writ Denied

The New York supreme court this week denied an application of L. Lawrence Weber for an injunction to restrain Vedis Films, Inc., and Lenarch, Inc., owner of the Filmarte theatre, New York, from exhibiting the film "Trois Valses," and ordered trial starting Monday. Mr. Weber claims infringement.

Patent Suit Filed

Film Recording Corporation has filed a patent infringement suit in the United States district court in New York against Miles Reproducer Company, Inc., Samuel Bernbaum and Jacob M. and Hattie Kulick. The suit charges the defendants sell machines embodying patents held by the plaintiff.

Sherwood and the Playwrights Producing Company, Inc., to strike out the defenses raised by Twentieth Century-Fox in the suit to restrain the company from using the title, "Young Mr. Lincoln" for its film as unfair competition, it is charged, with Mr. Sherwood's play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." MOTION PICTURE HERALD

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—"Blondie Meets the Boss" is a real laugh. My patrons are crazy about the whole cast. Capacity the first and very good second day. Patrons are asking for the next one already. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 17-18.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

IN EARLY ARIZONA: Bill Elliott, Dorothy Gulliver—A dandy western but no draw. If you can get them in, they will like it. A better story and more action. Played May 12-13.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

LET US LIVE: Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Bellamy—Here is a good picture that really puts Henry Fonda in the top flight of actors. An excellent picture well portrayed, but the prevue seemed to scare them. A picture that pleased 100 per cent to those who came. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LET US LIVE: Maureen O'Sullivan, Henry Fonda, Ralph Bellamy—Good picture but business below average, but those who saw it seemed to be pleased. Played May 3-4.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

NORTH OF SHANGHAI: Betty Furness, James Craig—Did a nice business. The type of picture my patrons like. Grossed almost as much as the last Autry run. With the European situation as it is, pictures with war in it should prove strong attractions. Played April 28-29.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Margaret Lindsay—A good picture played to average business. Comedy extra good. Well received. Played April 26-27.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—I only wish that I had signed a Warner Bros. contract last year. I spot booked this feature and did a land office business with it. 100 per cent satisfaction. Running time, 97 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins—This picture is tops. If you haven't played it, be sure to do so. It's a better picture than "Jesse James." Running time, 85 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—Good picture; good business. Played May 7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—It may seem incredible, but this picture failed miserably. Miss MacDonald may be the No. 1 American Sweetheart, but she is not evidently strong enough to carry a box office picture without a better name than Lew Ayres to head the cast. I had heard reports that it has not been doing so good but I had to run it to prove it. Loew's are overmatching Lew Ayres.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Swell dancing. Swell music. Swell comedy. A swell show. You can really do the business on this one, too. Give it all you've got. Most everyone will like it. Played April 20-21.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—OK in every way. Play it any time of the week. Good comedy. Played May 8-9.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

KID FROM TEXAS, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice, Buddy Ebsen—Now they are playing a lot of polo on the coast, according to the movie magazines but it is no subject for our horny handed sons of toil. They must think that Long Island, where I understand it is popular, is in the middle west, and I know that it looked silly to those that never saw a game and never will. I wish they would keep this highbrow sport on the coast and not build a picture around it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—It's all right, I suppose, to try a star out in different kinds of roles, but our folks didn't care so much for Nelson in this kind. They want him in more romantic stories. Business was average for Sunday-Monday. Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 23-24.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—We enjoyed a good business on this picture and it is good for a weekend date in any small town. Nelson Eddy is not quite what one would expect for a tough-guy role and the fight scenes are doubled so obviously that even the kids could see through it. Virginia Bruce seems miscast, and the noise and shouting will shake your stage, but in spite of all this it has B. O. appeal and that is what counts. Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo—Here is one of the best little dramas made this season. Good story, excellent acting and a song put over by Miss Bruce that is tops. We liked it, our patrons liked it and it did fairly well at box office. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 20-21.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo—Good B product. Pleased generally. Stand alone in small spots; good second half in the big towns. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Barton MacLane, Helen Broderick—Possibly not quite up to the quality of former Beery pictures but it has plenty of action and will get results at the box office. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 15-16.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Robert Taylor, Wallace Beery, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—The samples that the trailer on this showed apparently were not inviting enough to bring them back. Whether the fault was with the trailer or with the picture, it is hard to say. Business on this was not so hot. Between trying to make a he-man out of Robert Taylor and a ladies man, it is hard to satisfy the different factions.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—A dandy week end picture with lots of action. Good story. Don't be afraid of this one. O.K. for any time. Played April 28-29.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Wallace Beery, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane. This was a fairly good show for the men but even they would rather come to the show when they can bring their wives. Play it though. It will do fair business and please 50%. Played March 23-24.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

WITHIN THE LAW: Ruth Hussey, Paul Kelly—Extra good B product. Made a dandy little show and you'll like it. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

YOUNG DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Lynne Carver, Jo Ann Sayers—An entertaining and interesting story and well done in every way. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 29-30.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming patronage.

Paramount

ARKANSAS TRAVELER: Bob Burns, Jean Parker, Fay Bainter, John Beal, Irvin S. Cobb—Bob pleases them and they turned out fine for the laughs. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 10-12.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo; Col. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Clubs Boys—There is no question about Jack Benny as an entertainer being tops but these terrible stories that Paramount gives him have made him into the worst box office draw at my theatre. Running time, 85 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN: Wallace Ford, Patricia Ellis—Fairly good picture which failed to draw. Played May 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN: Wallace Ford, Patricia Ellis—Here is a picture that will surprise you in its merit. In spite of its cast of no big names, everyone turns in a good performance that actually drew tears from some of our patrons. You will enjoy the musical numbers, particularly "I Need a Friend." This picture will leave you with something to think about. Any small town should enjoy this one. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 27-28.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

BEACHCOMBER, THE: Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester—We were afraid of this picture and stepped all around it until finally we took it for one night, let come what may, and were slapped in the face by our customers. My face is still bruised and makeup won't cover it. The picture has its good points but our people don't go for this English dialect. Leave it in the exchange. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 2.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

CAFE SOCIETY: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Shirley Ross—Poorest business midweek of the year. Name kills it in small towns. Not a small town picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Evelyn Venable, Donald Woods—Best western of the year. Story excellent. Cast, direction and scenery the best. Give this your best western time. It was good to see a girl in a western that can act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—We opened our new theatre with this and it gave excellent satisfaction. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—Not the best Bob Burns ever made but it pleased above average business. Played May 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—Another walkout picture. Gangster, of course. With a definite recession in business, that is becoming very apparent and why not, the public is getting fed up with these cheap, no good pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Inspectors Saved Important Event, House Owner Says

GARY, INDIANA—"For nearly a year, we had been having trouble with our public address system at the Palace Theatre here," said V. U. Young, president of the Theatrical Managers, Inc. Circuit, "and we were particularly concerned about its functioning properly during a style show for which we had enlisted large community interest and support.

"Our Altec Inspector R. C. Gray, and D. A. Swanagan, from the Altec Chicago office, cheerfully put in long hours working under high tension on the problem, and never gave up until our troubles were licked. Our style show was a complete success.

"It is that kind of work by Altec field men that reminds theatre operators of the value of Altec service and forcibly reminds them of how great a protection Altec service is to owner and manager alike."

The Altec service inspector takes personal pride in belonging to an organization which renders to its exhibitor customers service that goes beyond the required obligation. Let the Altec man in your locality explain how Altec service can "bring out the best" in quality and performance, in the equipment now in your theatre.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Akim Tamiroff, Anna May Wong—Will disappoint you if you expect one of those "slinky" Chinese thrillers. Lets you down. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 10-12.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY, THE: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Although it is good amusement, there is definitely something lacking to make it a picture you'd want to see. Business slightly off. Played May 28-29.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown, Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine, Walter Abel—With cool weather this did below average business. It is an interesting picture showing the progress of aviation. If I was asked to give a reason for the lack of drawing power for a picture as costly as this, I would say too much educational, too little romance. The scene where Walter Abel burns to death in a plane is too horrible to put into a picture that is made to entertain. There are many means to show death without the detail as shown in this. The death of MacMurray at the end does not add any to the entertainment part of the picture. The work of Louise Campbell is outstanding. The parts of the other stars are very capably done.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDE A CROOKED MILE: Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer, Leif Erikson—Out of the ordinary run of pictures and seemed to please Saturday patrons. who came to see the western "Shine On Harvest Moon." It certainly holds one's interest and several people asked if Leif Erikson was coming in any more pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 5-6. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

SAY IT IN FRENCH: Olympe Bradna, Ray Milland—As swell a little comedy as you could wish for. Listen to the laughs in any house! Played April 26-28. —W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Akim Tamiroff—A picture with Raft at his best. Excellent in all respects and it should do extra business at the box office. "Slicker" gets all the honors in the acting. Running time, 113 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Dorothy is liked here very much and we always do well with her pictures. Box office receipts were beyond expectations and picture pleased very much. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 16-17. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Give it all you have got and run a deluxe trailer and you will go to town on the business. I never did get to seat all of my Negroes after running the show five times. The show is entertaining and will really help pay the rent if you advertise it right. Thanks, Paramount. Give us some more that will pay film rental. Played April 3-4.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—I have only one bone to pick on this picture and that is its length. But our seats are soft, so we had few complaints. I have a suspicion that Paramount will get many bouquets on this fine production. Cecil B. DeMille has given it his usual good direction and produced it on a huge scale. I could not find a flaw in it anywhere and the customers praised it to the ceiling and we had enough business on it to realize a little profit. Play it, all you small town exhibitors, and don't be afraid to advertise it. You will rub your palms together with joy at the results. It is a big picture that will run three days in a small town and stand up. Running time, 135 minutes.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—See report on "Dodge City."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

ZAZA: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr—Ran this one on cash nights. Patrons walked out on it. It will take a long time to put Colbert back in the running after a flop like this. Stars should know better than to take a part in one like this. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 3-4.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Different from usual run of western. Played to fair business. It takes Burnette to make the show. Played May 5-6.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

COME ON LEATHERNECKS: Richard Cromwell, Marsha Hunt—Played this one pretty late and I guess my patrons knew it. At any rate came out a little short. Played May 2-4.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—A natural for a weekend. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ORPHANS OF THE STREET: Robert Livingston, Tommy Ryan, June Storey—Good dog and boy story which pleased average business. Played May 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Charles Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dare—Best of the Breens for me yet, but watch the little star, Irene Dare. Just a darling of the screen, she stole the show. My patrons thoroughly enjoyed this picture. Better business than "Snow White." Running time, nine reels. Played May 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

GREAT MAN VOTES, THE: John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler, Katharine Alexander —A fairly good program picture. The part suits John Barrymore OK but you see a little too much of him. I would say play it but do not give it your good running time. Played March 24-25.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Although this did not draw as we expected it to, it certainly did please. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 25-26.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Walter Brennan, Edna Mae Oliver—Very disappointing. Ginger acted like she was mad with Fred and was trying to make a picture with him anyway. You will be able to do business on it though, if you advertise it highly. It will please some. Played May 4-5.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—This seemed to be one of the most pleasing Withers pictures to date. Leo Carrillo and Jane make a great team. Perfect for a Friday-Saturday booking. Drew well and seemed to please all. Not greatly different from the average western plot but they liked it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 21-22.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—We can only add our praise to that of other exhibitors who have played this picture. We consider it 100% in every way. Will please even more than some of them expected it to. Some of the women expected it to be too rough, were pleasantly surprised. Nothing but raves. Running time, 106 minutes. Played May 4-6.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—If any small town showman can't go to town on this picture, he had better start taking stock because it's a natural.—Harlan and Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Exceeded all expectations. Played May 7-10.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. MOTO IN DANGER ISLAND: Peter Lorre, Jean Hersholt, Amanda Duff—Usual Mr. Moto adventure. Pleases Moto and mystery fans. No squawks. Biz slightly off. Played April 28-May 2. —W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID, THE: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Cesar Romero—Business up over average in spite of playing it against "Union Pacific." Audiences like it immensely and it is a very good picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—One of the finest pictures we have ever shown. A credit to any theatre. Inspiring and educational as well as entertaining. Ameche, as usual, was excellent. Henry Fonda will soon be a big bet. All he needs is a couple more good parts. A grand picture for your best dates. Well recorded. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 7-9.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—Just B product that's good. Didn't stand extended runs for me. I and my patrons were disappointed. Running time, 106 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft—My people seem to reject anything that looks like a war picture. This did not draw the first night but the second night picked up, which shows it got some word of mouth publicity. The picture is excellent in every way. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 4-5.—A, N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Constance Bennett, Alice Faye, Joan Davis, Nancy Kelly, Charles Farrell—A much better than average picture that was well liked by our patrons. Even though the plot was a little far fetched, it was entertaining and the cast of popular favorites put it over. Drew better than average and gave satisfaction. All favorable comments. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 23-25.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Fair picture. Not up to expectations and only fair business. Not up to average. Played May 1-2.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—Without a doubt the worst show we have ever played and my patrons all agree with me. Don Ameche is a very poor draw for us. Played May 10-11.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—One of the best comedies of this type we have had this year. Warner Baxter the best he has been for years and the entire cast excellent. Good dialogue and plenty of laughs. Liked by all. Nicely produced and recorded. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WINNER TAKE ALL: Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Henry Armetta—A good piece of entertainment. Our people get a tremendous bang out of Henry Armetta. He means money if you sell him. Played May 3-5.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

United Artists

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr, Sigrid Gurie, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart—There is no question in my mind that this Lamarr girl is beautiful, but lacks B.O. yet. Didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, David Niven, Thomas Mitchell—In my opinion a fairly good show but not good enough to draw much business. My public have seen Merle in a few foreign made pictures too and this hasn't helped her any at the box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 16-17.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—A thoroughly enjoyable picture that pleased everyone. No big names but a very capable cast. A nice production, well photographed and recorded. Average Sunday business. All comments favorable. Running time, 109 minutes. Played April 16-18.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Above average midweek business and gave excellent satisfaction. Running time, 109 minutes. Played April 27-28.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Roger Daniel, Dolores Costello—This star and Wallace Beery are two actors whom I simply can't get my patrons out to see. This picture is only fair. Business below average. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 20-21.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Lucille Watson, Charles Coburn—Some very good dramatic work in this. Considerable of the plot strikes me as being not too reasonable, but it will get by and give satisfaction to most patrons. Running time, 94 minutes. Played May 6-7.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray—Eighty minutes of pipe dreams, made to come true through trick photography, would seem to me to be more than enough of this sort of fare to satisfy adults of a reasonably high degree of intelligence. But, it may easily be that we are not selling our seats to that type of patrons. In any event, the box office says that the picture is an excellent grade of merchandise. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 22-23.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming patronage.

YOU LIVE ONLY ONCE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda—Of all the tragedies, concentrated and triple distilled, this is it. If a vote were to be taken as to what picture is the most tragic among motion pictures, I would award the questionable honor to this. Author, director, producer must have a grudge against the world, and more particularly movie goers, to inflict this upon them. This was doubled with "The Sisters." I soft pedaled this and I am glad that it is out of the way.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Ed Sullivan—Here is a gangster picture that will "take you for a ride." Thrilling and full of surprise twists. Got a good hand here. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 6-9.—W. C. Lewellen, Pueblo Theatre, Uptown, Col. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUYS IN SOCIETY: Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton, Mischa Auer, Helen Parrish, "Little Tough Guys"—This was hardly worth paying express on. Very amateurish and badly done. The cast did the best they could but it wasn't enough to save this. No draw. Running time, 73 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NEWSBOYS HOME: Jackie Cooper, Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie, "Little Tough Guys"—Came out even, which was quite a disappointment, for I expected to make a little on this one. This is the off season in a cotton and wheat district. Played May 5-6.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING, SISTER, SWING: Ken Murray, Ernest Truex, Kathryn Kane, Johnny Downs—Didn't gross film rental. Not the type for this community. Played April 25-27.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, William Lundigan—An excellent little picture that pleased the women but not the men. Too sugary. Universal had better let Miss Durbin sing popular songs or American folk songs at least if they wish to hold her popularity. These operatics are no good in a small town. We played it hot and the draw of Universal's gold mine was bad. A sweet picture but no box office for us. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Enjoy very good business on this one. Had a tieup with Shell Oil Co.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Victor Jory, Frank McHugh—I have seen both "Dodge City" and "Union Pacific" and to say that they are both tops is putting it mildly. "Dodge City" was shown first, "Union Pacific" at a later date at the same theatre. After the showing of "Union Pacific," a trailer was shown stating "Union Pacific" challenges "Dodge City" for the biggest picture award of 1939. Coming out, an usher handed voting slips saying "I hereby nominate ☐ "Dodge City"—☐ "Union Pacific" for the biggest picture award of 1939." Here is an exploitation stunt for those who have these pictures coming but to start it before the first one is shown. That should create lots of special interest in these pictures. This stunt is inexpensive. For my part I gave them a tie. It would take a so called "Philadelphia lawyer" to decide which of the two is best, so folks get ready and do your stuff. Bring 'em in; word of mouth will do the rest.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Victor Jory—Excellent. Beautiful in colors and action. Good story and is clicking everywhere. It's a sure natural box office tonic. Running time, 104 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter—This gave us the best business in several weeks.—It is a superior picture in every way. Many reports have come through on this so I will add that it deserves all the good things said about it.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

KING VULTURE: Special Sport Thrills—Couldn't ask for any better short than this one. Lived up to all expectations. Audience very quiet and attentive. Play it.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MIND NEEDER, THE: Charley Chase—A lot of weekend laughs in this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE TROC: Musical Hall Vanities—A good musical reel with chorus singing and dancing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ODD SPORTS: Special Sport Thrills—Interesting short.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 8—The ice rink at Westwood and very, very good. This series has been excellent this season. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING, YOU, SWINGERS: Andy Clyde—Just fair. Not so funny as some we have run but it got by. The kid band is good. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

GRAND AWARDS

For the first time in the history of the Quigley Awards, the important part of the industry that is in and adjacent to New York came to the long-awaited opportunity to get a definite closeup of the high type of theatremen who have taken down the Grand Plaques.

From the moment that John Burhorn and George Limerick stepped off the Century to the hour when they triumphantly departed filled with honors, the winners brought to home office distribution, exhibition and advertising heads with whom they came in direct contact a keener realization of showmanship values in the field and the necessity of encouraging greater showmanship effort in every type of operation—first-run, subsequent, or otherwise.

It was at the Grand Awards luncheon, in making the presentations to the winners, that William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer general sales manager, said:

> "Distribution and sales departments have always had great respect for the exploitation end of the business. This respect is heightened for the Grand Awards winners who have succeeded in competition with others in their field from all over the world."

And it was upon the same occasion that Spyros Skouras, president of the far-flung National Theatres, emphasized:

> "The motion picture today is the temple of entertainment for all the peoples. It is a great cultural force, powerful in raising the mentality of its vast audience. Exploitation's part in this influence should be strongly encouraged and it is through such means as these Awards that it will be fostered and brought to efficient functioning."

Thus spoke authority in high place. Thus spoke authority in words that cannot be brushed aside.

In the sixth flourishing year of these Competitions there appears to be little less than unanimous industry acceptance of the Quigley Awards as the most reliable boxoffice markers on the road to bigger and more consistent grosses.

LOYALTY BEGETS LOYALTY

To this desk, every now and then, comes an executive pronunciamento wherein the boys are impressed with the necessity of giving their all to the good ole circuit, of being loyal to the cause, and etc., etc., etc. Well, if the bossman feels that way about it, we feel there is little harm in talking it up.

It is to be doubted, however, if there are a lot of managers who are not eager, without asking, to be very loyal to the job and to the organization. That's not too much to ask; provided, of course, that the same degree of undying loyalty expected of the employee is in turn displayed by the employer.

ON RECENT HAPPENINGS

Lew Chatham, who was head man of the Griffiths houses in Norman, Okla., recently was stepped up to an important supervisory post in the Dickinson-Griffiths circuit. And Ted Kirkmeyer, manager of the Marlow in Helena, Mont., has arrived in France as a guest of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for his showmanship displayed in the national contest on "Marie Antoinette".

And, since the Grand Awards appears to be the current center of attention, it is to be noted that Chatham was voted the 1936 Quigley Silver Grand Award. Kirkmeyer took down the same honors in the Competitions of 1937.

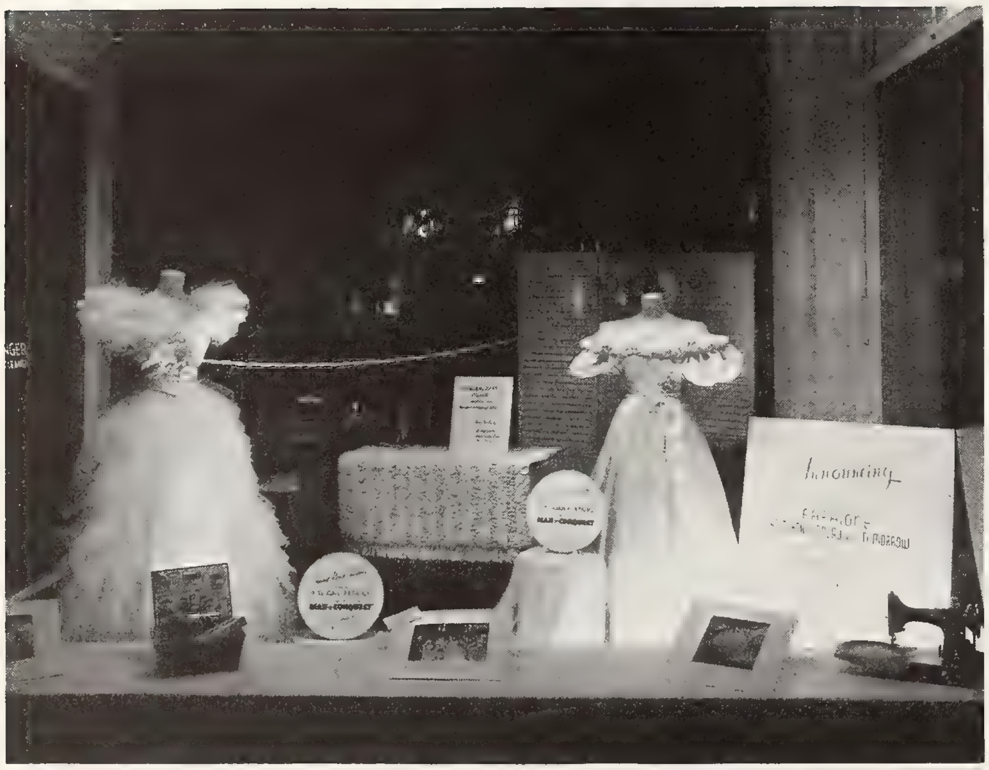
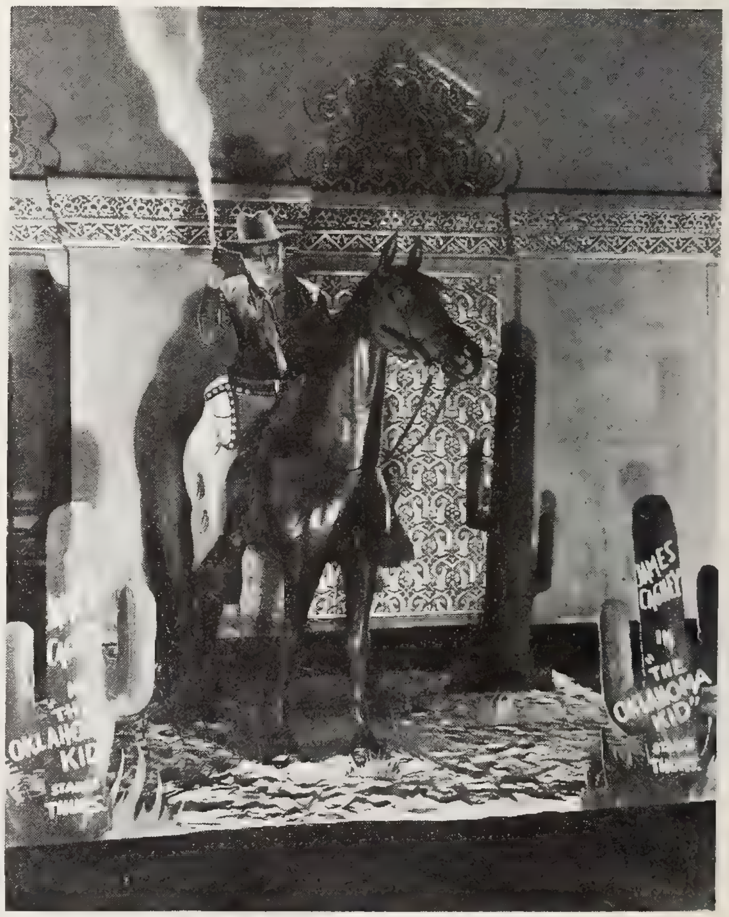
Tieup also plugged the arrival of the Paramount Union Pacific special train bearing a group of Hollywood stars to that city. . . . Another Round Tabler to capitalize on the display of old and modern telephone equipment to help exploit "Alexander Graham Bell" was Manager Herb Jennings, who used the stunt for that opening at the RKO Keith Theatre, in White Plains.



MAN of CONQUEST

The Fifth Avenue showrooms of Singer Sewing Machines as shown above were turned over to the exploitation of Republic's "Man of Conquest" with tiein on the Fox Brooklyn and Loew's Metropolitan Circuit playdates. Original costumes worn by Gail Patrick and Joan Fontaine in the film were rushed to New York by air express for the display.



JAMES CAGNEY IN "THE OKLAHOMA KID"
THE OKLAHOMA KID

For a week ahead and during run of "The Oklahoma Kid" at the L. & J. Fox Theatre, in Atlanta, Ga., Manager Tommy Read created the eye-attractor lobby display reproduced here. Compoboard cactus with title, cast and playdates were planted at base of cutout of James Cagney mounted atop wooden horse. Gun smoke was provided by burning incense and running it through rubber tube attached to muzzle of pistols.

With ten shelves that kept moving continuously, stills with tiein copy cards and books made up the display which was used three weeks in advance. Another stunt arranged by the Round Tabler was the placing of 50 copies of the book in circulation, with patrons invited to borrow and read the book before witnessing the film.

QUIGLEY GRAND AWARDS WINNERS TELL MEMBERS OF NEW YORK TRIP

Visitors Endeavor to Set Down Impressions of Reception by Home Office Executives and Other Industry Organizations

by JOHN BURHORN

1938 Silver Grand Award
Manager, Gayety, Chicago, Ill.

Mike Vogel has asked me to write a story about my personal reactions to my New York trip. I take it this is intended for the benefit and interest of my fellow Round Tablers throughout the country.

Since we landed here in New York, we have experienced one thrill after another. Screenings, luncheons, cocktail and theatre parties, etc. Every one vied with each other to show us the happy and bright side of New York life. Business sessions and interviews which were followed by luncheons have given us an insight behind the scenes of the great industry which we shall never forget.

Industry Meetings Stand Out

The Grand Awards presentation at the Astor, the A. M. P. A. luncheon with the interesting discussion on exhibitor's publicity needs and how they are met by the men behind the publicity guns in New York will ever prove outstanding mementos in one of the busiest and most interesting weeks we have ever experienced. Details of the interesting and very worthwhile experiences of exhibitors in this great business of ours have been presented in the columns of the Motion Picture Herald.

Fortunately for us, we were given an opportunity to visit the New York World's Fair for two days. Talk about exploitation and showmanship, this is the grandest exhibit I have ever visited. You fellows coming East on your summer vacations will confirm this.

In conclusion, I wouldn't have missed this trip for any consideration. If I have spent extra time in burning the midnight oil preparing campaigns for the Quigley Awards, I have been fully repaid. Somebody, somewhere in this great exhibition game of ours is going to win the Grand Awards for 1939, I say to him, just as some of the former Grand Awards winners told me, you'll get an experience that's beyond all expectation.

It's a challenge to any manager's imagination. Instructive, entertaining to be sure, but, above all, it's a panorama and reunion of worthwhile ideas that will make you go back to your desk with a wider vision and a more determined purpose to sell seats for your theatre after having met a lot of worthwhile people who take a great interest in the success of the man in the field.

Sincerest thanks of course go to Mr. Quigley and his organization for this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to get a real close-up of the industry and its operations at the home offices. It is a contact that should be the ambition of every theatreman in this business.

YOUR ROUND TABLE GIVES DEEP THANKS

No small part of the entertainment of the Grand Awards winners was played by the various distributors and equipment companies who did so much to give the boys a long-to-be-remembered holiday. Your Round Table thus wishes to express deep thanks to:

Nate Blumberg, Lou Pollock and Hank Linet, of Universal; Mort Blumenstock and Sid Rechetnik, of Warner Brothers; Herman Robbins, George Dembow and Louis Cohen, of National Screen Service; L. W. Conrow and Bert Sanford, of Altec Service; Herbert Griffin and A. E. Meyer, of International Projector Corp.; W. G. Van Schmus and Gus Eyssell, of Radio City Music Hall.

Also Ned Depinet and S. Barrett McCormick, of RKO Radio; Charles E. McCarthy and Earl W. Wingart, of Twentieth Century-Fox; Lynn Farnol and Monroe Greenthal, of United Artists; Howard Dietz, Si Seadler, Bill Ferguson and Jack Kuhn of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Al Adams, of Republic.

An especial bow is proffered in the direction of Paul J. Lazarus, Jr., president, A.M.P.A., for his fine cooperation in bringing before his organization the Awards winners in a meeting that proved one of the highlights of the entire week.

Street Ballys Aid On "Gunga Din" Date

Parading the streets of Biddeford, Maine, was lad carrying umbrella with imprinted copy to the effect that folks shouldn't let rain or shine keep them from seeing "Gunga Din" at the Central Theatre. Chap covered the shopping area and neighboring towns. To further publicize the date, Manager Ralph Tully circularized high school teachers with a personal letter requesting that they inform the student body of the showing. As a result, English teachers took the children to the show in a body in conjunction with the history classes. Postcards recommending the picture were mailed from New York to theatre list.

Reward Posters Planted for "Gunga Din"

To publicize "Jesse James," reward posters were attached to lampposts on principal streets in the city and on the two bridges leading to neighborhood towns. Street bally day ahead of opening consisted of a masked rider, equipped with guns, etc., on horse bannered with playdates, copy, etc. Man also distributed heralds as he wended his way around the city.

Oklahoman Is Appreciative of Opportunity to Meet Up with Old-Time Industry Friends and Contacts in New York

by GEORGE LIMERICK

1938 Bronze Grand Award
City Manager, Griffiths, Enid, Okla.

The bird who said "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet" sure never won a Quigley Award, because the two met last week here in New York and the East took over a little boy from the West like Wellington took Napoleon.

From our arrival May 15th to our departure May 23rd, the week was filled with happy memories of contacts with gentlemen of the industry both socially and over the desks of the leaders of the industry.

On Tuesday noon as guests of Mr. Quigley at the Grand Awards luncheon at the Hotel Astor we met the leaders of exhibition and distribution. The writer here renewed many old acquaintances which were made south of the Mason-Dixon line on previous occasions.

Advises Closer Relations

On Thursday noon, we met with the A. M. P. A. and had a very interesting meeting, discussing publicity and advertising needs which were of mutual benefit to both the small town exhibitor, which I represent, and the home office which the ladies and gentlemen of A. M. P. A. represent. It was extremely gratifying to note how keenly interested these folks were in our reactions to the ideas and suggestions offered.

The open-mindedness with which these boys received the opinions from the man in the field is heart-warming. Out in the sticks we are inclined to feel far from the firing lines, but after various discussions with the men here, my advice to my Round Table brethren is to feel free at any and all times to pass along any and all suggestions to the home offices. They'll welcome constructive criticism with open arms and do their "durndest" to cooperate.

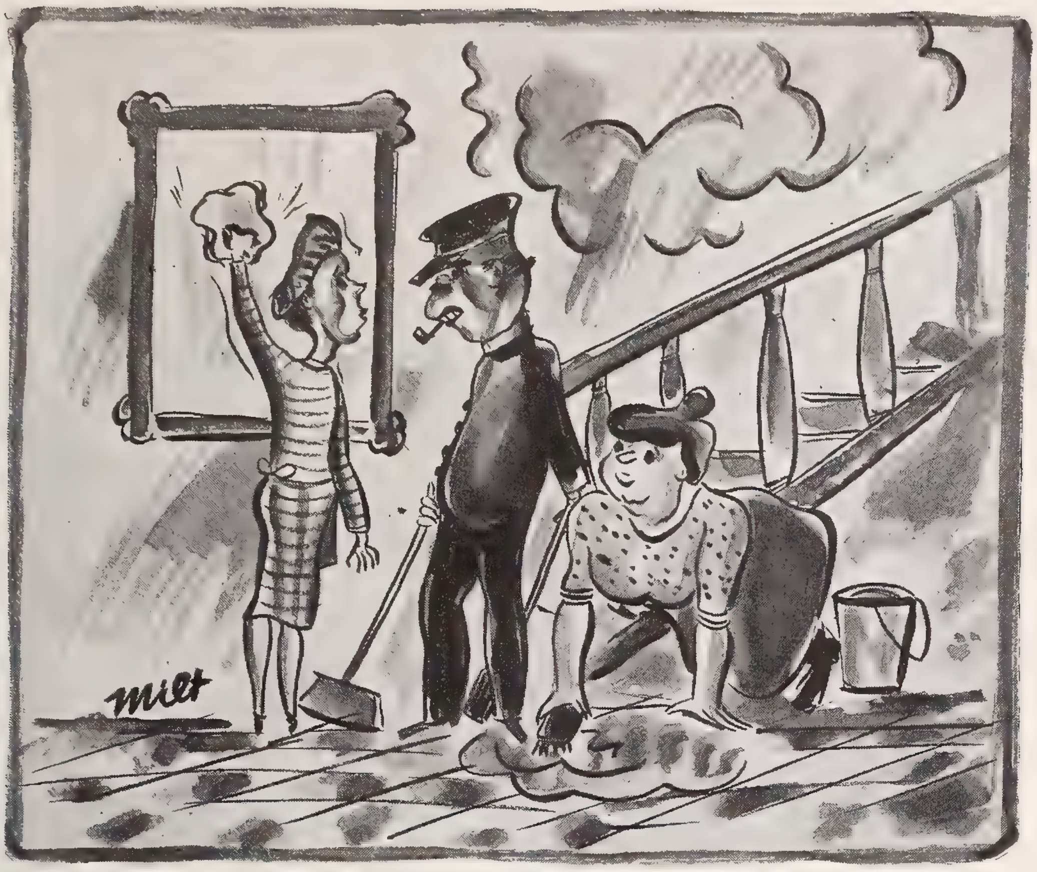
If space would permit, I could rave on and on of the marvellous treatment accorded us during this great week, which is stamped indelibly in my mind. My one regret is that George Dembow didn't shoot one of his National Screen trailers of the activities of the glorious week so that I could run it off for the boys back home.

His Hat Is Off

Everyone was so kind that it is difficult to single out any one entertainment or event over the other. They were all tops.

To the home offices who contributed so graciously to the success of "the" week, my hat is off. And to Mr. Quigley who made possible the whole event through the medium of the Quigley Awards, a million thanks for a never-to-be-forgotten week.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS



Cleaning Woman: "The manager says we'll clean up on the World's Fair."

Model Airplane Contest Helps Austin on "Patrol"

Effective, was the model airplane contest put on by Frank Austin, at the Virginia Theatre, Fairmont, Va., for "Dawn Patrol" with the cooperation of local news company which furnished cash prizes to winners and distributed heralds. Realistic lobby display was also planted consisting of hangars, guns, aviators, planes, nurses, etc. Models of "spad" planes were made to scale, some suspended by wires to give effect of flight.

Sound truck was used three days in advance, truck, driver and equipment all promoted by Austin, Station WMMN gave three announcements daily for 10 days in advance of opening, sidewalk stencils were used profusely, as were car door hangers and stickers on windows.

Material is to be addressed to Contest Committee, Columbia Pictures Corp., 729 Seventh Avenue, New York.

Kiddie Revue Staged By Nelson in Findlay

A kiddie revue, featuring local talent is reported by Glenn Nelson, of Warner's Harris, Findlay, Ohio to have proved highly successful as a goodwill booster. Tying in with well-known dance school executive, studio provided entire cast, costumes and musical accompaniment for the show. Stunt was publicized through trailers, dance studio's ads and lobby setpiece consisting of photos of the children participating.

Other goodwill builders engaged in by Glenn included offer to high school authorities to use theatre stage for school activities. With the City of Findlay the focal point of an inter-city bowling tournament, the theatreman secured the names of all members of the out-of-town teams and sent passes to the captains of each five-man team, inviting them to attend the Harris' shows.

"COME AND SEE US"

School Drum Major Aids on "Brother Rat"

Securing the drum major of the local high school band, C. L. Hollister, Babcock Theatre, Wellsville, N. Y., dressed him in uniform identical with the VMI outfits and had lad parade streets day ahead of opening of "Brother Rat," distributing cards with the salutation "Hi, Brother Rat." Card carried gag copy and offered tickets to holders of lucky numbers corresponding with those posted in the lobby.

Teaser ad campaign was also concentrated on with the thought of selling the true meaning of the title, copy reading "At West Point, it's a cadet. At Annapolis, it's a middie. And at V.M.I. it's Brother Rat." Still other ads read "Don't say, Hi, Pal, say Hi Brother Rat," etc., etc.

Hollister Ties In Organizations for Showing of Short

Produced by the New York State Department of Health, a short titled "Serum to Windham" based on an actual case, was profitably shown by Manager C. L. "Holly" Hollister, at the Babcock, Wellsville, N. Y., in a tiein with the local P. T. A., school nurses and other organizations. The story, which shows the operation of the various health agencies in treating a rare type of pneumonia, received a strong advance from Holly, who secured an interesting animated display from the state health offices for showing at the main branch of the public library.

From the general chairman of the city's P. T. A., a list of the membership roll was obtained to whom letters were sent, signed by the heads of the organization which paid for the postage. The theatremen interested his superintendent of schools on the value of the showing which brought about announcements throughout the schools and displays plus theatre credits on all school bulletin boards. Endorsements from the city and district health officials were secured for display and newspaper coverage.

Hollister's campaign was featured by a "first-time" plant, the placing of one-sheets for the date on the official bulletin boards of the local Sinclair refinery. This rare promotion was secured by a personal interview with the plant superintendent, previously adamant to allowing theatre advertising on the premises. A conspicuous part of the drive was the cooperation of the local papers which gave generous publicity to the date in advance and current.

FURTHER REPORTS ON FORTNIGHT WINNERS

Details of Other Entries Chosen for Appointment in Last Issue Reveal Wide Range Coverage

As has been the regular policy of the 1939 Quigley Awards, and to set down in print the details of all winning entries in each Fortnight period, as soon after selection as possible, below are explained the exploitations of other winners in the last judging which were not published in last week's issue.

Entries among the winners in last week's listing, and not detailed last week or this, have been written-up in previous issues.

Harwell "Dodge City" Proclamation Used as Keynote of Campaign

Announcing through newspapers his own proclamation that the opening of "Dodge City" was an outstanding day in the annals of motion pictures, Bill Harwell, at the Ohio in Canton, built his campaign for that date around the proclamation idea. Proclamation was also used as an advance trailer and permission was obtained from the city officials to plant silk bannerettes with title, theatre, playdates, etc., on all flag poles on main streets 10 days ahead of opening. Week ahead all light fixtures and walls in the inner theatre lobby were draped with the proclamation banners and in addition eight foot flag poles covering three main blocks were also used, these being transferred to theatre where they were draped around the marquee opening day. Other outside coverage included radio, newspapers, tack cards, and six-sheet A-board mounted on truck toured the town three days ahead.

Howe Completes Quick Campaign On Sudden Switch in Booking

With a last-minute switch in bookings to "Never Say Die," Manager John Howe, Olympia Theatre, in Portsmouth, N. H., decided on a teaser campaign for the few remaining days ahead of opening. Title slugs were scattered throughout local daily and tieup with soft drink distributor netted additional publicity. Eighty-odd dealers were supplied with gummed strips for windows and mirrors with copy "Never Say Die, Say Pepsi-Cola for your spring tonic," followed by playdates, theatre, etc.

Since the sudden switch allowed no time to order a trailer, Howe made up a series of slides projected through the theatre's stereopticon.

Texas Governor Wires Endorsement To Bray for Date on "Conquest"

Immediately on receipt of confirmation of the booking of "Man of Conquest" at the Lyric, in Brownwood, Texas, Manager Lew Bray, made a special trip to Austin to meet Governor O'Daniel to invite him to attend the Central Texas Premiere. Though the Governor was unable to attend, photos of the two were taken together and planted in the Brownwood and surrounding towns' papers together with copy of wire received from the Governor endorsing the picture. Personal letters were sent by the theatreman to all mayors in nearby cities inviting them to the premiere.

Schools and colleges were covered by personal calls and the distribution of student coupons, scene stills were also left for all history classes. Announcements were also made in all classrooms with teachers allowing credits to each student attending the picture. Civic and women's clubs were also contacted, teaser used two weeks ahead and day ahead of opening, co-op ads were promoted from leading merchants.

Bridgeport Searches for Wasp On Rosenthal's "Freedom" Date

Teaser campaign was started week ahead of "Let Freedom Ring" as part of Morris Rosenthal's "Wasp" search in connection with that picture's opening at the Majestic in Bridgeport. A reward of $25 was offered through cooperating newspaper and trailer advising when and where the "Wasp" could be seen. Teaser cards were also distributed in advance in auto parks. Rosie also promoted printing press which he set up in the lobby, "Wasp" printing cards which were distributed to patrons.

Street Broadcast for "Midnight" Found Profitable by Frank Miller

Cooperation of Station WMMN was secured by Frank Miller for the opening of "Midnight" at the Metropolitan Theatre in Morgantown, W. Va., with a street broadcast featuring questions on midnight which tied in perfectly to picture's title. Numerous window displays were promoted by the Round Tabler including jeweler's display of clocks, all hands pointing to the witching hour; another window of styles plugged midnight blue, etc.—all displays tied-in with appropriate picture and title copy. Tinted photos of Claudette Colbert were distributed, cooperating merchant's ad on reverse side covering cost of printing, etc.

"Preview Picture of the Week" Is Dinerman's New Promotion

If it isn't one thing, then it's another space-grabber that comes from the fertile brain of E. V. Dinny Dinerman, RKO Midwest theatres ad head, this time a layout idea called "Picture Preview of the Week," a half-page Sunday layout of the top coming attraction in the Cincinnati houses, and started with "Alexander Graham Bell." Tieup has been made for a four-week period and if the idea takes hold will be extended for a 52-week period.

Saunders Cracks Utilities Company For Co-op Ads on "Graham Bell"

Despite the fact that the local public utilities are hard to crack, according to Matt Saunders, Loew's Poli, Bridgeport, the Round Tabler submitted a series of ads to be used for "Alexander Graham Bell" which were accepted to be used in all newspaper ads in Connecticut where the picture is playing and on all future dates. In addition, the telephone company is sending the material out for co-op advertising in all state situations where the company has branches.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Page

(1) A definite class slant topped by an engaging half-tone of the leads illustrates the selling of "Graham Bell" at the Emboyd, Fort Wayne, Ind., by Harvey Cocks, general manager, Quimby Theatres. The light-face copy was pitched to indicate the tone of the attraction and the title placed strategically to tiein in appropriately. Size: 160 lines on two columns.

(2 and 4) The psychological effect of utilizing the names and expressions of stars in other attractions to sell a coming date is employed soundly here by the Shuttee-Patchen-Harold showmanship trio of the Oklahoma City Standard Theatres to publicize "Calling Dr. Kildare" at the Midwest. In the 110-line display, on three-columns half-tone face cuts of the top M-G-M stars are used with their complimentary wires on the picture. In the reverse 68 lines on 2 columns, the Hardy Family is pressed into service to build up the Kildare series, plus the "predict" copy below.

(3) The flair for ingenious showmanship evidenced by bossman, Maurie Stahl, and Manager George Patterson, in the operation of the Rivoli, Rutherford, N. J., is here employed to sell the coming double-bill programs. The robust Stahl twins attractively hooked up to the twin theatres and twin-bills appeared instantaneous eye-catchers which were used to rivet attention to the signed copy incorporating the house policy and many of its services. Size: 144 lines on three columns.

(5 and 7) In order to properly present the double world premiere of "Union Pacific" in Omaha, Ted Emerson, Tri-States Omaha territory ad head, bent all efforts to sell as strongly the midnight premiere at the Orpheum, which followed the first showing at the Omaha, earlier in the evening. The 80 lines on two columns, here reproduced, is one of Lou Kozal's type displays that sold the midnight showing as importantly. The "Pygmalion" layout of 97 lines on three columns, by the Tri-States ad duo, stresses the influence of George Bernard Shaw in the copy and art without detracting from the story slant indicated by the two cuts of Wendy Hiller (before and after) and Leslie Howard, plus other attractions.

(6) The difficulty that a subsequent-run house might have in landing co-op advertising, is solved here by Manager Joe Baisch, Strand, Green Bay, Wis., who planted this smart two-column tiein layout incorporating titles of his two coming attractions, "Gunga Din" and "Honolulu" and store copy, each merchant ad running about 15 lines, single. Entire cost of the 194 lines on two columns, plus theatre ad at top, was paid for by the participating establishments.

TWINS and TWINS

ON April 28th, one year ago, we were blessed with the birth of twin boys. At the same time, I purchased two theatres, the twin "R's," Rivoli Theatre, Rutherford, New Jersey and the Regent Theatre, Kearny, New Jersey. ● I have tried to give the very best in entertainment and service. As a result, more people have attended the Rivoli Theatre during the past year than any other individual year of the previous ten. ● Every employee shares in the net results of the theatre plus their regular salaries. You can enjoy a cup of Martinson's coffee served with cookies gratis every evening by a congenial hostess at our coffee bar . . . (a Rivoli innovation!) Also free cigarettes in our smoking rooms. You can park your car in our special parking lot. ● All the biggest and best pictures produced are shown at the Rivoli, where you will always see bigger and better shows. ● The Rivoli Theatre is under ownership management ● It is your privilege to patronize the Rivoli Theatre, Rutherford, and our pleasure to entertain you.

Sincerely,
Maurie Stahl

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as offically given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

LIGHT AND NEW GLASS

Effectively used in a simple modern scheme for this front—that of the Liberty theatre in the seashore resort town of Cape May, N. J.—are three types of glass. With both Vitrolux and Louvrex applied in conjunction with lighting, glass and light provide the entire architectural effect. This is a remodeled front, with red and gray Vitrolite used for facing below the window area, and for vestibule finish. The name sign consists in a metal lamp box covered on both sides with translucent Vitrolux bearing opaque letters formed by fusing fine glass on the Vitrolux. The base of the box office is of round-moulded Louvrex, a pattern glass, which is illuminated from behind. The attraction board consists in panels of Vitrolux behind a metal frame having slots along the lower edges, into which prongs of the letters fit firmly, holding the letters, which are enameled metal stampings, upright. The attraction board is 14 feet wide and lighted by 40-watt lamps on 9-inch centers. The Liberty is operated by Hunt's Theatres of Wildwood, N. J.

Good Crop Prospects Speed Up Remodeling

AS MUCH remodeling and new theatre construction, and probably more, is expected in the central Middle West between now and fall. Theatre grosses are spotty, but there seems to be plenty of money for improvements and building. And brokers say it is next to impossible to find a theatre for sale.

A distributor who does not sell many second-runs points out that total possibilities in remodeling and construction three three seasons ago were about 375; two seasons ago, almost 400; and today around 425, or almost as many as the peak in 1929.

Both in Missouri (corn) and Kansas (wheat), crop prospects are the best they have been in several years. There has been plenty of rain early enough. Southwestern Kansas and the Dust Bowl area form "a garden spot" this year.

Northwest Central Missouri is getting oil play. No well has come in, but there is plenty of talk and leasing, which has helped business. Towns affected include Milan, Trenton, Kirksville, Chillicothe, Bethany, Albany, Maryville, Mound City. In several Kansas spots current oil play has a definite bearing on theatre development and remodeling.

One supply house reports a 15% increase over a year ago, covering sales of projection and sound equipment, lighting fixtures, carpets, and auditorium chairs, in about that order. Another dealer is under about 10%. But for all supply outlets business didn't really open up until April.

"The condition of the average theatre in the territory is such that 75 per cent could and should go ahead and make substantial improvements," commented one dealer. "A combination of current low grosses, uneasiness about the European situation, and inertia is holding them back. Many out in the territory have terrible sound and projection, but they like to think it is all right."

Many exhibitors are on the verge of doing something. Possibilities in the territory as a whole are considered brighter than in some time. A good sign is that exhibitors are willing to sit down with supply men and at least talk about remodeling and modernizing their equipment. A year ago they wouldn't listen. Today they're asking, "What's new"—in air-conditioning, seating, projection, and so on. As to actual projects, here are some that show the trend:

The Griffith-Dickinson Theatres, Inc., has an ambitious remodeling program for practically all its houses. The Uptown at Parsons, Kan., has just been remodeled and re-equipped with a cooling system, sound apparatus and some other items, and the Dickinson there now is going through the same process. Planned for the Dickinson in Osawatomie, Kan., are a new marquee, box office, front, cooling system, redecoration; for the Dickinson in Hiawatha, Kan., cooling, marquee, redecoration; Booth in Independence, Kan.,cooling, marquee and seating; and the Dickinson in Fayette, Mo., general re-equipping and refurbishing. The circuit will install sound systems where needed.

Mexico Building Booms To Meet Public Demand

SOMETHING of a boom in cinema construction has developed in Mexico and promises to go strong for at least another year or two. Motion pictures are now far out in front in amusements. Those exhibitors who have up-to-date houses and good bookings and do not attempt to charge more than 30c or so have no complaint to make about poor trade.

Mexican theatregoers are becoming more particular, even fastidious, about the cinemas they patronize. Smart exhibitors have been quick to note that trend. Building modern motion picture houses has taken the fancy of foreign and Mexican investors in Mexico despite the jitery times economically. That is because the right kind of cinema is certain to be a success from the start, and picture theatres are about the only business in 1939 Mexico that operates on a strictly cash basis.

William Oscar Jenkins of Los Angeles, late American consul in Puebla City, who made a fortune out of the Mexican sugar business, is the current No. 1 foreign investor in theatre construction. He started his outlay, reported to be around $1,000,000, in collaboration with seasoned Mexican exhibitors, with the commencement of six large houses, seating from 3,000 to 5,000, in Jalapa, Orizaba, Vera Cruz, Puebla City and Guadalajara. These cinemas are to open from about July to fall.

Additionally, plans have been approved for the construction of eight more theatres in the Federal District, which includes Mexico City. Five of them, with seatages of from 2,000 to 5,500 each, will be put up by the Emilio Azcarraza interests, operator of the deluxe Cine Teatro Alameda. A 6,000-seater, the largest cinema in the Mexican capital, is to be built by Granat Brothers, a circuit of 14 theatres in the Federal District, and two 4,000-seat houses will be erected by Fernando Garcia, operator of a circuit of six cinemas. One of the Garcia houses is to be a replica of Grauman's Chinese in Los Angeles.

Chicago's First Newsreel House on Landmark Site

CHICAGO is to have its first newsreel theatre. A deal involving a twenty-year lease for the Midwest News Reel Theatres, Inc., to build a newsreel theatre in the new Capitol Building, which will be under construction sometime this summer, has been completed. The theatre will seat 600.

Among stockholders of the new company, well known in New York financial circles, are Paul Felix Warburg, Angier Biddle Duke, Herbert Scheftel and Edward J. Reeves.

Rental over the twenty-year period will amount to $800,000, it is reported, in addition to a percentage of receipts.

Planning Your Seating for Both Greater Comfort and Better Vision

● New theatres should have all the advantages of modern seating; existing theatres can have them as readily when they are reseated—here's how

By BEN SCHLANGER

THE NEED FOR buying new chairs for your theatre may be apparent to you because of the worn and poor condition of the chairs, but there are additional reasons which may exist in your case which may make you realize the emphatic need for re-seating. A well thought out re-seating job may produce, by a re-arrangement of the seats, additional improvements for better vision, acoustics, more comfortable spacings and better traffic conditions. In some instances existing structural conditions may limit the improvements to be gained but experience has shown that the newer ideas in seating arrangements can in most instances create better seating within existing structures. In contemplating new theatre construction, the use of improved seating arrangements can result in approaching ideal conditions within economical limits.

There are now available a very wide variety of theatre chairs, in fact, there are enough types to confuse the purchaser if he does not understand the seating problem. There are two main guiding points which influence the selection. The first is the question of price and in this respect there are now available chairs of substantial, good construction from which a selection can be made to fit different budgets. The second point is to select a chair which will permit the maximum number of seats to be arranged comfortably and effectively in the area available for seats from which the screen performance can be viewed properly. The general structural and mechanical qualities of the chairs now made by the reliable manufacturers in all of the price ranges are good; however, care must be taken in making a selection of the type of upholstery and covering materials.

Obtainable are seats which retract and others which lift automatically and come down in the motion of sitting down—all to make passing between rows less troublesome. While these seats prove to have some advantages when installed with the proper spacings, the regular standard chair can prove satisfactory if the proper type and arrangement is used.

It is most advisable whenever it seems absolutely necessary to use second-hand chairs to make sure that the supporting standards and chair back slopes are suited to the floor slope and relative screen position in your theatre.

¶ Chair Selection

In selecting new chairs, consider each essential part of the chair carefully, beginning with the standards which support the chair. The legs of the standards should be pitched to suit the incline of the floor, changing the pitch of the legs for each row of chairs in which the pitch in the floor slope changes. This specification should be made part of the seating contract because improperly pitched legs will throw the pitch of the back of the chair away from the intended comfort angle. The seat of the chair should be of the flexible spring edge type, the upholstery having sufficient strength and yet be flexible enough to take the pressure of the weight of the body, but any flexibility which tends to encourage sidewise movement for the seated person should be avoided.

The backs of the chairs present special problems because their thickness and angle affect the back to back spacing and the angle of vision on to the screen. A luxurious thick spring upholstered and extremely pitched back may look like the last word in comfort but it may prove highly unadaptable to the theatre. Firstly, any back thickness greater than one inch is a pure waste of important and most valuable floor space in the auditorium depth desirable for seat positions. A padded back without any spring construction, fabric covered, can be made close to one inch thick to serve both as a most comfortable and attractive back. Spring upholstery requiring extra thicknesses are entirely unnecessary for comfort since there is no appreciable body pressure falling on the back of the chair to warrant it. Using a three inch thick back can result in a loss of as much as two rows in the seating depth needlessly.

¶ Fabric Selection

Ornamental end standards and ornamental fabric coverings of highly contrasted designs should be avoided because such design work is usually too quickly out of fashion. There are so many other ways to give an auditorium decorative warmth, thus making it unnecessary to depend on superfluous decorations on the seating for this purpose. A maximum of simplicity of surface appearance, relying on the richness of color and fabric texture is advisable.

In selecting coverings, the seat and back prove to present separate problems, although all coverings of both the seat and back should be non-irritating to the skin. The seat covering is subject to more frictional wear and therefore must be of a durable type, tightly woven fabric or leatherette. The back covering is not subject to such wear and it serves mostly for the warmth gained from the softness which the appearance of fabrics offer. Actually, the hard wood or other dense surface finish back properly shaped for good posture can be as comfortable as a fabric covered back, but superficially it does not appear to be so. Most acoustical engineers prefer to have the upholstered back.

Built in aisle lights in the end standards should be placed as close as possible to the level of the floor so that the illuminated bright spots will not disturb the persons already seated along the opposite side of the aisle.

¶ Row Spacing

In allotting the floor space to be given to each seat, consider first the width of the chair. A minimum width of 20 inches and a maximum width of 22 inches are recommended. Chairs 19 inches wide may be used comfortably if placed only at the aisles where extra elbow room is available. Widths greater than 22 inches do not prove of sufficient advantage to warrant the loss of the valuable seating space caused by such use.

A composite diagram showing the shape of the seating arrangement which will produce the maximum number of good viewing positions. Shape ratios are based on research work by the author and information gained from the Theatre Structure Survey recently made by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The shaded area shows where the staggered seats occur when the stagger system is used. See text for descriptions of ratios and determination of angles.

Determination of proper back to back spacing is subject to various considerations and contrary to general belief, 32 inches is not a distance which would be proper for most instances. For example, 30-, 31- and 32-inch spacings should never be used under any circumstances on upper levels of seating where stepped seating platforms are used. Then again, 30- and 31-inch spacings should not be used unless the chair back thicknesses are kept down to a minimum of ¾-inch and 1¼-inch respectively, also restricting the angle of the back of the chair to a maximum of 18 degrees. Thirty-two-inch spacings should not be used when the chair back thicknesses exceed 1½ inches and the chair back angle exceeds 20°. If greater thicknesses and angles are desired, extra back to back space should be allowed. The smallest back to back spacing desirable on stepped upper levels of seating is 33 inches, and with this dimension the back thickness should be a maximum of 1¼-inch and the angle of the back a maximum of 17°. Where balcony seat platforms are more than 7 inches above each other, still greater back to back spacing is advisable to overcome the encroachment of the slanting backs into the knee space behind. The Building Exits Code of the National Fire Protection Association calls for back to back spacing as follows: "The spacing of rows of seats from back to back shall be not less than 30 inches, nor less than 27 inches plus the sum of the thickness of the back and inclination of the back. There shall be a space of not less than 12 inches between the back of one seat and the front of the seat immediately behind it as measured between plumb lines." According to this code you would have to use a chair back of ½-inch thickness and a back slope of 2½-inches maximum to comply if 30-inch spacing is to be considered.

¶ The Seating Plan

Some of the important considerations in the floor plan arrangement of the seats are shown on the accompanying diagram. Distance D should equal at least the width of the projected picture on the screen. Distance C should in no case be more than 5½ times the width of the picture. In many instances the width of the picture can be adjusted to increase the seating depth when the picture is undersized to begin with. Distance B is best when it is approximately 3 times the width of the picture, this ratio can be smaller thereby reducing useful seating area, but an increase in this ratio will only produce undesirable seating areas. Distance A which locates the radius point for forming concentric arcs for the seating shape is determined by selecting the radius which will make the tangent of the seating curve as close to 90° as is practicable.

Reseating time is the opportune time for improving sightline conditions. It is entirely possible to introduce first row vision which enables the patron to see the entire picture whether someone is sitting in the row ahead or not. By a loss of as little as 2% of the total seating capacity a partial stagger seating plan can be introduced to achieve this. Sometimes the new arrangement can be efficient enough to make up for this loss. The shaded portion on the diagram shows the area in which the staggered seats occur. To each side of this area the seats do not have to be staggered because an automatic stagger occurs there. In front of this shaded area starting with about the 10th row of seats the stagger system does not function because the view between heads from this area does widen enough to take in the complete width of the picture.

Fortunately these front rows do not offer any serious problem in any case in obtaining sight lines. In new theatres the use of this stagger system can produce a floor slope which slopes downward and upward toward the screen with no more than 16 inches between the high and low points where the depth is equal to about 30 rows. This combination of staggered seating and the reverse floor developed by the author is now about to be used in several new projects and it is sure to simplify the sight line problem and floor slope construction greatly.

Bringing New Theatre Values To Saskatchewan—with Profit

• The fire that practically destroyed the Rex in Regina ended a local era. With the building of a modern Rex, attendance increased —and the remodeling of opposition theatres has begun

LAST FALL a fire, assumed to have been caused by a short circuit in the ceiling space, almost destroyed the Rex theatre in Regina and thereby brought about the first major theatre improvements the community has seen for ten years. The rear and side walls were all that was left standing. The Winnipeg firm of theatre architects—Green, Blankstein, Russell & Ham—were called in by the owner, J. D. Watson of Regina, to rebuild on these remains. A few weeks ago the theatre was re-opened, and it was immediately apparent to the numerous prairie theatre men who attended that a new pace had been set for western Canadian houses.

Features new to Regina, and for that matter, to most of western Canada, were the air-conditioning system, the "reversed" slope of the auditorium floor, the latest type projection and sound equipment, modern seating comfort, and a sleek design with a decoration scheme in pastel shades and having little or no ornamentation.

As before the fire, the management of the Rex is in the hands of H. A. Bercovich, on a lease from Mr. Watson, who, besides being the owner of the theatre, is also it chief projectionist.

In rebuilding the front of the Rex, stores which had stood on each side of the entrance were done away with. The vestibule was placed where one store had been, and the remaining space behind the auditorium, between the vestibule and the north side wall, was converted into a foyer. A staircase leads from the standee hall up to the second floor, where a women's lounge, the manager's office, and the projection room is located. A basement directly under the foyer and vestibule is divided into a men's room, and space for the steam boiler and other air treatment equipment.

The re-construction offered few architectural problems as only the rear and side walls were left standing. The only restriction was that the old outside dimensions, 50 foot frontage by 125 foot depth, had to be followed. A Barrett bonded roof with pitch and gravel surfacing; a curved maple floor; and a front wall of brick faced with crystalite stucco and black Vitrolite, all represent new construction. Steel beams were used wherever feasible to give strength to new parts and to support the old. The space between the roof and the ceiling was insulated with rock wool. Reconstruction cost $36,000, and new equipment $12,000.

The Front

To prevent the impression of squattiness, and also to carry the name sign, the south half of the front rises above the building proper in a false tower, below which is the manager's office. The lower front, to within a foot of the marquee, is faced with black Vitrolite, in which are recessed display frames with concealed lumiline lighting. A novelty in design is the outside box office, which is actually an extension of the inner boxoffice. The upper portion of the front is faced with crystalite stucco, the tower part being solid Sunflex Italian burnt sienna and the remainder a lighter shade

THE OWNER OF THE REX IS ITS CHIEF PROJECTIONIST

J. D. WATSON

THE owner of the Rex theatre in Regina, Saskatchewan, enjoys the distinction of being its chief projectionist, who leases the theatre to the man who operates it. He is J. D. Watson, who took up motion picture projection as early as 1907, and who since then has been more or less continuously associated with projection. He began operating a hand-cranked machine with acetylene light source; he is running Simplex E-7's in his new Rex now.

So seriously has the Rex outstripepd its local rivals in modernization that the Canadian Famous Players Corporation has already allotted $70,000 to be spent in renovating two of its three Regina houses. They are the Capitol, on which $60,000 will be spent, and the Grand. Work on these two theatres is expected to be completed before the summer is over.

The Rex is located one-half block north of the main street, in the heart of the business district. As a result it draws its patrons from no special social or economic class, although, at one time, due to the preponderance of western films on its programs, it had a wide following from neighboring farming districts. But with successive years of drouth, transient trade has dropped to a smattering, and now the Rex, like the other four local theatres, relies largely upon city trade.

This trade is fairly dependable, as, economically, Regina is the most stable of the cities on the Saskatchewan prairie drouthlands. It has two large industrial plants—the Imperial Oil Refinery, and the General Motors assembly plant. It is the distributing center for Canada's greatest wheat growing area, and consequently is the headquarters of innumerable wholesale and farm machinery firms. Also, since it is the capital city of the province, approximately one-fifth of its 53,000 population is employed in government work. These various sources of income make it a reliable theatre town, but up to now a backward one. Proof that a modern theatre was badly needed in Regina is the fact that the Rex broke all its previous attendance records with the second program it showed after its modernization.

of the same color. Block-like ornamentation of the upper edge, the north vertical edge, and extending on each side of the windows of the women's lounge, is stucco, painted in a yet lighter shade of burnt sienna. All trim consists of solid burnt sienna.

The marquee is triangular, with a three-line attraction board on each side. Along the lower and upper edges of the attraction boards are rows of flashing, white incandescent lamps. The name sign above the marquee is lighted by red neon tubes and trimmed with red neons. Below the name sign is a display frame, the south side carrying a poster of the current attraction, and the north side a black glass sign with white, frosted letters reading, "Always glad to see you." To correspond with the Vitrolite finish, the general color scheme of the marquee is black with white trim. Banks of white incandescents on the white enamelled soffit light the entrance. Altogether, the marquee carries 380 white incandescents. Additional lighting is from a floodlight which is located on an adjoining building.

The lobby is designed to make the box office conspicuous and at the same time to leave ample room for patrons to enter the foyer without interfering with those purchasing tickets. To achieve this dual purpose the south wall meets the west wall in a sweeping curve with the wide glass face of the box office forming the greater part of the curve. Two sets of wood-framed, glass panelled doors, with chrome trim, leading directly to the foyer, form the north side of the vestibule. The outside entrance doors of similar design, form the east, or outer wall, of the lobby.

The ceiling is flanged by two steps which follow the sweeping curve of the box office. A single chandelier of frosted glass plates, with convex metal bands and cadmium finish, and containing four incandescents, illuminates the vestibule. It is a specially designed Ruby lamp. The box office is lighted by a rim of incandescents behind frosted glass. Accessory heating is by concealed steam radiators on each side of the box office. The vestibule dado is Venetian red, side walls are shell pink and the ceiling and steps are sea green. Baseboard trim is black Vitrolite, and the doors are solid Italian burnt sienna.

The Foyer

The foyer is separated from the rear wall of the auditorium by a roped off hallway which leads to a front exit. The walls are Nile green plaster, the ceiling shell pink. Woodwork throughout is finished in Italian burnt sienna.

The ceiling is lighted by sunburst neon tubing behind a long ceiling plaque. Direct lighting of the foyer is by incandescents in Permaflectors with louvres for diffusion, one recessed in each end of the plaque. This particular feature was designed by the owner. Another Permaflector fixture lights the railed off area leading to the front exit.

Furnishings include an all-metal wall table, a circular mirror, grandfather clock, candy vendor, and metal chairs and settee with red and green leather seats and backs.

Carpeting throughout the theatre is Wilton with a brick-red ground and pattern in light green and black.

Accessory foyer heating is by concealed steam radiators with steel grilles, but like the rest of the building, the foyer can be heated as well as cooled by the ventilation system. A white porcelain drinking fountain is placed against a black Vitrolite panel at the north end of the roped off corridor.

The Auditorium

Stripes of various shades of Sunflex Italian burnt sienna are used throughout the auditorium with the exception of the dado, which is a flat, dark green. The darkest horizontal stripes on the side walls, the plaster pillars on each side of the exits, and all trim is of solid Italian burnt sienna. All other stripes, the checker-board ceiling, the ceiling plaster beam, the plaster rim above the dado, the exit casings, and the pillar cap bands, are done in lighter shades of burnt sienna.

Side walls and ceiling are constructed of Ten Test panelling, and the rear wall is panelled with perforated Celotex in a zigzag pattern.

Side wall lighting is by lumiline lamps behind plaques on slightly recessed vertical panels. There are three plaques along each side. Along the ceiling beam are twelve recessed regular incandescents behind frosted glass, with six such fixtures to each side. Five regular incandescent lamps in Permaflectors, recessed in the curve of the cealing beam, light the stage. The screen opening extends to the ceiling, curtained in green velour.

The seating capacity is 660 with all chairs on a single floor arranged in three banks with two aisles. The floor is the "reversed slope" type, the rear inclining downward from the rear, flattening out, then inclining slightly upward to the first row. Ceiling height varies only from 25 feet at the front of the auditorium to 22 feet at the last row. Distance from the last row to the screen is 100 feet, while rows are spaced 34 inches back-to-back. Chairs average 20 inches in width, have padded backs covered in mohair in a dark green matching the dado, spring seats covered in black leatherette, and end standards of a modern pattern in the same colors.

Conditioned air is introduced into the auditorium through ceiling grilles behind diffusing plaques, and is exhausted through mushrooms, two to each row. Cooling is by passing the air over coils containing city water, which is normally about 40° in temperature. The system, which is thermostatically controlled, provides heating by steam from a coal-fired boiler.

For stage presentations, and for functions where prominent persons are guests, plug-ins to local radio stations are wired on the stage and in the foyer.

Projection

The projection room is constructed of concrete over steel studs. The interior finish color is green—a medium shade for the dado, pale green for the ceiling and a yet lighter shade for the walls. The trim is Italian burnt sienna, and floor linoleum is dark green. The projection room proper is 12 feet deep, 16 feet wide, and 10 feet high. Adjoining the projection room on the right is a small room for rewinding. A recreation room, with desk, table, bookstand, telephone and radio, is provided to the right of the rewind compartment. Another small compartment, located to the left of the projection room, houses the rectification equipment. Projection and sound equipment consists in two Simplex E-7's with Peerless Magnarc lamps and Super-Cinephor lenses, and Northern Electric (Mirrophonic) soundheads mounted on Super-Simplex bases. Rectification is by two G. E. copper oxide rectifiers.

Projection equipment was installed by the Canadian Theatre Supply Company, Winnipeg, while the sound equipment was supplied by Northern Electric Company.

Other equipment, and furnishings, consist in curtain control equipment by Ozone-Air, Inc., Grand Rapids, Mich.; auditorium seating by the International Seat Corporation, Union City, Ind.; Chicago Cinema rewinders, Thide changeovers, Neumade ticket chopper, and Bausch & Lomb Super-Cinephor projection lenses.

Women's Lounge

The women's lounge, located directly behind the projection gallery, is finished in plaster with ivory ceiling, peach walls and Italian burnt sienna woodwork. Lighting is by whitebracket lumilines. Furnishings are much the same as in the foyer and include similar style chairs and settee, all-metal wall table, circular mirror flanked by lumiline brackets, one on each side, and ruby red broadloom carpet.

New Drive-In Theatres Make Total at Least 20

ARRIVAL of this year's summer season has brought the expected increase in the number of drive-in theatres. Seven new automobile theatres have already opened or are under construction, bringing the total number of such enterprises in the United States to twenty, and reports of tentative plans indicate that this figure will be substantially increased.

The eight new drive-in theatres operate under license from Park-In Theatres, Inc., of Camden, N. J., employing that firm's ramp system, which is part of the construction of most of the drive-in theatres now operating. A few other outdoor theatres accommodating automobiles may also be considered as belonging to this division of film exhibition.

Of the seven new licensed theatres, George Wilbey of Atlanta, has one under construction in Savannah, Ga., and plans two more in Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla.; E. M. Loew of Boston, has opened one near Baltimore; K. C. Hooker and C. M. Clark plan one near Phoenix, Ariz., another is projected by undisclosed interests for a site near Pittsburgh, while the California Drive-In Theatres Corporation, operating the San Val and Pico park-in shows in the Los Angeles area, plans to open a third drive-in theatre this summer.

Before recently reopening, the drive-in theatre near Grosse Pointe, Detroit suburb, was equipped with speakers along each ramp, one for each car space, to meet complaints of neighboring residents over the loudness of the former screen speakers.
